NAZIS TAPPED F.D.R.'S PHONE, SAYS GENERAL

Marshall Explains Use of Cable

BY PHILIP DODD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8—President Roosevelt's frequent and supposedly secret telephone conversations with Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain before and during the war were tapped by German agents, Gen. Marshall, former army chief of staff, told the Pearl Harbor investigating committee today.

Gen. Marshall testifies thru table microphone.

"I talked with the President not once but several times to urge him to be more careful in using the scrambler phone," Marshall told the committee. "The apparatus was private but not secret. We had made tests which showed conversations could be intercepted."

Bullitt Talks Tapped

Marshall said it was found the President's conversations with Ambassador Bullitt [ambassador to France] by telephone had been tapped and that the army feared that the Germans similarly were eavesdropping on conversations between Churchill and the President.

The scrambler telephone, Marshall explained, is a machine that renders a telephone conversation a "hash" of meaningless sounds—"It sounds like Chinese," he said—and unscrambles the conversation at the other end. A scrambler that defied interception was not developed until after the United States was at war, Marshall said.

Quizzed by Senator

Discussion of the scrambler telephone came up at today's inquiry into the Pearl Harbor disaster when Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.] asked why the telephone was not used the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, to warn Gen. Short, army commander in Hawaii, that Japanese action against the United States was imminent.

Marshall said the Japanese would have "grasped at any straw" to prove the United States had committed an overt act and that utmost secrecy was required in the message to Short, to avoid letting the Japanese know, thru their possible interception, that we were breaking their code. [Information of the Japanese intention to sever diplomatic relations at 1 p. m., Washington time, Dec. 7, had come from our interception of Japanese diplomatic messages.]

Signal Officers' Advice

The warning was sent to Short by commercial cable. Marshall said, after signal officers had assured him there would be a minimum of delay.

"We may have ruled out the telephone, I am not sure," Marshall said.

"How could use of the phone be an overt act?" asked Ferguson.

Marshall said the Japanese would use any pretext to accuse the United States of an overt act. The cable was safer, he said. Marshall then gave his explanation of the dangers of using the "scrambler."

The cabled warning to Short did not reach him until long after the Japanese attack.

"Had you ever talked with Gen. Short by scrambler phone?" Ferguson asked.

"I do not recall."

MacArthur Is Mentioned

"Did you talk by phone with Gen. MacArthur in the first seven days of December, 1941?"

"I don't recall that I ever talked to Gen. MacArthur by phone."

Marshall told the committee he "admired" the action of Lt. Gen. L. T. Gerow, former chief of the war plans division, who told the committee this week he would accept responsibility for failure to give additional warnings to Short between Nov. 27 and Dec. 7, 1941.

However, Marshall asserted that

432 Mile Pace Set by Bomber in New Record

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—An experimental bomber, the Douglas XB-42, today winged across the continent in 5 hours 17 minutes 34 seconds, cutting 46 minutes off the previous west to east record.

[Associated Press Wirephoto]

The two engine plane with pusher propellers averaged 432 miles per hour on the 2,295 mile flight from Long Beach, Cal., to Rolling field.

The XB-42 took off from Long Beach at 12:22 p. m. [Chicago time] and roared across the Bolling field control tower at 5:39.34 p. m. [Chicago time].

The timing is done from the moment the wheels begin rolling on the take-off until the plane crosses the field, to avoid delays because of other traffic around an airport.

The previous unofficial record for the distance was 6 hours and 3 minutes. The fastest transcontinental train time is 58 hours 45 minutes.

Carries 1,400 Gallons Fuel

It carried only two army pilots, Lt. Col. H. E. Warden and Capt. Glenn W. Edwards of Wright field, O. The plane had a gross weight of more than 34,000 pounds with 1,400 gallons of fuel.

The bomber has no counter-part among familiar military types. Its two Allison 12 cylinder in-line engines are inside the fuselage. They transmit power to the two Curtiss propellers thru long drive shafts.

The plane was helped by tail winds, the record attempt having been put off from time to time in recent weeks to await favorable weather.

A Streamlined Craft

The XB-42 is completely streamlined, without engine nacelles or external gun turrets to interrupt the airflow. It has a wing spread of 70 feet 6 inches, a length of 53 feet 8 inches, and weighs 19,149 pounds empty. It will carry up to four tons of bombs as far as 5,000 miles.

Because of its design, the plane is equipped with a special emergency procedure for bail-outs. The propeller installation can be blown off by a special detonation switch, eliminating the possibility of crew members falling into the propellers in bailing out.

GUILTY PLEA HALTS FURNACE SLAYING TRIAL

Life Term Imposed by Agreement

BY FRANK CIPRIANI

Joseph Nischt, stoical south side janitor, broke down yesterday in the midst of his trial in the Criminal court for the furnace murder of Mrs. Rose Michaelis, changed his plea from not guilty to guilty, and was immediately sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Charles E. Byrne. The sentence was recommended by State's Atty. Tuohy.

The guilty plea dramatically ended a trial that might have made legal history, for the state was seeking a conviction without the existence of the victim's body.

It is thru a victim's body that the corpus delicti, or fact of death by criminal means, is conventionally established in a murder case.

State Had Evidence

The state contended that Nischt had destroyed Mrs. Michaelis' body in the furnace at 6855 Clyde av., where she lived and he was janitor, but to support this had only a few hairpins, a house key, a shoe heel; the fact that Mrs. Michaelis had not been seen since Feb. 28, the date of the crime, and some scientific evidence.

"God came close to me, and guided me in confessing," the admitted killer whimpered a few minutes after his return to the bull pen. That, plus undoubted fear of the electric chair, impelled the 31 year old Nischt to toss aside his pretense of innocence and to throw himself upon the mercy of the court.

An hour later, however, he was voicing doubts that he really was guilty.

Feared Cross-Examination

Nischt's surprising change of pleas followed tearful conferences with his lawyers, James M. Burke and Robert E. Romano; his wife, Florence, and his father, Anton. All were stunned. Specifically, it developed that Nischt dreaded to testify and face cross-examination by Assistant State's Attys. Blair L. Varnes and Clement D. Cody.

What contributed to the undoing of Nischt were several formal and informal confessions which he made last March. His lawyers challenged them as having been obtained by police brutality and therefore were inadmissible. Without them the state's case would collapse. The jury was excused, and Judge Byrne on Friday began a preliminary hearing to determine whether the confessions were legal.

Half a dozen witnesses testified, but two of them, Detective Emmett Murphy of Woodlawn station and Sgt. John Ascher of the homicide section, jolted Nischt with their stories of what he told them.

Winces at Testimony

He followed their every word. He winced when they recounted how his victim's husband, Milton Michaelis, and daughter, Mrs. Pearl Weiss, had tearfully confronted him.

"Mr. Michaelis pleaded with Nischt to tell him what he had done to his wife," Sgt. Ascher testified. "He said, 'Joe, we've been such good friends. We played cards together. You ate at our table. I got cigarets for you when they were hard to get. Why did you do it, Joe? Why, why, why!'

"Nischt answered, 'I'm sorry, Mike, I don't know why.'

"Then when Mrs. Weiss cried and told Nischt they could not hold a funeral for her mother without her body, Nischt replied, 'I burned her in the furnace.'"

Ascher and Murphy gave identical stories. They insisted Nischt's confessions were obtained without duress. During their testimony, Nischt occasionally whispered to his lawyers.

Counsel Asks Recess

CAN HE CATCH HER?

Lance Splices 'Blue' Baby's Life Thread

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 8 (AP) — A mother's two year search for some one who could save her "blue" baby from death apparently met success today on an operating table at the Johns Hopkins hospital.

Judy Hackman

Dr. Alfred Blalock, professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins, operated on Judy Hackman, 2, of Buckley, Wash., in an attempt to avert surgically what had once seemed inevitable—Judy's death from insufficient oxygen in her blood.

Period of Crisis

Altho hospital officials emphasized that the 48 hours following the operation's end at 10:45 a. m. were a period of crisis, they said that as far as could be determined now the operation was successful. Dr. Blalock said the operation went "quite well" and Judy was "doing very nicely."

The child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hackman, waited in an ante room while Dr. Blalock operated. Fearful of shattered hopes, they hesitated to assume that now Judy was going to be well.

The baby arrived here on a plane Monday. The so-called "Blalock operation" performed on Judy was first done Nov. 29, 1944, after its discovery by Dr. Blalock and Dr. Helen B. Taussig, head of the cardiac clinic at the Harriet Lane home for invalid children at Johns Hopkins.

Less Time Than Usual

The operation began at 9 a. m. today and took less time than usual. Special clamps devised by Dr. Blalock and an assistant simplified the surgeon's task of augmenting the deficient supply of blood to Judy's lungs by severing a good artery and attaching it to a defective one.

Once it had been done, the surgeon's fingers could feel blood coursing thru the new route to her lungs. By 10:45, her right lung [collapsed during the operation] was expanded again, the incision sewed and Judy on her way back to her room.

She was placed in an oxygen tent to help her thru the post-operation crisis.

INDIANA BABY BETTER

Janice Marie Hayden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hayden of 1709 E. Michigan st., Michigan City, Ind., was reported yesterday to be slightly improved from a cold which it had been feared might delay her scheduled departure this week for Baltimore, Md., for an examination by Dr. Alfred Blalock.

The Hayden child, who will be 3 next Feb. 8, has been described as a "blue baby" suffering from a heart ailment which restricts the supply of oxygen to the blood. A fund to permit the child to be sent to Baltimore has been raised locally.

According to present plans, she will be taken to Baltimore Friday and will be examined Dec. 18 by Dr. Blalock, who will determine whether there is a chance that a "Blalock operation" may save her life.

Hope for Boy Rises

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 8 (AP)—The parents of John Curran, a "blue" baby growing steadily weaker due to a deformed heart, also gained hope from news of the operation performed on Judy Hackman.

Curran said if a Blalock operation could give his son "a chance" he hoped to take the child to Baltimore "at the earliest moment."

TAXPAYERS SOON MAY SEE BRIGHTER SIDE OF DINGY CITY HALL

The city council acted yesterday to brighten up the city hall by putting in lighted show windows along the Randolph st. side.

It authorized Mayor Kelly to appoint a committee to look into the matter, and to take up with county authorities the matter of installing similar show windows in the county's half of the building. Business men along Randolph st. have complained to the council, it was explained, that the unlighted city and county building stands as a dead spot along the city's Rialto.

Ald. Kells [28th] suggested exhibits to interest the public in civic affairs might be placed in the windows.

5 Die, 6 Hurt When Express Train Hits Bus

Five persons were killed and at least six others injured early today when the Erie railroad's Chicago-bound Pacific Express passenger train and a Schappi Bus Line, Ind., bus collided on the Burnham av. crossing near 139th st., Burnham.

One of the dead was a railroad engineman. All the other casualties were passengers in the bus, bound from Hegewisch to Hammond, Ind. Among the injured was the bus driver, Charles Martin, 25, of Hammond. All the injured were removed to St. Margaret's hospital, Hammond.

Reports Gates Raised

Martin told Ernest Schappi, part owner of the bus line, that he stopped the bus behind two other buses when the crossing gates were lowered for an east bound frate train. The gates were raised after the train cleared the crossing, Martin said, and the buses started up.

The first two had cleared the crossing and Martin said his bus was half way over the tracks before he saw the approaching westbound train. He speeded up, he said, but the rear of the bus was struck.

Six Injured in Hospital

Three of those killed were pronounced dead upon arrival at the hospital. County highway and Chicago police squads removed six injured persons to the hospital. The bodies of a man and a woman were removed to Czechanski's undertaking rooms at 248 155th pl., Calumet City.

Raymond Czerwinski, 22, of 437 Garfield av., Calumet City, a bus passenger, corroborated Martin's account of the accident. Standing near the front door, Czerwinski escaped injury as the train demolished the rear end of the bus.

WARNS PARENTS OF KIDNAPED BOY TO 'GET IT READY'

Chelsea, Mass., Dec. 8 (AP)—The fifth mysterious telephone call received by the parents of Ronald Carlan, who was kidnaped Nov. 28, tonight admonished them to "get it ready"—interpreted by police to mean ransom money.

Police Lt. John J. Kirby said police are convinced that the callers are cranks or demented persons having no connection with the kidnaping.

Mrs. Rose Carlan, the child's mother, told police a woman called, said, "Get it ready," and hung up before she could reply.

CIO Heads Rip Truman Plea; Call for Fight

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 8 (AP)—The CIO United Auto Workers' high council in the General Motors strike today turned thumbs down on President Truman's proposal to end the strike and urged a drive against his recommended labor legislation.

Terming the President's request that the strikers return to work "ill advised and undeserved," the union's General Motors council also "vigorously condemned" his proposed legislation as "vicious" and "anti-labor."

Thus was emphasized a CIO break with President Truman as the auto union's rank and file membership was advised to continue the nation-wide walkout in General Motors factories which has kept 213,000 workers idle 18 days. Striking General Motors locals will vote on the council's recommendations.

Asks Help in Fight

The council recommended that "we mobilize our full political power" in an effort to block Mr. Truman's proposed legislation.

In a resolution the council asked help from "local unions, individual members, and every one we can mobilize to impress upon the President and the congress our opposition to this vicious, anti-labor legislation."

The President's legislation would set up fact finding groups in major strikes to make public reports. While these groups were operating, strikes and lockouts would be outlawed. "Public opinion" would influence settlements, the President suggested.

CIO heads assailed Mr. Truman's ideas as contrary to labor's right to strike and asserted that there would be nothing to prevent the "packing" of fact finding bodies.

In Washington the White House said there would be no comment now on the refusal of the council to approve Mr. Truman's back to work request. Labor Secretary Schwellenbach indicated he believed negotiations would progress hopefully between the striking auto workers and General Motors corporation.

Picket Motorcade Staged

The council's verdict in this new chapter in the union's fight with General Motors for a 30 per cent wage rate increase came shortly after a mass demonstration in the city by fellow unionists in a gigantic motorcade "picket line."

In a separate announcement discussing President Truman's plan to name a fact finding group to inquire into the dispute, the council stated its position as follows:

"If the General Motors workers were to return to work now as requested by President Truman, General Motors management would in all probability treat the fact finding board with the same scant courtesy it has extended to the President, and would fail to furnish that body with any relevant facts worthy of the name."

Previously the council had rejected General Motors' last 10 per cent offer, roughly estimated to average 13½ cents an hour.

Calls It Ill Advised

The council said President Truman's proposal was "ill advised and undeserved" because it came "after months of conscientious effort by the union" to settle its wage dispute with General Motors.

President Truman's appeal to workers' patriotism was described as "unfortunate and unfair." The council said the presence of "thousands" of war veterans in the picket lines answered "implied impeachment of our patriotism."

Mr. Truman was urged to read the transcript of General Motors-union negotiations and "persuade General Motors to begin to bargain collectively in good faith."

"We conclude," the council's resolution said, "that a proposal to go back to work with no settlement of our demands, with no commitments that they would ever be settled, with no undertaking by the corporation to accept any of the recommendations that might be made would be unacceptable under any circumstances."

The ultimate answer to Mr. Truman lay with the rank and file membership of locals in more than 20 states.

Hundreds of Carloads

Coming out in vocal support of the G. M. strikers' demand for a 30 per cent wage rate increase were hundreds of carloads of unionists from the big Ford local 600, who drove around and around G. M.'s office building for nearly an hour.

A holiday atmosphere prevailed. Auto horns set up a clamor. Unionists standing on running boards shouted and waved at placards on the cars. Police exchanged banter with the demonstrators.

G.O.P. ORDERS 7 TO CHART WAR UPON NEW DEAL

Committee Follows Green's Keynote

BY ROBERT HOWARD

The Republican national committee, amid repeated warnings against the diplomatic fumblings of the Roosevelt-Truman New Deal, acted yesterday to create a special committee of seven to keep party policies in line with the growing public sentiment for Americanism. Resolutions adopted at a meeting in the Stevens hotel were hailed as a concession to Gov. Green's keynote demand for aggressiveness and no-compromise in fighting the New Deal.

Gov. Blue of Iowa [left], Sen. Hart of Connecticut [center], and National Chairman Brownell.

Chairman Herbert Brownell Jr. said he would soon appoint the committee on development of national policy, charged with keeping abreast of grass roots sentiment. Republicans from the midwest had wanted the meeting to take a more positive stand than the congressional declaration of principles adopted in Washington, D. C., last week.

Congressional Draft Accepted

Rather than repudiate the action of the Republican senators and representatives, the committee indorsed their document as a statesmanlike declaration. It denounced New Deal radicalism, but was criticized as having hedged on some issues.

Sen. Hart of Connecticut, a former admiral who commanded the Asiatic fleet, warned that potential trouble with Russia is "our greatest international concern" and recommended that the United States stay out of European political affairs as much as possible. He ridiculed suggestions that atomic bomb secrets be turned over to Russia thru a world wide New Deal.

Chairman Brownell, a New Yorker, commended the allied nations organization, but he also denounced Truman diplomacy as un-American, expensive, and dangerous. Like Hart, Brownell spoke at a Palmer House banquet that closed the committee's two day session.

Green's Speech Main Topic

Republicans talked most about Gov. Green's Friday speech in which he welcomed the committee to Chicago with a demand for strong leadership. His position was that Republicans would gain votes by fighting the New Deal, as they have failed to carry Presidential elections by trying to copy it. The Illinois leader also warned against post-war diplomatic reverses.

Rep. Halleck of Indiana, chairman of the congressional campaign committee, supported Brownell's prediction that the G. O. P. would win control of both houses of congress next year.

Schroeder to Act at Once

Werner W. Schroeder, Illinois committeeman who was credited with a leading role in the step toward midwestern recognition, said he would immediately ask Illinois county chairmen and other groups to submit views to the national policy group. The chairmen last week had complained about seaboard domination of the party.

"We must not let Europe's affairs loom too largely in our own picture," Hart said in his address, "and we must not exhaust ourselves too greatly in alleviating their plight. To my mind, we should become involved in the political problems inside Europe just as little as possible."

Russia "Great Problem"

Russia, he continued, "constitutes our greatest international concern at this time and possibly for some time to come." China is also a potential trouble spot requiring expert diplomacy, he said.

Hart discussed proposals that the

FURNACE KILLER PLEADS GUILTY; TRIAL HALTED

Sentence to Life in Prison Is Imposed

pered again. Apparently startled, the defense lawyers asked a recess.

The unexpected break in the case had occurred. Burke and Romano talked with Nischt in the bullpen. He told them he could not stand any more, that he feared to face the court, jury, and cross examination, that he was guilty. It was the first admission he had made to them. Burke called in Nischt's wife and his father.

Nischt put his arms around his father, and cried.

"It's true, pa, I did it," he said. "I put her in the furnace. My conscience bothers me. I couldn't face the courtroom."

It was hastily agreed that Nischt would plead guilty if the death penalty were waived.

Agree to Life Sentence

State's Atty. Tuohy, his first assistant, Wilbert F. Crowley, and Cody and Varnes were called into Judge Byrne's chambers. Tuohy agreed to recommand a life sentence, which he added, was not binding on the court. A few minutes later court was convened. Atty. Burke spoke.

"At about 11:15 a. m." Burke said, "Nischt indicated a desire to have a conference with Mr. Romano and myself. He told us he did not care to take the witness stand, was conscience stricken, and could not face the court and jury. For the first time since I became his counsel, he told me that he had killed Mrs. Michaelis.

"I told Nischt that if he did not testify there might be dire consequences, and that if he did, and should not be able to cope with the skill of the state's attorneys and be exposed in untruths, the result also might be fatal. He said he was guilty.

Advises Guilty Plea

"I told him that as a lawyer I had a duty to society, and I advised him under the circumstances to plead guilty, and trust to the mercy of the court."

Nischt, sleek haired and pale, and wearing the same green suit he had had on since the trial started two weeks ago, was called before the bench. State's Atty. Tuohy then recommended the life sentence. The jury of eight women and four men was called in at this point, and a juror was withdrawn. All 12 appeared dumfounded.

Judge Byrne, white haired and in black robe, cautioned Nischt that in spite of the life sentence recommendation the court could still impose the death penalty. "Do you still plead guilty?" he asked. Nischt mumbled "Yes." "The court then sentences you to the penitentiary for life," pronounced Judge Byrne.

Must Have Been Crazy, Says Wife.

That was all. At the rear of the court Nischt's wife and his sister, Marie, ran out weeping. "He must have been crazy," his wife sobbed. "I can't believe it." His sister expressed relief that "he isn't going to die." In the bullpen, Nischt was telling reporters how he got religion.

"I can honestly say that God came to me and guided me into making this confession," he said. "I'm not particularly religious, but God came closer to me in this trial than ever before. I still wonder if I did it, but now my conscience feels free."

Later, with Warden Frank Sain at his side, Nischt said he wasn't sure that he killed Mrs. Michaelis. "If I did it, there's sorrow," he conceded. "I don't remember anything. I was drinking and overworking. I had never hurt any one before. If I'm guilty I will never expect any sympathy from anybody—if I'm guilty."

Tuohy Certain of Conviction

State's Atty. Tuohy said that he was agreeable to a life sentence because even tho he was certain of a conviction there were unusually difficult problems involved, such as the corpus delicti. The state was prepared, however, he said, to establish that thru scientific experiments and evidence. Tuohy lauded his assistants, Cody and Varnes, for their work.

Tuohy is the first active prosecutor in Cook county in 20 years, the last having been Robert E. Crowe, now a judge, who personally prosecuted many cases, notably the Loeb-Leopold case. Tuohy has made it a point to be in court on all important cases, and to consult with his assistants.

In the last two weeks he spent considerable time in court in the Nischt case and in the Donald J. Cook case, which also resulted in a guilty plea in the midst of trial.

STRIKERS WANT AID FIRED FOR LOSS OF JOBS

Holland, Mich., Dec. 8 (AP)—A group of striking AFL teamsters today requested the removal of an international union official who, they charge, called the strike which cost them their jobs.

Morris F. Lanham, spokesman for 45 union drivers, said a telegram was sent to Daniel Tobin, international president of the teamsters' union, asking that steps be taken for "immediate elimination from authority" of Tom Burke, international representative.

The drivers said the strike called against the Holland Express company Monday "has put the express company out of business and all of us out of a job."

John Cooper, company president, announced after the strike began that he was going to sell his equipment and interstate trucking permits to "anyone who wants to buy." The strike developed after some of the company's nonunion drivers took shipments thru picket lines at a wholesale grocery house here.

RECORDS CREDIT MIDWAY VICTORY TO LAND PLANES

Jap Fleet Routed Before Navy Craft Arrived

BY WALTER TROHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8—Army, navy, and marine records today supported the Japanese version of the battle of Midway which credited the victory to land based aircraft.

In Tokyo, Capt. Toshikazu Chmae, former chief of the naval operations section of the navy ministry, earlier in the week disclosed details of what the Japs regard as one of the two decisive naval battles of the war, the other being the battle of the Philippine sea.

The operations officer said the turning back of 11 battleships and 76 other combat craft wrecked Jap plans to effect a compromise peace by holding a strong line of Pacific bases. He intimated the Jap fleet was destroyed and routed by land planes before carrier planes reached the scene.

Backed by U. S. Records

Official American records largely support the Jap estimate of the battle, altho carrier planes did come into the conflict in its final stages. However, there is no reliable estimate of the damage these planes did as compared with accurate data on the terrific blows given by land planes.

It has been disclosed in the Pearl Harbor investigation that the United States had broken the Japanese code and it has been assumed the American forces were aware of the Jap attempt to occupy Midway Island with 3,500 marines and infantry men, who were being carried in 16 transports attached to the attacking fleet.

Enemy 800 Miles Away

Around 9 p. m. June 3, 1942, several navy patrol planes reported a strong force of enemy ships about 800 miles off Midway. Nine army Flying Fortresses based on Midway were ordered to attack. The Jap force approached in five columns. The army bombers scored hits on one cruiser, one transport, and other craft.

Later four navy Catalina flying boats hit the same enemy group by moonlight, scoring torpedo hits on large ships, one of which was believed to have been sunk.

Near dawn the next day several groups of army medium and heavy bombers and marine dive bombers and torpedo planes took off from Midway bases and struck the fleet. These planes hit heavily.

One Carrier Hit

Four army torpedo bombers attacked two carriers, hitting one. Two planes failed to return. Six marine torpedo planes attacked against heavy odds, scoring a hit on one ship. Only one of the seaplanes returned to the base.

Sixteen marine dive bombers scored three hits on a cruiser. Only half of these returned.

Sixteen Flying Fortresses carried out high level bombing attacks, leaving a carrier smoking and scoring other hits.

Meantime, Jap carrier planes attacked Midway. They were engaged by heavily outnumbered marine fighters. The marine force shot down 40 enemy planes and damaged others. Not one plane was caught grounded at Midway.

Japs Shift Course

The attacks on the enemy fleet by land based planes caused the Jap invasion fleet to shift its course. It was estimated that perhaps a quarter of the fleet was damaged, altho army and navy records differ on this point.

American carrier planes were dispatched to where it was expected the enemy would be found. The change in course forced them to search and at length return without having found or engaged the enemy. Fuel ran short. Some planes were forced down at sea, most of these being rescued later.

Another group of carrier borne fighters, dive bombers, and torpedo planes found the Jap fleet. Fifteen torpedo planes of this group, the gallant torpedo squadron 8, attacked and radioed reports of hits, but the extent of damage done by these planes was never known because none returned.

Land based planes and carrier planes then operated against the Japs simultaneously. Just before sundown, Flying Fortresses delivered a most destructive attack on the crippled Jap forces.

During the afternoon, Jap attacks on American ships were beaten off by fighters, with a heavy toll of Jap planes.

At sundown the United States forces had won mastery of the air. Two Jap carriers sank before morning. Two battleships had been damaged severely. Cruisers, destroyers, and other craft had been damaged. On the American side the carrier Yorktown was put out of action.

On the morning of June 5 the enemy was in full retreat. Flying Fortresses contacted the enemy and bombarded a cruiser so that when last seen she was listing. A second wave of these planes hit another cruiser.

Hampered by Weather

About noon, land based marine planes located a damaged enemy cruiser and scored a hit. In the afternoon the Flying Fortresses again returned to score three direct hits on a heavy cruiser.

Efforts of carrier based craft to strike at the enemy were hampered on this day by local bad weather. On the morning of June 6, carrier planes attacked a group of Jap ships and scored hits on two cruisers, sank one destroyer, and hit another.

In the battle the Japs lost four aircraft carriers, three battleships were damaged, two cruisers were sunk, four cruisers were damaged, three destroyers were sunk, several destroyers were damaged, three transports were damaged, and at least one was sunk. The Japs lost 275 planes and about 5,000 men.

The battle of Midway is notable in sea annals because not a shot was exchanged by surface vessels. The decisive victory was won by aircraft and largely by land based aircraft.

Police Round Up 4; 1 Is Wounded in Gun Fight

With five members of a 10 man robbery mob accounted for, two by gunfire, detective bureau police pressed their efforts yesterday to round up the five other men.

In an exchange of gunfire with detectives Friday night at the rear of 2216 Kimball av., Christ Perres, 27, of Joliet, was killed and Lawrence [Tiny] Mazzanars, 34, of 3402 Lyndale st., was shot in the left shoulder. Both are ex-convicts named as members of the mob by Renoro Lolli, 39, of 6311 Eggleston av., when he was arrested Friday.

Only One Not an Ex-Convict

Also held for operations with the gang, which specialized in handbook and pay roll robberies, are James J. Kelly, 37, of 2813 Warren av., and Richard Todd, 39, of 1824 Adams st., seized early yesterday in his home.

Chief of Detectives Walter Storms said the other men sought are Virgil and Neal [Monk] Summers, brothers, of Mount Vernon, Jefferson county; Gus Mazzanars, believed to be a brother of the wounded man; a man known only as Steve the Greek, and Grover Dullard, a reputed handbook operator and the only one of the 10 who is not an ex-convict.

Attorneys for Kelly appeared yesterday before Chief Justice Harold G. Ward in Criminal court to seek his release on a writ of habeas corpus. When Chief Storms pointed out the extent of the gang's operation and told of the arsenal they used, Judge Ward gave police until 11 a. m. tomorrow to book or release Kelly. A previous request in behalf of Lolli was continued to the same time.

Planned $50,000 Pay Roll Theft

Sgt. John Hanrahan of the robbery detail said the men had planned a $50,000 pay roll robbery at Mars, Inc., candy manufacturers at 2019 N. Oak Park av. Police recovered a submachine gun, a sawed off shotgun, and half dozen revolvers and pistols which the robbers used.

Lolli told police that various members of the gang took part in the following robberies: Dave Russell's handbook, second floor at 226 N. Clark st., $4,700, Nov. 28; handbook at 118 Washington st., Waukegan, $10,000, Nov. 8; Art Frasik's tavern, 202 N. Clark st., $1,800, last July; and a robbery this fall in Mount Vernon where $6,500 and a $1,000 diamond ring were taken.

George Preston, 208 Madison st., Waukegan, and Tommy Thomas, 1410 22d st., North Chicago, two victims in the Waukegan robbery, late yesterday identified Lolli and tentatively identified Kelly as two of the robbers. They pointed out photographs of Neal Summers as another of the men.

FARM NEIGHBORS HELP STRING UP POLIO LIFE LINE

Sikeston, Mo., Dec. 8 [Special]—A crew of linemen, augmented by neighbor volunteers, worked thru the night tonight stringing wires to bring electricity to two children suffering from infantile paralysis.

H. M. Zarecor, superintendent of the Scott county cooperative association of the rural electrification administration, said the job probably will be completed by noon tomorrow.

The infantile paralysis victims are Stephen, 3, and David, 9 months, children of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Gaines, who live in a farm house three-quarters of a mile from the nearest power line.

Gaines said his children were stricken with the disease Oct. 8 and were treated in a hospital at Cape Girardeau, Mo., until Thanksgiving day, when they were brought home. Stephen dragged one foot, he said, and the baby apparently was without control over one leg.

Physicians told Gaines that treatment with electrical heating pads was essential to the recovery of his children.

"I had applied to the REA more than a year ago for electrical service," Gaines said, "but had been told I would have to wait my turn. There were 1,300 applications for service ahead of me."

Dr. W. O. Finney of Chassee, Scott county health officer, gave Gaines a statement certifying that electrical treatment was needed for the children, and Gaines presented the statement to Zarecor with a plea for prompt action.

"By digging into maintenance supplies, we got together enough copper wire for the job," Zarecor said. "I called in an emergency crew and put them to work this morning."

When news that the line was going up spread thru the community, neighbors rushed to the scene and volunteered assistance. Farmers equipped themselves with shovels and dug postholes ahead of the line crew. Gaines made a hurried trip to town for heating pads. Work proceeded by lantern light after dark.

Shot by Masked Pair as He Repairs Tavern Juke

John Kowalski

Shotgun assassins last night killed John Kowalski, 38, west side gang figure known as Polack Johnny and currently a juke box exchange owner. Police said he was one of Chicago's toughest hoodlums and perennially a murder and robbery suspect since he was 15.

Two masked men strode up behind Kowalski as he was repairing a juke box in Albert Wojcik's tavern at 1801 Huron st. and, without a word of explanation, pumped four charges from their repeater shotguns into the juke man's body. He died almost instantly.

Three Witness Killing

The killers fired so quickly that neither Wojcik, his son, Ray, 27, nor a customer, Walter Derus, 30, of 1747 Huron st., had time to make an outcry that might have warned Kowalski. The assassins apparently fled in an automobile.

Kowalski owned the Hitone Electrical Maintenance service at 2326 Grand av., where he sometimes resided. Last July, after he began expanding as a juke operator, his exchange was bombed. He was reluctant to discuss the cause.

"If your life depended on it," he had told Deputy Chief of Detectives John Warren, "you wouldn't talk either."

Prior to the bombing, Kowalski had been questioned about the murder July 13 of Morris Margolis, ex-handbook operator. In 1934 Kowalski, then known as James Gerven, was ordered held by a coroner's jury for the murder of Paul [Sonny] Cuprea, a handbook owner.

Suspect in Vault Robbery

In the Cuprea murder the underworld hinted that Kowalski and some of his associates were attempting to induce Sonny to take them in as his partners.

Kowalski also was listed as a suspect in the Portage Park safe deposit vault robbery in 1943. He was charged with murder in 1932 when a stolen car he was driving struck and killed a pedestrian, but the indictment later was reduced to manslaughter and eventually was dismissed.

Some policemen, who said that Kowalski occasionally was an informant—"stool pigeon" is the underworld term — theorized he was murdered by gangsters, but the motive was not immediately available.

Weds Son of Brooks

MRS. RUSSELL A. BROOKS

Miss Caroline Elizabeth Barnard yesterday became the bride of Marine Lt. Russell Ackerly Brooks at a 4 p. m. candlelight ceremony in the Metropolitan Memorial church in Washington, D. C.

She is the daughter of George Smith Barnard and the late Caroline Elizabeth Dowdell of Ozark, Ala., and the groom is the son of Sen. Brooks [R., Ill.] and Mrs. Ackerly Brooks of Los Angeles, Cal.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. Edward Gardner Latch before an altar banked with palms and white chrysanthemums. The bride wore a white satin gown with train and a full length veil and carried a bouquet of calla lilies.

SEIZE DIXMOOR BOARD MEMBER IN TAVERN ROW

Edward J. Seliga

County highway police summoned early yesterday to look into an affair in a tavern in the village of Dixmoor reported finding that the principal brawler was Edward J. Seliga, formerly chief of Dixmoor police and now a village trustee, and that the tavern is owned by his wife.

Seliga was placed under arrest. He was held in $50 cash bond on complaint of two Dixmoor citizens that he had struck them with his revolver. He is to be arraigned Tuesday before Police Magistrate William Kane at Homewood. As a trustee he is authorized to carry a revolver, it was said.

Disclosure that the trustee's wife runs a tavern and that he appeared to be serving as bouncer for the place, came at 6:30 a. m. yesterday when Elmer Sprehe and Luke Haddon, residents of Dixmoor, went to the county police station at Homewood and signed an assault and battery complaint against Seliga.

Highway police said they learned that the tavern license was issued to Mrs. Stella Seliga. The trustee and his wife live next door.

TAVERN OWNER ROBBED OF $100

Steve Wazniak, 4958 S. Hermitage av., told police that two Negroes entered his tavern Friday night and took $100.

ATLANTIC PLANE SERVICE GROWTH STIRS RATE WAR

CAB Lacks Power to Fix Foreign Hop Tariffs

BY FRANK STURDY

While trans-Atlantic passenger airplane operation is still so new that there is no certainty what fares will be set by the commercial air lines this winter, competition and the use of land airplanes already have started a downward slash and precipitated an international rate war.

Basically, the question goes deeper than rates; it involves the British adoption of a system of nationalized, state controled air lines, Pan American Airways' last ditch fight for adoption by the United States of the single company "chosen instrument" for overseas operation, and the contrary policy, set out in the civil aeronautics act of 1938 and followed by the civil aeronautics board, requiring competition among American air transport companies.

CAB Lacks Rate Authority

The present muddled situation arises because the CAB has no authority over rates charged by air lines on foreign routes. During the war, the New York to London rate was $572, by agreement among Pan-American, BOAC [British Overseas Airways] and American Export Airlines [now American Overseas Airlines].

Pan-American fired the first gun in the battle by announcing two months ago, during a conference of the International Air Transportation association in Montreal, a new rate of $275. The IATA meeting broke up forthwith, after approaching an agreement on $375. Another conference is scheduled for Jan. 8 in New York.

Chicago-London Rates Cut

After a week's uncertainty American Overseas last night announced a reduction in its fares, effective tomorrow. In its announcement American Overseas said its one way rate from Chicago to London had been reduced from $604.85 to $405.65, and the round trip rate from $1,095.30 to $738.10. The rate from Chicago to Shannon, Ireland, was reduced from $557.85 to $364.65, and the round trip fare from $1,010.70 to $664.30.

Simultaneously Pan American established the same rate to London, announcing that they were not entering into a rate agreement, but were forced to match American Overseas by the British action in reducing their flight frequencies.

The British, who want some sort of international air lines governing body with power to fix flight frequencies and rates, seized on Pan-American's new fare as an omen of economic chaos and retaliated by withdrawing Pan American's war time privilege of flying three trips to London each week in addition to the two provided for in the pre-war agreement still in force. The effect of the rate war has been to undermine the United States' argument that routes can be flown in competition economically, with benefits to passengers from rivalry between companies.

Based on Yield Rate

So far, all transocean flying has been at rates far higher than charged by the domestic air lines. United Air Lines establishes fares on a base price of 4½ cents a mile, measured along the airways. When factors such as fares set on a lower rate in order to meet competition from an air line traveling a somewhat shorter distance between two points are considered, United's fares over its whole system produce 4.22 cents a mile. This is known as the yield rate.

United's fare from Chicago to New York is $32.85, a rate of 4.4 cents a mile for the 742 miles.

The distance from New York to London, by way of Gander, Newfoundland, and Rineanna, Ireland, is 3,595 miles. The fare of $275 proposed by Pan-American was at the rate of 7.6 cents a mile.

Pan-American Fares

That rate is at the low end of the range of Pan-American fares to foreign points around the world, as indicated by the following table:

Trip.	Statute miles.	1-Way fare.	Mile rate.
San Francisco-Singapore	9,473	$887	9.36c
San Francisco-Hongkong	8,746	760	8.8c
San Francisco-Manila	7,988	739	9.26c
San Francisco-Honolulu	2,402	278	11.6c
New York-Lisbon	3,903	390	10.0c
New York-Bermuda	774	70	9.0c
Miami-Havana	235	20	8.51c
Miami-Rio de Janeiro	5,490	425	7.74c
Miami-Buenos Aires	7,090	495	6.98c
Miami-San Juan, Puerto R.	1,157	115	10.0c
Miami-Port of Spain, Trin.	1,915	200	10.4c
Rio de Janeiro-Buenos Air.	1,600	104	6.5c

As Pan-American was the only United States air line flying the oceans until now, there is no standard for comparing their charges with a competitor. United Airlines, however, which has filed an application for a route from San Francisco to Honolulu, has proposed a fare of $125, on the same basic 4.5c a mile rate used in domestic operations. Other companies have asked for competitive routes in the Caribbean. Pan-American recently announced small reductions in fares on South American routes, effective after Jan. 1.

Predict General Cuts

On the face of what has occurred, a general lowering of air line fares to foreign countries is recognized by air transport experts to be in the offing, altho certain costs of overocean flying are higher than overland costs.

United Airlines' direct operating costs for 21 passenger Douglas DC-3 planes for the last 10 months on its domestic route totaled 34.6 cents a mile. Direct operating costs are crew salaries, fuel and oil, depreciation, insurance, maintenance, and other like items. Indirect costs—administration, advertising, buildings, ticket counter operations, and so on—were 43.2 cents a mile.

Indirect Costs Uncertain

This company, as well as Pan American and American Overseas, plans to use converted C-54s [Douglas DC-4s] until larger DC-6s are available late next year. United estimates the direct operating cost of a DC-4 at a range of 2,400 miles—the San Francisco-Honolulu run, longer than the longest leg to London—at 57.2 cents a mile. Indirect costs are still uncertain and will be proved only by experience, but the company estimates they will be about the same as direct expense. While the cost of the DC-4 is considerably higher than the DC-3 originally as well as in operation, it will carry twice as many passengers on domestic routes and around 30 on ocean flights.

NEW PACT ENDS AIR MONOPOLY ON LISBON ROUTE

Modifies Pan-American's Exclusive Rights

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—A new commercial air agreement between the United States and Portugal ends a Pan American Airways monopoly on the route to Lisbon.

It also makes the Azores available as an alternate operational stop for trans-Atlantic planes.

Pan American signed an exclusive contract with Portugal in 1938 whereby no other United States flag carrier could serve that country. The Portuguese-American agreement signed late yesterday modifies that contract in a way that will permit Transcontinental and Western Air to serve Lisbon on its routes to the middle east.

TWA Granted Authority

The civil aeronautics board already has granted TWA authority to fly to Portugal, by way of Newfoundland, Ireland, and France.

The new pact also covers Portuguese possessions in the Pacific.

In general the agreement follows the pattern of a standard air contract being sought by the United States with many countries. Such agreements previously had been signed with Spain, Denmark, Sweden, Iceland, Switzerland, and Norway.

Flight Provision Reported

While it is not in the agreement, air line officials understand that American carriers will not fly over Portugal without stopping unless given permission.

Such a provision was made with Ireland and has been sought by other countries. It stems from the foreign countries' desire for as much air service as possible and for revenue from sales of fuel and services.

Portugal is on one of Pan America's two routes to London. The other is by way of Newfoundland. Pan American also has a line from Portugal to Marseilles.

TRIBUNE CAMERA PARTY HONORS 18 HOME FROM WAR

Eighteen Tribune photographers who have returned to their jobs after serving in various branches of the army and navy were guests of honor last night at the 25th annual Tribune photographers' party in the West ballroom of the Stevens hotel. The party started at midnight so all of the cameramen and their friends could attend. Edward McGill, veteran Tribune employe, was master of ceremonies and Harold Revoir and Julius Gantter were co-chairmen in charge of the party.

KELLY GOES EAST TODAY TO ATTEND MAYORS' MEETING

Mayor Kelly will go to New York today to attend the annual meeting of the United States Conference of Mayors. It is believed Kelly may be elected president, succeeding Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York.

Kelly will be met in New York by Ald. Moss (5th), chairman of a committee of five Chicago alderman who went east to make a survey of public housing developments and to attempt to interest private capital in the development of housing in Chicago. The four other members of the committee returned to Chicago yesterday, confident that at least four insurance companies will consider investing funds here.

Mayor Kelly will testify Thursday before the senate banking committee in Washington, D. C., in support of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill to provide federal funds and federal insurance for housing.

6,000 WORKERS SOUGHT TO AID WITH YULE MAIL

Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen issued a call yesterday for 6,000 or 7,000 temporary workers to help handle the heaviest volume of Christmas mail and parcel post in the history of the Chicago postoffice.

Clerks and carriers will be paid a minmum of 84 cents an hour. Men and women will be hired, and veterans and nonveterans, altho preference will be given veterans.

Kruetgen said he expects a record volume of parcel post because merchandise is available in greater quantities than during the war. Service also has been resumed to many countries to which it was barred last year. War time restrictions have been removed on mail to merchant marine crews; restrictions have been lifted on mail and parcels to civilians in Guam, and regular mail service has been restored to Albania, Hungary, Manchuria, and the Dodecanese Islands.

ILLINOIS JOINS CHALLENGE TO U. S. TAX SCHEME

Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett of Illinois filed an intervening brief in the United States Supreme court yesterday asserting that the federal government is seeking power to tax state property and income on the same basis that it taxes individuals and corporations.

In the Saratoga Springs case, now pending before the high court, the government is attempting to collect tax from the state of New York on its sales of mineral water bottled at the springs, Barrett pointed out. The government contends that these sales are in competition with private business.

Actually, Barrett's brief asserted, the case is an attempt to establish a rule permitting federal taxes on "state capital buildings, state arsenals, state roads, and canals—in short, upon all the wealth of the states."

NAZIS TAPPED F. D. R.'S PHONE, SAYS MARSHALL

Explains Sending of Cable to Pearl Harbor

as chief of staff he had a share in the responsibility.

"Do you agree it was Gerow's full responsibility?" Ferguson asked.

"It was his direct responsibility, but I shared it," Marshall said.

"Then you share the responsibility?"

"I thihk I do, sir."

Questioned on Date

Ferguson asked Marshall when the "magic" secret [information on which Japanese messages was decoded] was first given to Great Britain.

"I do not know," Marshall replied. [Gen. Miles has testified the secret was given to England in January, 1941].

"By whose authority was it given Great Britain?" Ferguson asked.

"I should think it would have been brought to my attention and that of the secretary of war."

"Do you rerall when the matter first came to your attention?"

"No. Our concern was to get intelligence information from the British. They had more extensive sources than we. The transfer of our information was a working arrangement."

Says British Coöperated

"Well, did the British give us their intelligence reports?" Ferguson asked.

"Yes, but whether they were based on magic, I don't know. For quite a period the British were giving us estimates of what their intelligence had gleaned."

Marshall said the British did not supply us with texts of Japanese communications they had intercepted because they feared "leaks" in the transmission of such information. The general did not indicate whether the British feared the United States government would be responsible for leaks.

"Do we have those records here [in the committee]?" Ferguson asked.

"I am quite certain they are not here because we have tried to keep it as quiet as we could. We did not want to disclose that the British had decoding apparatus, as I indicated in my letters to Gov. Dewey."

Pearl Harbor Files

"Have there been any instructions to G-2 [army intelligence] that we were not to get all the files on Pearl Harbor?" Ferguson demanded.

"Quite the contrary, senator," replied Marshall, bristling. "There are no instructions in the war department to hold out any information from this committee."

Ferguson asked whether there had been any British reports of intercepted Japanese messages dealing with Pearl Harbor. Marshall replied in the negative.

"Well, the British admiralty was giving our navy information," Ferguson asserted. [He has asked committee counsel to obtain complete files of communications between the British admiralty and our navy department in 1940 and 1941.]

Information for Kimmel

Ferguson asked Marshall if he knew the navy department was sending "magic" information to Adm. Kimmel at Pearl Harbor until about August, 1941, and that the practice was stopped in that month. Marshall said he did not. [Gen. Miles has testified to Kimmel's receiving reports from naval intelligence, but said the reports were stopped when it was jointly agreed that the army and navy should "close in" on the secret that we were breaking Japanese codes.]

"When did you first know that Gen. MacArthur was getting "magic?" Ferguson asked.

"I don't remember—Gen. Miles might know."

Ferguson turned to Marshall's account, given the committee yesterday, of his horseback riding Sunday morning, Dec. 7, 1941, while his subordinates were trying feverishly to reach him with word that the Japanese intended to break diplomatic relations at 1 p. m. that day.

"Would you say you were available that morning?" Ferguson asked.

"In one sense, yes, in another, no," Marshall replied.

"So your deputy [Brig. Gen. William Bryden] would have been able to act for you?"

"Yes, if he knew I was absent for an hour, he would probably have to decide whether to act or wait for my return," said Marshall.

"Did you feel your deputy could have located you?" Ferguson asked.

"I assume so."

War Department "Alert"

Marshall testified that the war department was alerted for several months prior to Pearl Harbor in that officers were on duty in his office, in the war plans division, and other key sections to receive important messages.

"Then how do you account for the fact that the 13 parts of the Japanese communication to this government [intercepted and translated the day before the attack] and the pilot message were not delivered to the chief of staff on the evening of the 6th—as they had been to high navy officials?" Ferguson asked.

"I didn't look into that matter until three days ago, when I was preparing for this hearing. The question of delay was a matter of judgment. The final, and most significant, part of the Jap message was not received until the following morning."

Discussion of Authority

Ferguson then asked if Gerow, then head of the war plans division, had authority to send additional alert orders to Gen. Short in Hawaii the morning of Dec. 7. Marshall said Gerow did not have authority to dispatch operational orders. Only the President, secretary of war, chief of staff, and deputy chief of staff had authority to order a war plan into effect, Marshall said.

Marshall said details of preparing warnings to field commanders, including Short, was a responsibility of Gerow's section but that the general responsibility was his — Marshall's—as well as Gerow's.

Ferguson then asked if Miles' being relieved of duty as intelligence chief two months after Pearl Harbor had anything to do with events leading up to the attack.

Marshall said it did not. Miles and Gerow were given other commands because they had been working hard at war department administrative tasks and needed the change provided by field commands.

STALIN WOUNDED IN QUARREL WITH ACTRESS, PARIS TOLD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Dec. 8—Premier Stalin's illness and absence from Moscow are the result of bullet wounds received in a jealous quarrel with a noted Russian actress, said a story in the Courrier de Paris today.

Authority for this explanation of the mysterious illness of the master of Russia is attributed to reports from Russians recently arrived from Moscow and well known in soviet embassy circles here.

According to the story, Stalin was the victim of a "drame passionnel."

"Greviously wounded," the story said, "Stalin first was treated in a Moscow hospital and then taken to the shores of the Black sea for convalescence. What seems to authenticate this version of the story is the fact that the Russians have clapped a rigorous censorship on foreign correspondents in Moscow."

ADMITS SURPRISE

BY LAURENCE BURD
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8—Gen. Marshall told the morning session of the Pearl Harbor investigating committee's hearing that up to Dec. 7, 1941, he thought Pearl Harbor was "the most improbable" target for enemy attack and that he was more fearful of Jap raids on the west coast and the Panama canal than on the Hawaiian base.

The former chief of staff gave this picture of his estimate of Japanese intentions during questioning by Rep. Gearhart [R., Cal.] about the scarcity of vital information and warnings sent by Marshall to Gen. Short, Pearl Harbor commander, in the weeks immediately preceding the Jap attack.

"Last Thing Expected"

While taking the position that Short's command should have been fully alerted on the morning of Dec. 7 against the surprise raid, Marshall made it clear such a raid was the last thing he and other military chiefs in Washington expected.

The witness said he thought at the time that Japan, if she struck, would move south thru the China sea in the Far East, and added that he assumed Guam and Wake islands would probably be captured.

"We had in mind," he continued, "the possibility of [raids on] the Panama canal, air plants at Seattle and San Diego, central Parific bases, and Hawaii. We thought Hawaii was the most improbable."

On Additional Instructions

Marshall said he doesn't know now why he did not send additional instructions to Gen. Short to be on the alert against attack, after a message from Short on Nov. 28 indicated the latter's command was alerted only against sabotage.

Gearhart noted that Marshall sent a warning to Short on Nov. 27 that hostile action was possible any time and directing him to take steps accordingly. Short responded the next day that he had ordered a sabotage alert, but mentioned no other precautions.

Marshall said today he presumed he read Short's reply but that he does not remember. Records show it was underneath a reply from Gen. MacArthur in the Philippines, and that Marshall initialed the MacArthur reply but not that from Short.

"I Don't Know"

"Is there any reason why you did not take exception to Short's Nov. 28 message and send more instructions?" Gearhart asked.

"I can only say," Marshall replied, "that I had the opportunity to do so. Why I didn't exercise it, I don't know."

Gearhart then asked Marshall why, in the 10 days between Nov. 27 and Dec. 7, when Marshall knew from intelligence reports and the state of negotiations in the capital that Jap relations were growing more tense, he did not pass on such information to the Pearl Harbor commander.

The general replied that Gen. Short already had been issued an order on Nov. 27 to "do something"—to take measures against possible attack.

"Difficult to Amend"

"Once such an order is issued," Marshall said, "it is difficult to amend it. Another problem is that a field commander should not be confused by too many orders and documents, because it must be kept clear just what his actions should be."

Gen. Marshall testified that he was not shown a long series of intercepted Jap messages exchanged thruout 1941 between Tokyo and various Japanese sources in this country and at Pacific bases, including Hawaii and the Philippines.

"I first read those several days ago when I was getting ready for this hearing," he said.

Gearhart observed that many of these intercepted messages showed Japan was taking great interest in Hawaii, and particularly in ship movements in and out of the base and in military installations there.

Marshall then conceded that it might have been helpful to Short to have the "sense" of some of these documents, but he insisted that the Hawaiian commander's lack of such information was no reason for not having his command fully alerted.

Gearhart, returning to Marshall's warning message to Short on Nov. 27, noted that Short was told to carry out defense measures in such a way as "not to alarm civil population or disclose intent."

He Asks: "How?"

"How could Gen. Short put on a full scale alert without creating public alarm?" Gearhart asked.

Marshall replied that this had been accomplished during a previous Hawaiian alert in the summer of 1940.

He said the reason for this instruction to Short was the "strong desire of the President and the army and navy that Japan should have no chance to claim we committed the first overt act of war."

The general said it was feared Japan might seize on an incident, however unjustified, as an excuse to contend that we had forced the war, and that hence the Pearl Harbor alert was to be unknown to the public as far as possible.

If Japan were to accuse us of starting the war, Marshall continued, "it would have divided our country, which would have been a terrible situation."

RUSSIA DENIES HAVING HAND IN IRANIAN REVOLT

Blames 'Reactionaries'; Won't Withdraw

(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8—Russia today solemnly denied she is playing at power politics in the revolt raging in northern Iran, insisting she is observing in good faith the American-soviet-British pledge to uphold the independence of Iran.

Maintaining that Red troops have not interfered with Iranian forces engaged in quelling the revolt, Russia placed the blame for the crisis on "reactionary elements which have opposed the extension of national rights."

The Russian denial came with the publication by the state department of this government's note of Nov. 24 calling for the evacuation of Russian, British, and American troops from Iran by Jan. 1. The soviet note was delivered to the American embassy at Moscow a week ago, but was not made public until today.

Powers to Meet

The soviet position was revealed as observers here predicted Iran will loom large in the discussions at the meeting of the foreign secretaries of the three powers to convene in Moscow next Saturday. The impending meeting of Foreign Commissar Molotov, British Foreign Secretary Bevin, and State Secretary Byrnes was announced simultaneously last night in the three capitals.

The major business at the conference is considered to be agreement on the control of atomic energy. Iran is expected to follow the priority subject along with unification of China, allied controls in Japan and the conclusion of peace treaties in Europe.

In turning down the American request for withdrawal from Iran by Jan. 1, the soviet note emphasized that an agreement already had been effected with the British for withdrawal by March 2. It was said no grounds were seen for moving up the date.

Adherence Pledged

The note, sent by Molotov, was made public 24 hours after Byrnes had reaffirmed this nation's interest in the maintenance of Iranian sovereignty. In this connection Molotov reiterated Russia's "adherence unwaveringly" to the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin declaration of Teheran pledging "independence, sovereignty, and territorial integrity of Iran."

Molotov emphasized the declaration did not specify the number of soviet soldiers in Iran or set the term of occupation. He recalled the time of withdrawal was fixed at the conference of foreign ministers in London two months ago and emphasized that no objections were then raised.

The soviet minister struck at the Iranian government's account of the disturbance in northern Iran as not corresponding to the facts, holding that there was no armed uprising. He said the so-called popular assembly of northern Iran is seeking only assurance of democratic rights for Azerbaijan province.

Observers in diplomatic circles here believe Russia is following the communist pattern of penetration in northern Iran by calling for autonomy of the northern province where soviet influences have been at work for many months.

Late today, Hussein Ali, Iranian ambassador, delivered a commentary on the Russian note to the state department taking issue with the soviet denial of interference.

He showed a cablegram from his foreign office at Tehran stating the soviets are "still holding up our detachment before Charifabad and do not allow it to pass and proceed to its destination."

"Here and in Moscow contact with the soviet authorities has increased but no result has yet been obtained in our negotiations," the cable said. "They are continuing to support the rebels and we are insisting upon their really ceasing to back them up; we ask them instead to discuss all matters with us directly, so that good understanding and a strengthening of existing relations may take place. The soviet forces have ostensibly been withdrawn from Tehran."

The ambassador explained the red withdrawal was designated as "ostensible" because soviet agents evidently are remaining in Tehran in civilian attire.

"We don't want Russian or British influence in our territory," he said. "We want sovereign independence. We want Iran for the Iranians."

LONDON, Dec. 8 (AP)—A group of 120 members of parliament adopted a resolution today calling for immediate severance by Great Britain of diplomatic, commercial, and economic relations with the Franco government of Spain.

The action, taken at a rally sponsored by "the emergency committee in aid of democratic Spain," urged all possible encouragement for a democratic regime in that country.

AUSTRALIA GETS BEHIND U. S. FOR WORLD CAPITAL

Urges San Francisco as Permanent Home

BY WILLIAM FULTON
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Dec. 8—Breaking away from other parts of the British empire, Australia today made a vigorous demand that the united nations organization establish its permanent home in the United States. Australia's view ran head-on into the United Kingdom stand for setting up the new world order somewhere in Europe.

Col. W. R. Hodgson, Australian minister to Paris, told delegates from 51 countries attending the united nations preparatory commission session that the capital of the world organization must be in the United States if it is to succeed. He urged San Francisco as the site.

Two Plead for European Site

"My country fought two terrible wars and underwent tremendous sacrifices for the aid of Europe," asserted Hodgson, "The same arguments are being used here as in 1919 for the establishment of what was then the new world organization in Europe at Geneva, and that proved to be wrong."

Paul Henry Spaak, minister of foreign affairs for Belgium, and Dr. A. Pelt, of the Netherlands, delegation argued that the global machinery should be located in Europe because it would be nearer the hotbed of the world's troubles.

To this Col. Hodgson replied that the same argument could be applied to Asia where Japanese aggression started and that the middle east was now another hotbed of trouble. He asked whether the united nations would set up business in either one of these areas.

"I say that a site should be selected in the United States between the great land masses and population masses in order to survey world problems with detachment, fairly, impartially and judiciously."

Cuba Also Favors U. S.

Dr. Ernest Dihigo, professor of law at Havana university, announced that Cuba favored a site in the United States which he described as the most internationally minded country in the world since its population was drawn from nations all over the face of the earth.

At the morning session before a special subcommittee Lt. Gov. Richard T. James of Indiana made an eloquent plea for the united nations to set up business in Dunes State park on the south shore of Lake Michigan. He pointed out that it was 40 miles from Chicago's loop.

Other deputations presenting their cases included B. R. Frost, who urged the organization to pick Hyde Park, N. Y., home of the late President Roosevelt; Sen. Pepper, speaking in favor of Miami Beach, Fla., and a joint American-Canadian committee from Navy Island in the Niagara river near Buffalo, N. Y.

4 DIE IN GUN FIGHTS DURING BUENOS AIRES RALLY AGAINST PERON

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Dec. 8 (AP)—Four persons were killed and 33 injured today as 200,000 persons braved three hours of gunfire and oratory in the first major demonstration against the candidacy of Col. Juan Peron for the presidency.

Speakers of the Democratic Union formed by the Radical, Liberal, Socialist, and Communist parties denounced what they term "naziism" in the military government, which Peron served as vice president, while columns of Peron supporters attacked with guns, clubs, and fists down the streets leading to Congress plaza and the congress building.

The series of gun battles was intensified near the end of the meeting and finally four armored cars and 150 mounted police were sent to clear the square. The meeting ended as they arrived and there was no further violence.

EXPECT RIOTS IN PERU TO SPLIT COALITION RULE

BY C. N. GRIFFIS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LIMA, Peru, Dec. 8—Rioting in Lima, which resulted in the death of two persons and injuries to more than 100 last night, is expected to bring a wide open split in the National Democratic front, a political coalition which swept President Jose Luis Bustamante into power in the general elections June 10.

The party split may endanger congressional ratification of an agreement now being negotiated in the United States for default on $80,000,000 in Peruvian bonds. It may also affect negotiations with leading petroleum companies for exploitation of oil lands on both sides of the Andes.

Clashes occurred in the plaza facing San Marcos university when strong arm squads of the so-called APRA party [American popular revolutionary alliance] broke up a meeting protesting against the press gag law sponsored by APRA. The measure was approved by congress and sent to President Bustamante this week.

Burn Party Headquarters

The disturbances began at 6 o'clock and continued until midnight when APRA supporters stormed and set fire to a building housing the headquarters of the National Union party. The structure, one of Lima's oldest mansions, was completely burned out.

In a broadcast Thursday night, Bustamante urged coöperation and tolerance in dealing with the controversy caused by the press measure. The law has been denounced as an infringement on the liberty of the press by nearly all Peruvian and other South American newspapers. It gives the Supreme court the exclusive right to close any newspaper on charges preferred by three or more persons, thus removing procedure from the ordinary channels of law. It also provides that the offenses specified in the penal code committed thru newspapers be punished by duplication of the penalties and application of the maximum penalty where alternatives are established.

Aided by Reds, Charge

Victor Raul de la Torre, APRA leader, who directed last night's demonstration from party headquarters, entered the Peruvian political arena in the 1931 elections. One of the planks of the APRA platform then was aimed at "Yankee imperialism."

Charged with receiving support from Moscow at that time, the party was outlawed and only permitted to reënter the electoral contest this year. It is reported that De la Torre now claims the press gag was aimed against a threatened invasion of South America by soviet interests.

Refugee Committee Holds Fund Collection Dinner

Two hundred persons last night attended a fund collection dinner of the Joint Anti-fascist Refugee committee in the Congress hotel. The dinner was given in honor of Dr. Edward J. Barsky of New York, head of the committee. Prof. Curtis MacDougall of Northwestern university presided. Other speakers included William Gailmor, a writer who is a regular contributor to the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper; John Bernard, former Minnesota congressman, and Vory Steinberg, an official of the Political Action committee.

CHINESE INVITED TO TAKE 3 CITIES OF MANCHURIA

Reds Include Harbin and Dairen in List

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 8 (AP)—Russia was reported today to have granted Chinese government troops permission to occupy three cities forming the backbone of Manchuria, including the free port of Dairen.

The government army newspaper Ho Ping Pao said the other cities were the capital, Changchun, 390 miles northeast of Dairen and Harbin, 150 miles north of Changchun. It added that all would be occupied soon.

Mukden, Manchuria's largest city, was not mentioned. Chungking troops were last reported on its outskirts waiting for a Russian signal before entering.

Fear Reds Will Win Race

Ho Ping Pao quoted as its authority Chiang Chung-kuo, son of Chiang Kai-shek and Chungking's principal negotiator at Changchun.

The asserted agreement covering Dairen was out of line with previous accounts, which said the Russians had banned entry of Chinese troops on the ground it was a free port. Harbin and Changchun lie so far north that Chungking feared Chinese Communists would beat them to both cities if the Russians withdrew.

At Chungking's request, Moscow reecntly agreed to delay recalling its occupation forces from Manchuria until Jan. 3. The generalissimo's son then renewed negotiations for arranging to fly Chinese troops into Manchuria.

100,000 Troops Mass

Gen. Tu Li-ming, commander of central government troops in Manchuria, who is now visiting here, estimated 80,000 Chinese communist troops were scattered over the vast territory.

A Chinese communist dispatch charged that Chungking troops, bolstered by Japanese soldiers, had massed 100,000 strong along the Yellow river and had begun preliminary crossings in commandeered junks in a drive aimed at communist-held areas of northern Honan and southern Shanshi provinces. The Communists also alleged the central government had thrown Japanese troops into fighting north of Miyun, 40 miles northeast of Peiping.

In Peiping and Tientsin, Chinese secret police rounded up as suspected collaborators 250 puppet officials of the Japanese sponsored government of north China, including Princess Chin Pei-hui of the Manchu dynasty, a cousin of Emperor Henry Pu Yi of Manchuria.

Two Marines Shot

TIENTSIN, China, Dec. 8 (AP)—American marines fired 24 mortar shells into a Chinese village near Anshan on Dec. 4 after one marine had been killed and another seriously wounded by Chinese gunmen, Marine Gen. Keller Rockey, 3d amphibious corps commander, said today.

Firing into the village was ordered, he said, after the two gunmen who shot the marines had not been surrendered to the Americans.

A marine corporal and a private had been hunting rabbits, Rockey's statement said, and Chinese gunmen shot them down. Their names were not announced.

HESS' OWN STORY OF FLIGHT; TRIED TO MAKE PEACE

Sought to End War of Two 'Noble Races'

[Rudolf Hess, thru his attorney, Gunther von Rohrscheidt, answered a written list of questions submitted by the Associated Press, giving his answers directly in writing. This is the first direct communication from Hess to the press since his sensational flight to England in 1941.]

BY LOUIS P. LOCHNER AND WES GALLAGHER

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 8 (AP)—Rudolf Hess declared today that he flew to England to try to halt the fight between two "noble races"—England and Germany — and not to enlist British aid in the attack on Russia, as has been widely believed.

Rudolf Hess

Hess asserted he had planned the flight for nearly a year before the invasion of Russia, and even had taken off for England several times from June, 1940, onward, but each time was forced back by bad weather. The successful attempt came on May 10, 1941.

The former No. 3 Nazi, and self-confessed amnesia faker said he had expected to be called crazy by Hitler, but professed undying loyalty to the man he helped to write "Mein Kampf."

Had No Definite Plan

The gaunt Nazi sub-chieftain considered the questions for three days before answering them. He indicated that he had no definite plans of operation, once he landed in England, and carried only a letter of introduction to the duke of Hamilton from Prof. Karl Haushofer, his spiritual mentor.

One novel feature of Hess' statement was his insistence that even Haushofer and Willy Messerschmitt, the German plane builder, knew nothing of his proposed flight. It had been presumed that both of them knew his intentions.

The questions, and answers by Hess, follow:

Q.—What was the purpose of your flight to England?

A.—During the campaign in France I expressed my view to the Fuehrer, in June, 1940, that on conclusion of the peace with England [which we then considered imminent], a demand should be made for the return of what had been taken from Germany by the Versailles treaty. For instance: the equivalent of the German merchant fleet.

Hitler Counsels Mildness

The fuehrer disagreed, saying: "You know that already in our talks during our imprisonment at Landsberg, in 1925, and ever since then, I have declared again and again that the basis of my policy upon seizing power must be an understanding with England. Even today I have not given up hope that this understanding can be achieved when a certain period of time has elapsed after this war.

"If, however, one desires an understanding with a people, one must not make demands beforehand which are bound to engender bitterness. I don't want a Versailles treaty which sooner or later will lead to a new war. I am striving for a peace which will last, bring reconciliation between peoples, and which will be enduring.

"I have to insist on two conditions. First, an exact delineation of the spheres of influence of both powers, and second, a return of some former German colonies. This demand for the return of German property is a very modest one compared with the size of other colonial empires.

Careful of British Prestige

"I consider this war, in which for the second time within one generation, peoples of a noble race are decimating each other, and are destroying their very substance, as a terrible tragedy. The sooner this war is ended, the better it will be for humanity. In order to attain this end, however, everything must be avoided that might wound British prestige."

I said to myself at the time that most likely, reasons of prestige prevented England from entertaining the various proposals for understanding made by the fuehrer.

Considering the military position then prevailing, England could negotiate without loss of prestige only if a reason visible to the whole world for entering into parleys with Germany could be provided. I therefore decided to supply this reason by going personally to England.

Leaves Letter to Hitler

I left a letter for the Fuehrer at the moment of my departure, giving my reason for the flight. In it I argued: after contact with me, the British government will be in a position to declare:

"We have become convinced in talks with Herr Hess that proposals of the fuehrer looking toward an understanding have been made in earnest. Under these circumstances, England does not feel justified in assuming responsibility for prolonging the slaughter without having endeavored to bring the war to a conclusion acceptable to all parties. She therefore declares her willingness to enter upon negotiations looking to this goal."

What I wrote to the fuehrer, I repeated to such personages in England as I met there. The attitude which motivated me is perhaps best expressed in what I said during a conversation in England:

"The decision concerning my flight was, without doubt, the hardest I ever made. It was rendered easier, however, when I visualized the endless rows of children's coffins in both Germany and England, with mothers in dire distress following behind and similar rows of mothers killed by bombs, with crying children following."

Mothers Will Understand

I assume many people will interpret this as misplaced sentimentalism. At the same time, I am convinced that mothers on both sides of the channel will understand me.

Q. Did Hitler or any other top-flight nazi know of the flight beforehand?

A. Neither Adolf Hitler nor anybody else knew of my intention, except for an adjutant whom I took into my confidence.

Q. In which way were Willy Messerschmitt and Prof. Haushofer implicated?

A. Messerschmitt was not informed about my intention. I obtained a plane from him under the pretext I needed the machine for long range training flights within Germany. As to Haushofer, I merely asked him for a few lines of recommendation to the Duke of Hamilton under the pretext that I, with Hitler's knowledge, was to meet the duke on neutral soil.

Q. When did you decide to make the flight?

A. I decided to fly shortly after the above mentioned conversation with the fuehrer in June, 1940. A delay of nearly one year was caused by difficulties in obtaining the machine and long range equipment, as well as by unfavorable weather conditions. You see, rules in Germany necessitated keeping to altitudes of not more than 500 meters, and this meant that one could not rise above ice forming clouds and medium sized mountains.

Tells of Postponements

On the other hand, it was necessary that over the North sea and over Great Britain there be clouds, without danger of icing, which would afford protection against enemy counter-attack, yet not of such nature as to make an occasional sight of land impossible.

As a matter of fact, it took until May 10, 1941, before all necessary preconditions coincided. Moreover, I deliberately postponed my flight for a certain time because our military setback in North Africa caused a danger lest my sudden arrival in England would give rise to a false interpretation of my motives.

Q.—Where did you take off?

A.—I took off from an air field of the Messerschmitt plant at Augsburg, from where I had made several short training flights previously, as well as several take-offs for England, which I had to break off because of bad weather.

Still Loyal to Hitler

Q.—Was your loyalty toward the fuehrer diminished when you learned that Rudolf Hess hospitals, streets, and squares were renamed, and that the radio and press were forbidden to mention your name? Do you still retain a feeling of loyalty toward the fuehrer?

A.—The questions are answered automatically by the replies to the foregoing. My loyalty toward the fuehrer is as great as it ever was.

REPORT HUTTON HOME IN LONDON OFFERED TO U. S. AS AN EMBASSY

LONDON, Dec. 8 [Reuters]—Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress and one of the world's richest women, has written to President Truman offering her London home, Winfield house, for use as a new American embassy, it was reported here today.

One of the terms of the 4 billion 400 thousand dollar American loan to Britain, provides for a new embassy to replace the present inadequate American quarters in Grosvenor square, according to reports.

Miss Hutton's home, a country mansion in the heart of London, stands in 12½ acres, the largest private grounds in London except those of Buckingham palace. She is said to have spent $600,000 on the house, which she built seven years ago, and 2 million dollars on the furnishings.

RAEDER SAYS HE GAVE ORDER TO SCUTTLE SPEE

Claims He Constantly Disputed Hitler

NUERNBERG, Germany, Dec. 8 (AP)—Grand Adm. Erich Raeder, one of the 20 nazi defendants facing the international military tribunal, said today it was by his order that the 10,000 ton pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee was scuttled off Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 17, 1939.

Grand Adm. Raeder

The former commander of the German navy volunteered this statement in answering a series of questions submitted by the Associated Press thru his attorney.

No Chance to Fight

Asked why the order was given to blow up the Graf Spee instead of ordering her to risk battle, Raeder said:

"The Graf Spee would have had to glide down the Rio de la Plata to reach the open sea. Before reaching deep waters it would have been seized by superior fighting units and knocked out without the possibility of developing its fighting powers or, after being put out of commission, of proceeding to scuttle."

[It was officially announced in Berlin in 1939 that Hitler himself, as supreme commander of the German armed forces, ordered the crippled Graf Spee destroyed rather than moved out to meet waiting British cruisers again after Uruguay refused to extend harbor privileges beyond 72 hours.]

Raeder said he was unable to answer from memory inquiries as to the performance of the battleship Bismarck, which was hunted down and destroyed after sinking the British battle cruiser Hood in 1941, or why the Admiral Tirpitz was withheld from action.

He asserted in answer to questions that he constantly wrangled with the "nervous and temperamental" Hitler, particularly in opposing the decision to invade Russia; that he pleaded in favor of peace with France; that he repeatedly asked to be relieved because of differences with Hitler and finally obtained discharge in January, 1943; that the navy had nothing to do with concentration camp atrocities.

Raeder declined to answer questions about violations of international law which the German navy is accused of committing during the invasion of Norway.

Happy to Solve Task

Some questions and answers on other topics:

Q.—If you were to relive the last 15 years, would you proceed on the same course?

A.—I would be happy once more to solve the task of building up a German navy and to train it for an exceptional personnel such as, in fact, it possessed during these years. But I would like to profit by the experience of our first attempt. For I do not regard a naval chief who builds up a navy of a certain size—for instance a British navy with a two-power or similar standard—as a war criminal, as it is now, apparently, being sought to prove. It is evident that, in view of what I had to experience in recent years, I would not have any traffic again with National Socialism.

Q.—Did you approve of nazism's anti-Christian tenets?

A.—By no means. Quite the contrary. Just as during the years 1925 to 1928, as chief of the Baltic naval stations, I taught Kiel garrison personnel to go to church by giving an example with my officers by going ourselves, so I tried from 1939 to 1943 to keep the Christian spirit alive in the navy. I permitted nobody [Raeder underscored this word] to interfere herewith. The navy, incidentally, was known within the armed forces as that element within which the practice of religion received the most encouragement.

Questioned on Camps

Q.—Did you approve of German soldiers entering Danish ports in civilian garb, which they then changed to military at the moment of aggression? A.—Neither on my orders nor with my knowledge did any members of the navy enter Danish ports in civilian garb. The navy sent only regular elements.

Q.—What about the orders for the extermination of whole peoples? Concentration camp atrocities? Terroristic measures in occupied areas? Did you know and approve of them? A.—Hitler never at any time spoke to me about plans for the extermination of sections of people. The navy had nothing to do with territorial affairs, much less with terroristic measures in occupied areas. I never heard of any concentration camps, except Dachau and Oranienburg, from which I tried twice to rescue Pastor [Martin] Niemoeller with the aid of the venerable Adm. von Lans, and with the exception of Ravensbrueck, from which I succeeded in liberating former Defense Minister Dr. Otto Gessler in 1944.

Gabrielino D'Annunzio, Son of Poet, Dead at 60

ROME, Italy, Dec. 8 (AP)—Gabrielino D'Annunzio, 60, son of the noted poet and fascist leader, died today after a long illness. He was widely known in Italian literary and movie circles.

MONTGOMERY ORDERS BELSEN GANG HANGED

HEREFORD, Germany, Dec. 8 (AP)—Josef Kramer, "The Beast of Belsen," blond Irma Grese, and six other nazi camp officials and guards today were doomed to death on the gallows by Field Marshal Montgomery.

Josef Kramer and Irma Grese

They had been convicted by a British military court of atrocities at the Belsen, Germany, and Oswiecim [Auschwitz], Poland, concentration camps and had appealed their death sentences. The British commander rejected the appeals. With them will die three others who did not appeal.

In a town in the British zone, the name of which was kept secret, a gallows already was being built for the eight men and three women of the Belsen gang on whom the death sentence was passed on Nov. 17.

Professional to Hang Them

While no date for the hangings was announced, it was assumed they would take place before Christmas. A professional British executioner, Pierrepont, will be brought from England. It was understood he would get $40 for the first hanging, probably Kramer, and a lesser amount for each of the others.

In all, the court had convicted 30 officials of the concentration camps. Prison sentences varying from life to one year have been given 19.

In addition to Kramer, 39, commandant at Oswiecim and Belsen, and Grese, 22, others who will hang are Dr. Fritz Klein, 58, who selected victims for the gas chamber; Peter Weingartner, 32; Franz Hoeszler, 34; Juana Borman, 42; Elizabeth Volkenrath, 26; Karl Francioh, 33; Ansgar Pichen, 32; Franz Starfie, 30; Wilhelm Dorr, 24.

Two Women Ask No Mercy

No appeals for clemency had been made by two women—Borman, a religious fanatic, and Volkenrath, a former hairdresser who became head SS [elite guard] woman of Belsen. Nor was there an appeal from Hoeszler, who also selected victims for the gas chamber.

Maj. G. I. Draper of the war crimes section, who visited the defendants recently in their jail cells at Lueneburg, said:

"Grese looked awful. Her usual neat appearance in dress and the way she swept back her blond hair had gone. She cried continuously. Her eyes were red and sunken and she was extremely nervous.

"Kramer and Klein seemed to be in good spirits, joking with each other. Kramer was teasing Klein for losing his memory. Klein said it was hard for him to remember any more."

BRITISH TO SEND MORE TROOPS TO QUELL INDONESE

Dutch Forces Also to Be Strengthened

Fire on 3 Americans

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 8 (AP)—Three Americans escaped uninjured today when unseen marksmen peppered their truck with automatic weapon fire. The driver Pvt. Harold E. Wright, 25, of Philadelphia, stepped on the gas and did not stop until they reached a safe area, altho the engine was ablaze. With Wright were Corp. Eldon T. Torgerson, 22, of Black River Falls, Wis., and Charles Osbourne, a cafe owner here.

[According to available sources in Washington last night, United States troops, stationed in Java, were sent there to guard American surplus property. The force of Americans is not believed to be large.]

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 8 (AP)—The British were reported by high sources today to have decided to bring in reinforcements to restore order and guarantee Dutch sovereignty in the Netherlands East Indies. Dutch troops as well as more British forces will be brought in.

This decision, which apparently rules out any consideration of Indonesian demands for independence, was said to have been reached at the Singapore conference Thursday between Adm. Mountbatten and British, French, and Dutch commanders.

A British spokesman said Lt. Gen. Philip Christison, allied commander in the Indies, was empowered to "restore and maintain order" to permit "constitutional reform and a measure of self-government for the Indonesians within the framework of the Netherlands kingdom."

Dutch to Hold Objectives

The Indonesians already have rejected a Dutch offer for local self-government and are insisting upon complete independence.

The Aneta news agency quoted Dr. Hubertus J. Van Mook, acting governor general, as saying the door still was open for discussions with Indonesian leaders.

An informed source said the new plan called for the use of a large number of Dutch troops as well as British reinforcements, with the Dutch assigned the task of holding the various objectives after the British have taken them.

New outbreaks of fighting were reported at Batavia, Bandoeng, and Ambarawa.

A British statement said two Indian soldiers were killed and 11 wounded in Bandoeng in skirmishes with Indonesians, while rioting Dutchmen set two houses afire after two Dutchmen, accused of looting, had been arrested by Indian soldiers.

Six British Thunderbolts bombed Indonesian concentrations south of Ambarawa, destroying several small buildings. In Batavia, intense fighting took place around Tandjong Priok harbor and in suburban Kramat. In Bandoeng, British forces clashed with both Indonesians and Dutch.

Europeans Kidnaped

A British statement reported additional kidnappings of Europeans at Buitenzorg. Indonesian sources at Buitenzorg said Indonesians planned an attack on the British from next Sunday to Thursday.

The danger of famine was reported increasing in the strife-torn islands. A spokesman said the situation in Soerabaja, big Dutch naval base, is critical with only enough rice on hand for four weeks. Red Cross authorities announced the receipt of a large shipment of relief supplies from New York city.

Aneta, in a dispatch from Amsterdam, quoted the Amsterdamsch Dagsblad as saying Dr. Alexander Loudon, Netherlands ambassador to the United States, and Dr. J. H. van Royen, minister without portfolio, were likely candidates for governor general of the N. E. I. The newspaper said Van Mook could be expected shortly in Holland to account for the policy pursued in the Indies, and the question of a successor to A. W. L. Tjarda van Starkenborg Stachouwer, govern general who resigned, will be discussed.

6,299 VETERANS IN STATE PLACED BY U. S. SERVICE

United States employment service offices placed 6,299 returning veterans in jobs in Illinois in October, an increase of 57 per cent over the 4,012 placements reported in September, Charles P. Casey, state USES director, and Col. H. H. Weimer, state veterans' employment representative, said yesterday. Handicapped veterans were placed in 491 jobs in October. Of the 25 per cent of returning veterans who have reemployment rights in former jobs, some are unable to return to work because of physical disabilities suffered in service.

HOMMA INDICTED FOR PERMITTING MARCH OF DEATH

TOKYO, Dec. 9 [Sunday]—(AP)—The United States today formally charged Lt. Gen. Masahura Homma, conqueror of the Philippines, with permitting the death march of Bataan and other atrocities against Filipinos and Americans.

Gen. Masahura Homma

The indictment, made public by Gen. MacArthur, also named four other officers accused of sanctioning murder, brutalities, and other crimes during the early months of the war in the Philippines.

Homma, 58, who is held at Omori prison camp outside Tokyo, will be taken to Manila for trial shortly, presumably before the same type of military commission which two days ago sentenced Lt. Gen. Yamashita to death. Some of the other officers named already are in the Philippines.

Name Kempei Tai Chiefs

The indictment, consisting of two broad charges and 42 specifications, does not accuse Homma himself of committing atrocities or specifically ordering them, but of permitting troops under his command to murder, rape, rob, pillage, and otherwise violate the laws of war.

The other officers listed were Lt. Col. Saichi Ohta, commander of the dreaded Kempei Tai [military police] in the Philippines during 1942; Maj. Zanzo Saito, commander of the so-called "Tiger unit" of the Japanese army; Maj. Takashi Tohei, commander of the Kempei Tai unit near Manila, and Col. Akira Nagahama, chief of the Philippines Kempei Tai from 1942 to 1945.

Atrocities mentioned included the bombing of Manila by the Japanese after it had been declared an open city, the bombing of a general hospital on Bataan, the bayoneting to death of American and Filipino hospital patients, the beheading of an entire Filipino family, and the use of Filipino prisoners as live targets in bayonet practice.

Trials Start Dec. 17

Particular emphasis was laid on the Bataan death march, in which thousands of American and Filipino prisoners of war perished, many of them by the bayonets of guards.

The first war criminal trials in Japan will begin at Yokohama Dec. 17, when an American military tribunal will hear evidence against 300 Japanese accused of atrocities against American prisoners of war. These first trials include none of the so-called major suspects.

The Japanese government announced it favors retention of the sovereignty of Emperor Hirohito. Dr. Joji Matsumoto, minister without portfolio, voiced the cabinet's position before the diet yesterday and Premier Shidehara quickly acquiesced.

Democracy in Japan must be "under the emperor and around the diet which is reelected by the will of the masses," Shidehara said.

Yamashita Case Ordered Held Up Pending Writ

TOKYO, Dec. 9, Sunday—(AP)—Gen. McArthur's headquarters announced today Secretary of War Patterson has ordered that final action in the Gen. Yamashita case be withheld pending disposition of the United States Supreme court of petitions for writ of habeas corpus and prohibitions. Yamashita is under sentence of hanging decreed by a military court as punishment for condoning atrocities by his Japanese troops in the Philippines.

URGES PAY HIKE OF $2,000 A YEAR FOR CITY JUDGES

Kell's Proposal Is Sent to Finance Committee

Immediate passage of an ordinance to raise salaries of associate judges of the Municipal court from $10,000 to $12,000, and of the chief justice from $15,000 to $17,000, was urged in a resolution presented to the city council yesterday by Ald. Kells [28th]. On the motion of Ald. Bowler [25th], however, the measure was transferred to the finance committee, with an indication that it will be tabled.

Mayor Kelly looked askance at Kells' proposal, and Ald. Lindell [9th] got to his feet and said, "Let's not let the executives build up their salaries so we can't take care of the little fellows."

Juke Box Tax Voted

An ordinance levying a $50 tax on juke boxes, and carrying no regulatory provisions, was enacted by the council, substituting for a regulatory ordinance providing a similar tax which was declared invalid last month by the Illinois Supreme court. The court ruled that $50 was not commensurate with the costs of the regulations. Corporation Counsel Hodes and his first assistant, Joseph F. Grossman, said the juke box law was the first ordinance enacted in the history of the council as strictly a revenue raising measure.

Ald. Kean [31st] said the juke box license law is expected to raise $350,000 a year. A companion ordinance levying a fee of $20 on shooting galleries and automatic amusement devices will raise another $50,000.

Garbage Ordinance Delayed

A proposed ordinance to require all families to dispose of garbage in suitable containers was not in form yesterday to be reported to the council by a subcommittee of the finance committee. Mayor Kelly has instructed the subcommittee to have its report prepared for the next meeting of the council, Dec. 17.

In the meantime police will issue summons to persons found emptying garbage in alleys. Thirty thousand garbage cans were distributed recently in the area bounded by 39th and Division sts. and Halsted st. and Lake Michigan, but many of the cans are not being used.

Gen. Stilwell pins D. S. C. to dress of Mary Masuda in honor of her dead brother. Her two other brothers (left and right, rear) and parents witness ceremony.

Santa Ana, Cal., Dec. 8 (AP)—Gen. Stilwell, former commander of the China-India-Burma sector, flew here from Washington, D. C., today and presented the distinguished service cross to the family of a young Japanese-American soldier killed in action in Italy.

"I have never yet found a Nisei who didn't do his full duty right up to the handle," Gen. Stilwell said as he pinned the nation's second highest award on the dress of Mary Masuda, 34, sister of Staff Sgt. Kazuo Masuda, who died of wounds he received at Cassino in a single handed attack on a Nazi position Aug. 27, 1944.

"I feel it an honor to be delegated to make this award," the general continued. "Sgt. Masuda, in winning this, ras won the respect and admiration of all real Americans."

FRENCH GET BILL TO SEIZE GAS AND ELECTRIC PLANTS

15 Man Management Group Proposed

BY DAVID DARRAH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Dec. 8—Gen. De Gaulle's new deal program progressed today when the French cabinet began examination of Minister of Industrial Production Marcel Paul's bill for nationalizing electric power and gas before sending it to the assembly.

Paul's bill provides for setting up what will be known as the national electricity and gas service, managed by a commission of 15 members, five representing consumers, five representing employes, and five representing the public.

France next week faces drastic reductions in the use of electricity, with power to be cut off during a large part of the day because drouth and the coal shortage have cut production.

Predicts Increased Output

The bill was described by Gen. De Gaulle today as providing for French industry what the bank credit reform measure passed last week provided for the finances of the country.

Paul, who is a Communist, said that his scheme would increase output of electricity from 13 million to 23 million kilowatts. He said that the measure was designed to free power production from control by "trusts." Under the proposed bill local companies will not be absorbed by the state but will be subject to state control. They "will receive an indemnity which will enable them to meet their charges and at the same time distribute dividends to stockholders equal to the average dividend between the years 1929 and 1939."

Cabinet Gets Budget

The cabinet also received Finance Minister Rene Pleven's budget, which he hopes the assembly will pass before the end of the year. Pleven estimates that the country will spend 460 billion francs in 1946 and he hopes to meet 220 billions of this amount from revenue. [The franc is worth 2 cents.]

VICTORY DERBY RAISES $100,000 TO AID CHILDREN

Party One of City's Gayest and Most Profitable

BY ELEANOR PAGE

One of the largest and gayest of post-war benefit parties and one of the most unusual of any season drew a seemingly endless influx of merrymakers to the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel last night when the woman's board of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society presented its "Victory Derby."

The party was one of the richest in point of view of profits that has been held in the city, for more than $100,000 will go into the coffers of the society to aid its work in the care of dependent Illinois children.

On the unusual side were the auctioning of a live race horse; a series of horse races featuring wooden ponies and pretty young professional models dressed in brief white shorts and "racing silks"; several betting booths, a pari-mutuel system, and race programs in which the horses were listed as owned and trained by various members of the board.

On the Gala Side

On the gala side were the costumes of the hundreds of pretty women who came on from pre-dinner cocktail parties to enjoy an entertaining evening for a worthwhile cause. Several huge purple orchids blossomed on one shoulder of the distinctive black lace gown worn by Mrs. Jacob Baur, general chairman.

A diamond necklace with an emerald and diamond pendant blazed at the neck of the emerald green taffeta gown worn by Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, wife of the chairman of the society. One of the loveliest frocks at the party was worn by the McCormick's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Brooks McCormick, who was hostess with her husband and Mrs. Aldis J. Browne Jr., to two large tables of young people.

Mrs. Brooks McCormick's gown was of plum colored taffeta, printed in candy paper stripes of deep pink, and made with an unusually full and skilfully draped hipline. Among the guests at these two tables were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford II., of Detroit.

$75,000 from Race Week

Seventy-five thousand dollars of the party's proceeds was received thru the second charity race week at Sportsman's Park this fall, and the society was indebted to the park's owner, John L. Keeshin, for the betting booths and mutuel system. Mrs. Keeshin, petite and dark-haired, was wearing a black crepe bare-midriff gown.

Mrs. E. Harris Brewer, in a white crepe gown and matching jacket embroidered in crystal and silver sequins; Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, in a half and half dress combining parma violet and soft, clear, green; Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, in lettuce green taffeta and black lace, and Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr., in a long sleeved gown of black crepe, were others whose stunning gowns added sartorial dash to the evening.

The race horse, Sweep Flag, was donated to the society by Mrs. M. Peter Miller Jr.

The horse was auctioned to Thomas Barrett and R. A. Bloomquist. Douglas Huntress bought an electric refrigerator for $200, Mrs. Homer P. Hargrave a fitted traveling case for $135, and Mrs. Baur a Paisley blouse for $80.

'EVANSTON MAN' FOUND DEAD IN BIG N. Y. HOTEL

New York, Dec. 8 (AP)—Police tonight were investigating the death of a middle aged man found in his room in the Hotel Biltmore with all obvious clews to his identity removed or defaced. Police said the man had registered at the hotel yesterday as Frank C. Conlan of Evanston, Ill.

He was found dead tonight after a maid had noticed that a "Do not disturb" sign had hung on his door for more than 30 hours. Police quoted the hotel physician, Dr. Thomas Galvin, as saying the man apparently died of a heart attack.

A detective said labels had been snipped from the man's suit, a part of the sweatband of his hat cut out, the maker's name trimmed from one of his two shirts, laundry marks on his linen smudged, and inked serial numbers rubbed from the insides of his shoes. The man was about 50, 6 feet 2 inches tall, and weighed 180 pounds. A partly filled whisky bottle and two glasses were found in the 18th floor room.

COOK COUNTY'S HOSPITAL BARES INCREASED LOAD

Officials Explain Why Delays Occur

County hospital officials reported yesterday that there has been a gradual increase in the number of patients handled in the hospital since V-J day. Preparations are being made to care for an increasing number next year, they said.

Gen. Manus MacCloskey, hospital warden, reported that 2,444 persons were bed patients in the hospital last week and that the daily average since Dec. 1 has been close to that figure. The hospital had a daily average of 2,330 patients last August.

Average Low in 1944

Gen. MacCloskey said that the record number of bed patients treated in the hospital was 3,384 April 18, 1939. The daily average for that year was close to 3,200. The hospital records showed that there was a gradual decrease in the number of patients handled in the war years and that a low was reached in 1944, when the daily average was 2,134. The hospital has 3,400 beds.

Dr. Ole C. Nelson, medical director, said that despite the reduction in the number of patients treated the hospital was handicapped because of a lack of nurses and a reduced medical staff.

Nursing Situation Critical

Dr. Nelson said that many of the graduate interns are returning from war service for additional experience as resident physicians and that the intern staff is also increasing. He reported that the nursing situation is still critical—that the nursing staff is at present about one-half of the size needed.

Both officials denied that there was any basis for criticism expressed by police officials as to the hospital's handling of incoming patients. The police complain that wagonmen are made to wait from one-half hour to two hours while hospital patients are going thru the receiving office.

Delay for X-Ray Tests

Both Gen. MacCloskey and Dr. Nelson said orders had been issued that police cases be given immediate attention. Dr. Nelson said that frequently a person brought to the hospital by the police requires an X-ray examination to determine whether he shall remain as a bed patient, be sent home, or locked up.

"In cases of this type, there is a delay, but that cannot be avoided," Dr. Nelson said. "However, there is seldom a delay caused by arrival of a large number of patients at one time. When that happens, physicians are summoned from elsewhere in the hospital to give aid."

Gen. MacCloskey released figures showing the large number of persons examined or treated, in addition to bed patients. On Wednesday of last week, 417 persons were examined in the hospital receiving office, of whom 216 were admitted as bed patients. In addition, 518 persons were treated in the hospital clinic, or "out patient" department.

America is "too big," a GI's bride who arrived here yesterday from Baltimore, Md., after a 21 day voyage by boat from Africa, exclaimed in the Union station. She is Mrs. Marie Asaura Callahan, 22, of Oran, Algeria, a Spanish and French girl, who is on her way to join her husband, Corp. Van Callahan of Kent, Wash. They were married two years ago in Oran and have been separated for six months. Mrs. Callahan left Chicago aboard a Milwaukee road train last night.

MORE 89TH MEN START FOR U. S.; 78TH MUST WAIT

PARIS, Dec. 8 (AP)—Additional elements of the 89th infantry division sailed for home today from Le Havre, United States redeployment authorities said. The first elements of the division sailed yesterday. Five thousand other men are being shuttled to England for shipment home.

Theater service forces headquarters said there were no plans for redeployment of the 78th infantry division. Two regimental combat teams of the 78th relieved the 82d air borne division in the occupation of Berlin in mid-November. A third regimental combat team is at Bremen. The redeployment status of other European theater units:

Seventy-fifth infantry division—first elements at home.

Seventy-ninth infantry and 12th armored divisions—on the seas.

Twenty-sixth infantry division—arriving at Calas staging area near Marseille.

Ninetieth infantry division—in Calas staging area.

Eighty-second air borne division—scheduled to arrive at Le Havre staging area between Dec. 11 and 19. Some advance elements at sea.

The 29th, 100th, 84th, 80th and 94th infantry divisions, 2d armored division and 22d corps headquarters—alerted; not yet moved to redeployment centers.

U. S. SLAV CHIEF HAILS SOVIET AS 'EXAMPLE'

MOSCOW, Dec. 8 (AP)—Leo Krzycki, president of the All-Slav committee of the United States, said in a speech to Russia's central trades union council today that "many people want to take examples from you and more and more Americans will come here to give you friendly handshakes and embrace you." Krzycki said he brought greetings from CIO President Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Commenting on Poland, which he visited en route to the soviet union, Krzycki said he found the government there represented the people.

G. O. P. ORDERS 7 TO CHART DRIVE UPON NEW DEAL

Sen. Hart Warns Russia Is Greatest Problem

United States give away its secrets of atomic energy.

"Would Russia, for instance, not think us the world's worst suckers if we did that now?" he asked. "At any rate, too many hold the idea that the atomic bomb has changed everything and that we must have a world-wide New Deal at once."

The former admiral said it is "hard to look upon the Russians as exactly friendly allies." He added that, in view of considerable complaint against the Russians, a "firm and realistic" attitude would be most likely to succeed with them.

Hart favored a nonpolitical foreign policy, said a world organization might be possible if Russia is coöperative, but pointed out that if the United States dissipates its strength it can't obtain coöperation.

Brownell Replies to Laski

Brownell's speech was a disagreement with Prof. Harold J. Laski, chairman of the British Labor party and reputed assistant in lobbying thru the White House the multi-billion dollar loan agreement for England. Brownell took exception to a Laski statement that "free enterprise and market economy mean war; socialism and planned economy mean peace."

"If the American people do not believe in socialism, then they should vote for Republican candidates," Brownell said. He said the Republicans should support the allied nations organization, insist that American money and supplies not be used to promote foreign power politics, and summarized his diplomatic views.

Views on G. O. P. Diplomacy

"We shall insist that our international relations shall be conducted in conformity with the American constitutional system; that there be no secret commitments that may cost millions of lives and billions of dollars; that at all times our state department shall give honest and efficient service to the foreign policy of the United States, and that there shall be an end to the present dangerous practice of conducting international relations on the basis of day-by-day, hit-or-miss decisions," he asserted.

Proposed resolutions assailing President Truman for a hostile attitude toward fair employment practice legislation and legislation forbidding collection of a poll tax in elections of federal officers will be referred to the national policy committee, Brownell said. He denied that creation of the committeew as a compromise, as had been stated by several committeemen, and said it was vital to have a continuing agency to express party policy between campaigns.

New Deal Blasted

Under the New Deal, the nation is headed toward inflation and communism, said G. Mason Owlett, Pennsylvania committeeman, as he discussed domestic issues. "The record of President Truman thus far is one of failure and mismanagement," Owlett said. "It has been highlighted by vacillation, broken by spurts of hasty, spur-of-the-moment decisions on complicated and important matters.

"We are still at a critical point on the New Deal highway of inflation. We can still turn back, and dig our way back to solvency, or we can keep on going and wind up broke."

White House Blamed

Owlett blamed the White House for the current labor strife, saying President Truman had told labor to demand a 30 per cent increase before reconversion and had refused to permit price increases to compensate to meet rising costs.

The attack on the Truman New Deal was supported by Gov. Blue of Iowa, who said, "The time has come to demobilize the dictocrats of Washington.

"Government restrictions and regulations are strangling production," Blue charged. "He who controls the economic power can at will control the political and religious life of a nation. Every abuse once charged against Wall st. can now be charged against the dictocrats in Washington. This monopoly of economic power is a threat to freedom.

New Deal Rules Thru Money

"The Republican party cannot win by attempting to outbid the New Dealocrats. They have seized the power of the purse from congress. They will use the resources of the United States treasury—the people's money — to remain in power.

"A stop must be made to the practice of writing blank checks to the President of the United States to be spent without direction or accounting, even if it takes a taxpayers' strike to do it," Blue continued. "The surrender to the President by congress of its constitutional powers of the purse constitutes political cowardice that is little short of treason."

Women will vote Republican to uphold the concepts of Americanism, a luncheon meeting was told by Mrs. W. Glenn Suthers of Chicago, president of the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs.

Welfare of returning veterans is of chief interest now, she emphasized, adding that the men and women being discharged "talk good, sound Americanism—which is Republicanism."

The committee thanked James S. Kemper of Chicago for his work as head of the finance committee and decided to expand the "dollars for freedom" collections campaign.

U. S. and Jap Sea Power Compared

(Story in adjoining column)

Charts, based on Adm. King's report on Pacific war, show how United States fleet grew while Jap sea power declined during war years.

DEFENSE OPENS IN TRIAL OF INDIA NATIONAL ARMY

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 8 (AP)—A functionary of the Japanese foreign office, summoned as first defense witness in the Indian national army trial, sought today to prove the independence of the late Subhas Chandra Bose's provisional government of Free India. The prosecution has pictured Bose's government as a puppet of Japan.

The prosecution elicited from Shunichi Matsuomoto, twice vice minister of foreign affairs for Japan, admissions that promotion of Azad Hand [Free India] was part of the Japanese war strategy.

Matsuomoto said that Bose, leader of Azad Hand and the national army, was brought from Germany to Japan about April, 1943. The witness cast no light on what is a mystery in India—how Bose traveled to Japan. He had vanished almost magically from his Calcutta home, where he had been interned, just before Japan went to war.

Bose was reported killed in a plane crash at the end of the war.

ADM. KING RIPS PLAN TO MERGE ARMY AND NAVY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—Fleet Adm. King delivered a parting broadside tonight against proposals to merge the navy and the army.

Adm. King

In his final report to Navy Secretary Forrestal as commander in chief of the fleet and chief of naval operations, he also criticized suggestions for separating naval aviation from the rest of the service and for scrapping battleships for carriers.

"Because of its mobility and the striking power and long range of its weapons," King said, "the aircraft carrier has proved itself a major and vital element of naval strength, whose only weakness—its vulnerability—demands the support of all other types, and thereby places an additional premium on the flexibility and balance of our fleet.

Rotation of Duty Urged

"In a balanced fleet the several components must be welded together rather than simply coördinated."

As submarine officers must alternate periods of service on submarines with duty aboard other kinds of ships, he continued, so aviators should rotate in other duties—"Aviation is part of the ordinary daily life of the officer at sea."

"The strength of the navy," King reported to Forrestal, "lies in the complete integration of its submarine, surface, and air elements."

"We now have before us the essential lessons of the war. It is my earnest conviction that whatever else may have been learned as to the most effective relationship of the ground, naval, and air forces, the most definite and most important lesson is that to attempt unity of command in Washington is ill-advised in concept and would be impracticable of realization."

Staff Plan Upheld

"Unity of command at the highest military level was never attempted," King said, "nor seriously considered. It is a matter of record that the strategic direction of the war, as conducted collectively by the joint chiefs of staff, was fully as successful as were the operations they directed.

"There is no 'paramount capability' among the joint chief of staffs to warrant elevating one of their members to a position of military commander of all the armed forces—nor, in my opinion, is there any known system or experience which can be counted upon to produce the man qualified for such a position. This war has produced no such man—for the records of the joint chiefs of staff will show that the proposals, or the convictions of no one member were as sound, or as promising of success, as the united judgment and agreed decisions of all of the members."

GOV. GREEN APPEALS TO HONESTY

Gov. Green enhanced his stature as a Presidential possibility enormously by his speech before the Republican national committee. One committeeman asserted that had the speech been delivered before a nominating convention, the governor would have been chosen by acclamation.

These compliments to their spokesman are pleasing to the Republicans of Illinois and the middle west. It would be a calumny on Gov. Green, however, to presume that he was seeking merely personal acclaim or personal advantage. His was a missionary effort undertaken not so much as a leader of the party but merely as a member in good standing. He was appealing to his fellow Republicans to be honest with themselves and with the country, to quit trying to ape and out-promise the New Dealers and to give America a decent, effective alternative to New Deal policies.

To this end he struck a bold stroke. It is a sad commentary upon the current state of the party that such words were necessary. It is a shocking commentary upon the befuddlement of so-called party leadership that the governor's indictment did not bring a spontaneous and immediate reformation. In truth, however, that would have been a little too much to expect. People are people, and habit is habit.

Alleged leaders who are so accustomed to straddling that they become uncomfortable any time they are out of touch with a fence are not going to be jolted into a program of forthright action by a single blow. Medical science, unfortunately knows no technique for transfusion of either grey matter or backbone.

Gov. Green said that the Republican party was founded to elect Presidents, not sheriffs; that local successes must not blind us to the fact that if it fails as a national political force it has lost its reason for existence. That is true.

Gov. Green said that the Republican party, which says it believes in private enterprise, has nevertheless offered only feeble protest at the efforts to destroy private enterprise. That is true.

Gov. Green said that the Republican party believes in balanced budgets, but has not had the courage to tell people who want something for nothing that the nation cannot give it to them; that the party is against inflation, but has tolerated inflationary policies to appease pressure groups. That is true.

Gov. Green said that the Republican party knows that our nation is the strongest in the world, yet its spokesmen have failed to protest effectively against a foreign policy based on fear; that the party believes in freedom, but that its spokesmen tolerate a foreign policy which fails to check the spread of slavery and despotism thruout the world. That is true.

Gov. Green said that as amateurs Republicans cannot out-promise the New Dealers, who are professionals at deceit, but that if the party will be true to the members and their honest beliefs it will gain 10 votes for every vote that it loses. That is true, and it must be said again, and again, and again, until its repetition breeds in the leadership of the party the courage and honesty which alone can make it deserving of victory.

The governor has set the yeast. In good time, we are confident, the ferment will work and the loaf will rise.

KANGAROO COURTS FOR AMERICA

It has been apparent from the beginning that most, if not all, of the Nazi leaders on trial at Nuernberg are guilty of murder, that evidence conclusive of that charge could be gathered against them by an organization no more adept than the Chicago detective bureau, and that they could be tried for murder and sent to the gallows by any honest court operating under the law of the land in which the crime was committed.

Why then, try them before a kangaroo court, under ex post facto laws that have the sanction of no legislature? One reason for the disgraceful actions of Mr. Justice Jackson in the trial, already advanced here, is that the New Dealers hope to establish a precedent for similar kangaroo courts in America. Comes now Brien McMahon, a former hatchet man in the department of justice, who now sits in the senate from Connecticut. In a New York speech he said:

"We must determine whether or not the united nations organization should be able to prosecute an individual or group of individuals within a nation for violations of a nature which may lead to world insecurity, without placing sanctions on the nation itself."

The pieces of the puzzle begin to fall into the pattern. "Violations of a nature which may lead to world insecurity" is as fine a weasel phrase as has appeared in many a day. Under McMahon's proposal a united nations kangaroo court, making up its law to fit its own intentions, could arraign, try, and punish American citizens for mere expressions of opinion. Such a star chamber easily could find that criticism of the united nations' folly, of the imperialist motives of Britain or Russia, of proposals to beggar the United States for the benefit of foreigners might "lead to world insecurity." The New Dealers would have an international Gestapo to loose on their opponents.

There is only one barrier to such an infamous proposal—the Constitution of the United States. Perhaps Mr. Justice Jackson and Sen McMahon are prepared to argue that in adhering to the united nations we have repealed the constitution.

DISASTERS AT SEA

The Associated Press, in an account of court martial proceedings against Capt. Charles B. McVay III., commander of the cruiser Indianapolis, refers to the loss of the ship and 880 of its crew as "one of the greatest disasters in naval history." The loss of the Indianapolis and so many men was, indeed, appalling. These losses, however, were as nothing compared to the loss of almost all of the heavy units of the Pacific fleet, together with 3,000 men, in the disaster at Pearl Harbor.

Capt. McVay is brought before a navy board to answer charges of negligence and inefficiency, but no one at all has ever faced a court martial for what happened in the far greater disaster at Pearl Harbor. Adm. Kimmel and Gen. Short, who were made the scapegoats, have repeatedly professed their willingness to stand trial, and on occasion have even submitted written demands for a hearing, but no one has been willing to accommodate them.

The loss of the Indianapolis is an incident in which responsibility could be narrowed down to the officer in command. The ship in his charge was alone upon the ocean. If the complaint against him is unfounded he can disprove it. At least he is given the chance to clear his name.

Pearl Harbor is not so simple. The commanders on the spot had nothing like undisputed authority or independence of decision. They were subject to the decisions and actions of politicians thousands of miles away in Washington. Adm. Richardson has testified that the fleet was in Pearl Harbor because the President, as commander in chief, overruled him. The war with Japan which led to the attack at Hawaii was touched off by what the politicians did in Washington, not by anything done by Kimmel and Short. The politicians knew the Japanese intentions from secret messages sent by the Japs in ignorance that their code had been broken. Kimmel and Short knew nothing of the contents of these messages.

The comparison suggests why the skipper of the Indianapolis is on trial and no one has ever been tried for the Pearl Harbor disaster. The politicians weren't mixed up in the sinking of the Indianapolis. They are involved up to their necks in Pearl Harbor. If any one were to stand trial for that debacle the jurisdiction would not rest with an army or navy court martial, for the real defendants would not be service men but civilian officers of government.

THE POST-WAR NAVY

The house has passed a bill placing the authorized strength of the navy and marine corps at more than twice the totals at which they stood before the war. At the same time the navy is paying obeisance to the lessons learned at Pearl Harbor and in the Pacific war. The battleship admirals are going into partial eclipse and a full half of the posts of the top command of the navy are to go to air admirals.

The doubling of the peace time strength of the navy comes at a time when spokesmen for the army air forces are asserting vociferously that the battleship is obsolete and the aircraft carrier, because of the limitation on the size of planes that it can launch, has already reached or passed the peak of its efficiency.

These assertions are not wholly proved, and certainly not to the satisfaction of the admirals. Until the nation is satisfied they are true [it is doubtful that the admirals ever will be] it is perhaps the part of prudence to maintain the fleet. Beyond doubt, it was essential to victory in the last war. Perhaps the airmen, who feel so strongly now that technology is on their side, should be reminded that some time in the not too distant future the development of long distance rocket bombs may subject pilots to the same technological unemployment which they insist today is facing admirals.

The cost of maintaining a navy and marine corps with a total enlisted and commissioned personnel of some 650,000 men is, by pre-war standards, going to be tremendous. It would not be surprising if naval appropriation bills based on this strength would equal the total federal budget in President Hoover's administration. Quite obviously, America cannot support for very long the most expensive navy, the most expensive air force, and the most expensive army in the world, without becoming a completely militarized nation and subjecting its people to the same low standard of living to which militarism has reduced the people of Europe.

The very magnitude of our projected expenditures for national defense is an argument for coördination and joint presentation of budget requests for air, sea, and land defense, whatever action may be taken toward other consolidation of those forces. Separate appropriation bills will produce in the future, as they have in the past, lobbying contests between the interested services, with extravagance in some details and the hamstringing of essential activities in others.

WHAT FIRE?

For years our friends from San Francisco have been glaring at us as if we had taken off our shoes in the parlor whenever by inadvertence we referred to that city's misfortune of 1906 as anything but a conflagration. Thus we receive with consternation the news that in drafting a new standard of safe bearing loads for buildings, sponsored by the American Standards association, the subcommittee on earthquake loads was headed by Henry D. Dewall of San Francisco. By now, we presume, the perfidious Dewall has been tarred and feathered and placed on a train for Los Angeles by a masked committee of past presidents of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

Since the close of the war, government bureaus have dropped more than 700 questionnaire forms requiring 3 million returns annually from business concerns. That gives us hope that the government finally will drop at least several dozen of its bureaus. —Kansas City Star.

SPY DRAMAS: WORLD WAR I.

[Following is an address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, and broadcast in the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK

Listening to the opera "Tosca" over the Mutual Broadcasting system a month ago, in which the hero was shot by a firing squad believing that the guns were unloaded, recalled to me the tragic end of Mata Hari in Paris in the year 1917.

The excitement of combat in 1918 and the intervening years had largely driven from my mind the interesting summer of 1917, when I was in the intelligence section of Gen. Pershing's general staff.

Gen. Pershing, his staff, and the 1st division were sent to France in June, 1917, to bolster the morale of the French people, disheartened by defeat and tired of war.

We met the general intelligence officer of the British army in Paris, the famous Lord Esher, sometimes said to be the most powerful man in England. He was tremendously impressed by the American officers, commenting upon their calm yet determined expressions. "My previous conception of Americans," he said, "was that of men trying to make enough money for their women to spend and the women trying to spend all the money their husbands could make"—which was a pretty fair description of the American expatriates in Paris.

We made immediate contact with the French war department and soon were treated with entire frankness. They told us of the secret treaties to divide the spoils. They also told us that information was going from France to Spain by railroad and boat and being radioed from there to Germany. They told us they had cracked the German code and that the Germans were informed of the composition of an American fleet in the port of Le Havre.

We passed this information immediately to the navy—for steps [which were taken] to prevent an earlier "Pearl Harbor attack." The navy was grateful for our information; when it asked the French navy why it had not furnished it, it was told the French navy knew nothing about it—that the French army had told it nothing.

The spy, a woman, was detected and executed.

The only other spy I have any personal knowledge of in that war was a German officer dressed in a French uniform who walked into an American battery. He was detained. The French command under which we were serving at the time sent for him and executed him the same day.

The sight of his erect figure and pale face as he was seated between two French officers in an automobile on his way to execution recurs to me from time to time.

Spies generally belong to occupations that can travel without arousing suspicion. You remember the peddler in Irving's story: a spy. Waiters can be anywhere without arousing comment and are in positions to overhear. Actresses can travel at will and can meet important people. However, I have heard it said that their shortcoming as secret agents is that they expect other people to be interested in them rather than being interested in others.

The French war department told us of Pope Benedict's proposal for peace, and the German Erzberger's meeting with the pope's representative in Switzerland.

There was a strong peace party in the French senate and chamber of deputies. It opened negotiations with Germany, probably hoping to get terms that would be acceptable to France. This, of course, was a criminal offense.

One of their members, named Almareda, was arrested and confined in the department of justice. It was then given out that he had died of typhoid fever. After he was buried, his next of kin had the body exhumed and a post-mortem revealed that he had not had typhoid fever, but had been strangled. The story was then changed to say he had hanged himself in his cell with his suspenders. It was proved that the highest point in the cell to which the suspenders could have been tied was his army cot, some two feet from the floor, and that the suspenders themselves were not strong enough to strangle him. He was murdered in the department of justice to protect higher-ups in that department. Therefore, the department of justice would not pursue the matter.

The scandal thus created was exploited by Clemenceau, who raved in the senate in the manner that had brought him the name Tiger. He brought down the government and succeeded to power.

French censorship was so great at that time that the debates in the senate were not reported in either the French or the foreign press, and, indeed, were not known outside of the general staffs of the allies.

Mata Hari was not a spy in the sense that she conveyed military information. She carried messages between the French peace party in the assembly and senate and German agents in Spain and Holland.

The principal conspirators were powerful enough to avoid trial. To placate public opinion, Mata Hari was sacrificed. According to the story that came to the American intelligence section, she was told that if she confessed and implicated her employers she would surely be shot, but that if she said nothing her employers would see to it that the guns of the firing squad would not be loaded. She could stage a great dramatic scene, fall to the ground as dead. She would then be put into an ambulance and hurried across the Spanish frontier.

The simple Javanese girl believed the imposition, struck a tragic pose in the moat of Vincennes fortress, and fell with the bullets of all the firing guns in her breast.

JOBLESS BENEFITS AND JOBS

[New York Sun]

Illinois statistics on unemployment insurance benefits and available jobs are of interest because of classification by sex. Of the 99,000 persons currently receiving unemployment insurance benefits, 62 per cent are women and 38 per cent are men. The ratio is reversed when it comes to jobs available thru employment offices, with 68 per cent offered for men and 32 per cent for women. It is a reasonable guess that many of the 61,000 women now receiving unemployment insurance benefits are out of the labor market for good, but even with this considerable number eliminated, it is likely that the number of available jobs does not equal the number theoretically seeking them. So far as men are concerned, there would seem to be four jobs available for every three men receiving unemployment benefits, but the actual situation is not exactly as indicated by the figures, for a big majority of the unemployed come from manufacturing industry, whereas a bare majority of the jobs available are in manufacturing. It is true, of course, that many of the unemployed who have lost war jobs in manufacturing industry have had previous experience in service industries or other work, but what might be called the sum of experience is not revealed by the Illinois statistics.

SECRET, BUT NOT URGENT

[New York World-Telegram]

Two months before the attack we learned that the Japs were seeking detailed information about our fleet anchorages at Pearl Harbor. Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, then head of military intelligence in Washington, tells the congressional investigating committee that this information "taken alone," would have carried great military significance.

Why shouldn't it have been taken alone, as well as studied along with any other information in our hands? Failure to evaluate that tip properly seems to indicate an absence of acuteness. The army seems to have been more interested in guarding the information that we knew the Jap code than in using the information we gained by knowing the code.

A BLOOD CLOT IN A VEIN

A 27 YEAR OLD man was described by Homans as having noticed lameness in one leg four days after jumping over a brook. His ankle and calf became puffy, but not black and blue, and tenderness was noted behind the knee when it was bent to relax the muscles. The patient was ordered to bed and the involved part was elevated by placing it on a pillow. Within a week swelling disappeared and by the 10th day all evidence of soreness was gone. The report goes on to say that after three weeks he was entirely well and went about as usual.

This individual had encountered an attack of thrombophlebitis, in which a large vein, deep in the lower leg, had been injured and a clot had formed. Since he was a vigorous, healthy man, convalescence was rapid, but all who suffer from this malady are not so fortunate, for when an obstruction of this type occurs in a main venous pathway, complications may arise. Four or five weeks may elapse before persistent pain and edema subside. Furthermore, it is not uncommon to find that after this period of bed rest, swelling returns after standing or walking.

In some, the thrombus becomes larger and extends upward into the abdominal cavity. From here it can create a similar condition in the opposite extremity. On rare occasions a piece breaks loose and travels quickly to the heart, where it is forced out into the lung. The amount of damage depends upon the size of the fragment, and sometimes the outcome is serious.

This disorder is not always produced by an accident. Milk leg, as it is popularly called, may be observed after an operation or childbirth. It is also noted during the course of a serious illness, especially acute fevers such as pneumonia or typhoid. In these circumstances, the mass forms as a result of inflammation along the vessel wall.

The majority obtain relief after being put to bed with the foot raised on one or two pillows. Warm, moist dressings often ease aching and hasten recovery. After the patient becomes ambulatory, an elastic bandage or stocking is applied, which is worn so long as swelling exists. In many, several months are required, but those who coöperate are generally rewarded by a complete cure.

There are other forms of therapy which are helpful. Dicumarol is administered to prevent the blood from clotting. Altho this preparation will not dissolve a thrombus which is already present, it discourages additional coagulation and minimizes the danger that a section will become unfastened. X-ray exposures over the thrombosed vein may also be effective in this respect. Sometimes the vein is tied off just above the involved area, in an effort to stop the process. During the early phases, the injection of an anesthetic agent into the nerves leading to the diseased member is of value in alleviating pain and swelling. This procedure is usually reserved for the severe case.

Today the physician has many weapons at his disposal in treating thrombophlebitis and thus in the future we will see fewer individuals who exhibit the typical aftermath—the unsightly enlargement of an extremity.

IT'S UNIVERSAL

E. P. H. writes: Is it necessary to know Latin in order to be a doctor?

REPLY

Latin is the basic language for any science or profession, but it is not essential in mastering any of these, including medicine.

DARK ROOM

W. P. writes: Will working five hours a day in a dark room for a photographer damage the eyesight?

REPLY

The chances are that no harm will result. After all the effect is not much different than that which occurs when asleep.

DIGITALIS

F. R. writes: I have heard that if a person ever takes digitalis, he will have to continue it the rest of his life. Is this true?

REPLY

Only if his heart condition is such that he needs it. Some individuals have tolerated the medicine for years without harm to the body.

WHICH HAS IT?

N. R. writes: Is asthma usually inherited from the mother or father?

REPLY

Either, both, or neither. Now and then there is no family history.

PATRIOTIC COLORATION

Mrs. M. writes: As a rule, the face turns red under excitement. Mine becomes blue. Why is this?

And some turn white. The response depends on the state of the capillaries of the skin.

YES

M. K. writes: Should a person with mitral regurgitation be under a doctor's care? Is it likely to become worse?

REPLY

All heart lesions may progress if certain precautions are not taken. A periodic checkup, by the same physician, will disclose changes from year to year.

FIDGETY

B. P. writes: Several times a day the muscles of my legs wiggle or vibrate. Is this a mental condition?

It may be, if you keep thinking of your date to jitterbug. A Stockholm physician recently described a condition known as "restless legs" which was thought to be caused by poor circulation.

REPORT ON JAPAN

JAPAN, Nov. 14—With another year rapidly drawing to a close, it seems hard for us out here to believe that the war is actually over. Except for the elimination of kamikaze threats and a change in the scenery, life continues very much the same.

It has been my fortune to have command of two different mine destruction task units, one clearing the way for the occupation forces in the Kobe Osaka area in September, and the other in the East China and Yellow seas. So far, gunboats under my command have destroyed over 700 mines. I lost one of my squadron to suicide planes in Okinawa, another to a typhoon at Wakayama and my flagship was so badly battered by mine explosions that we had to send her back to dry dock and move to another ship. However, I hope to be able to ride it home yet.

Needless to say, I've been eligible for discharge for some time, but since I'm considered a "military" necessity, nothing is done about it. There is a rumor here that the war is over, but local brass hats have been doing their best to hush it up. Until very recently, one received the general impression that peace was merely an untoward incident interfering with the successful prosecution of the war. However, an honest effort now seems under way to get ships and men back home.

Actually the American occupation has been a distinct boon to the Japanese. With a food shortage threatening, with everything rationed from newspapers to wooden clogs and with even firewood hard to get, the end of the war was a welcome relief. Now with the American "tourists" buying up all the five and dime junk that we boycotted six or seven years ago, business is flourishing. At first the Americans were received with some trepidation, but now every dogface is a junior Santa Claus. The emperor's rescript ordering Americans to be treated as "guests" has been obeyed implicitly and it has paid good dividends to the Japs.

Social reform is another matter. For the most part those people are so abysmally ignorant of democratic government and so accustomed to being told what to think and believe that there is almost no political feeling except in a few large cities. In the fields and in the villages everything is still done the hard way and women hardly ever rise above the status of pack animal and slave labor.

They have an avid taste for American "chokoretto," "cingarettos," and "chooring gom" and a deep and abiding respect and admiration for American machinery of all kind. But human needs are so primitive, human possessions so few and insularity so complete everywhere except in those few big cities, that an intensive campaign of motion pictures and enlightened newspaper circulation is needed at once.

It is simple enough to turn one's head and say, "Let them revert to agriculture and primitive occupations." But these Japs are too numerous, too industrious, and too ambitious just to go sit in a corner. That way trouble lies. A nation that went as far as Japan did in 60 years is not going to turn around and go back down the hill again. I don't think we have any obligation to the Japs, but I think we have a definite obligation to ourselves to maintain an active and continued interest in their education and political development.

Of even greater concern to me, however, is the problem of our returning veterans. On a small ship you live close to your men and what I have observed in the minds and hearts of some of them is disheartening and depressing. The inevitable hardness and brutality that becomes part of men in war will return to some degree with them when they become civilians. The reaction to prolonged discipline and restriction may well be reflected in resentment against law and contempt for authority.

The answer to this is evidently twofold. A strong and efficient police force, and a chance to pitch in on a big job. There's a lot of energy crying to be spent. If it goes into building, we'll see miracles; if it goes into destruction, we'll see chaos. Tell the thinkers and the planners to get busy. Give these boys a goal to shoot at so we won't have another era of racketeers, grafters, and gangsters. BLAIR A. WALLISER

RUSSIA AS A NEIGHBOR

PLACENTIA, Newfoundland, Nov. 20—I saw an article in the St. John's, Newfoundland, newspaper of Nov. 20, concerning what was called an "unusual demand" made by Col. Robert R. McCormick. According to the article, he recommended that the United States demand that Great Britain evacuate all her possessions in the western hemisphere, lest they be used as bases for future attacks again the United States, perhaps with atom bombs.

Such an evacuation by Great Britain of her present possessions in this hemisphere is one of several things the United States should demand as a condition to granting any gifts or loans. I suggest that should Russia dominate Europe, as she seems to be out to do, and should she and Great Britain clash eventually, England would not have much chance against her in an atomic war.

In the event of a Russian victory, would not the Russians demand Newfoundland and other British possessions in the western hemisphere by way of reparations?

THOS. FRANCIS MEAGHER

TREATMENT AT HINES HOSPITAL

Chicago, Nov. 27—I am a veteran of 32 months' [continental and overseas] service and on Nov. 20 went to Hines hospital for medical aid because of a service incurred disability. Five hours of bench warming resulted in a two minute medical interview, and I was told to return for hospitalization Nov. 26. On that day I and 30 or more other veterans awaiting hospitalization, viewed and experienced 12 hours of unbelievable indignities and neglect.

We were given chairs, not enough to go around, so that we took turns sitting down. It was miserable to wait and not know why and yet gain nothing by the waiting for nine hours until 6:30 p. m. One veteran became so weak he swayed in his chair and was finally taken to a bed. Another, with only one good lung, transferred from another veterans' hospital here for surgery, was sleeping slumped in a chair. An elderly War I. vet next to me with a rheumatic heart, after the nine hours, requested a "hypo." Never before did I see such indifference to this suffering, all thru this grinding, long-continuing waiting. I was on the verge of "blowing my top" when my name was called and I was told to go to Ward C-4.

Tired and nervous, I only wanted a bed and rest, but at C-4 was told there were no beds available, but there might be at 9:30 p. m. I was too weary and beaten to complain and sat around and lay on the table in the patients' latrine. But at 9:30 and still no bed, the stress and strain were too much. I wanted but one thing—to get out. I finally got to see a major and a lieutenant colonel in C-2, and explaining my plight as best my pent-up emotions would permit, I requested my clothes. I was directly threatened with the loss of veteran's hospitalization rights if I left the hospital and was presented with a form I briefly scanned, which stated that I would lose 90 or 180 days of hospitalization. Naturally, I refused to sign it. "You will be released here as AWOL," the colonel said, "and lose all your veterans' rights." I got my clothes from a sympathetic wardman and left the hospital about 10:30 p. m.

If the above mentioned indignant experience is a criterion of the "rights" I'm losing under their judgment of justice, then my loss is not too great. But if these indignities are allowed to continue, they are certainly a breach of faith against all the ill and disabled veterans returned and returning. I want to believe that the American people and those chosen to high administrative posts will take action to proffer a better deserved treatment to those who believe they were saving the American way of life. JOHN G. PETERSON

SPEAKING OF WAR CRIMES

Portland, Ore., Nov. 21—Supreme Court Justice Jackson is peeved. Many prominent members of the American bench and bar have questioned the procedure in the Nuernberg trials as well as the jurisdiction of the allied "court."

Interviewed by an American correspondent, who no doubt is more familiar with the common law, the basic principles of democratic jurisprudence and retroactive legislation than his honor, Mr. Jackson, angrily said, "Whether the aggressor wins or loses has nothing to do with his guilt. He must be punished."

After digesting the proven facts so far gleaned in the Pearl Harbor disaster, I would like to inquire, "Does the same rule of law apply to the American gentlemen who engineered us into the war and caused the death of hundreds of thousands of American boys, untold billions of dollars, and more suffering and hatred than has ever been known in the United States"? I would like to have Jackson's answer to that one. Justice, like charity, should begin at home. H. V. S.

SKEEZIX IS A WISE YOUNG MAN

Chicago, Dec. 7—Do you think Skeezix really needed a lawyer? P. B.

Prof. Mechem, under whom the writer studied the law of partnership, used to say that, except for marriage, partnership is the most intimate relation known to the law. While this does not prove that a lawyer is always needed on such an agreement, it suggests the seriousness and importance of that transaction. Yes, we think it was advisable for Skeezix to obtain expert advice, altho we question the necessity for some of the recitals inserted in the contract. Some lawyers try to use plain English and no more of it than is necessary.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT

ARMY "EDUCATION"

Camp Campbell, Ky., Dec. 1—The following letter is an expression of the majority of men now assigned to the 5th infantry division. Most of them are members of former combat divisions now deactivated and are recent additions of the 5th division. Most of us expect to be discharged within a few months at most, the highest point score being 49. Upon arrival at this camp we were informed quite clearly by schedules and orally that we would be kept busy during our stay here, and that policy has been strictly adhered to.

The vast majority of us are ex-combat infantry men who, until the termination of hostilities, were fighting because of the basic instinct of survival. What we fail to understand is why the army now expects us to undergo a rigorous eight hour daily schedule. This ridiculous schedule consists of close order drill for one hour; more drill in the bitter cold with machine guns and mortars; bayonet training; throwing hand grenades, and, last but not least, long hikes, our latest being one of 10 miles.

Surely the army can hardly expect men who have undergone what we have to take this lying down, particularly since we are potential civilians and not professional soldiers. We all hope to return to civilian life very soon and to continue an interrupted education, to learn a trade, or merely to return to our loved ones.

Why couldn't the army institute an educational program whereby the most popular courses or trades could be taught to all who care to learn them, or men could be helped to regain the knowledge of some subject which they hope to use in civilian life? Couldn't the army relinquish some of this worthless and stupid training, which will be of no use to us in civilian life? Surely this country, which prides itself on having the finest educational system in the world, could afford at least to start us off on the road to a good education. There is no doubt in any one's mind that the United States owes us the opportunity to reëducate ourselves or to enable us to regain a skill we had as civilians. [192 SIGNATURES]

ICE-FREE HIGHWAYS

Hinsdale, Ill., Nov. 27—With the increasing motor vehicle traffic, unless steps are taken to insure safe driving on our highways during the winter months, we can expect a still further increase in sudden deaths.

The state of Michigan does an excellent job in keeping their highways free of ice and snow. They use some kind of a chemical mixed with sand to accomplish this purpose. Last year when routes 20 and 12 in Illinois and Indiana were covered with ice and driving was extremely hazardous, Michigan's roads were free of ice and driving could be done safely. P. G. D. M. writes: "When I obtained a divorce in 1943 I received custody of my son and his father was ordered to pay $54 a month for his support. I did not receive alimony. Several weeks after my former husband entered the army in 1944 I received a check for $30 from the office of dependency benefits. I wrote and asked if I could not obtain $42, the amount paid for a child where there is no wife, but m, letter was not answered. Can I file a claim for back payments, which now amount to $230 or would it be better if my former husband makes request for additional payment?

You should have received $42 a month for your son only if no payment was being made for a wife. Write again to the director, office of dependency benefits, Newark, N. J., and ask whether you are receiving proper payment. He can tell you if payment is being made to any other dependent of your former husband.

I. P. writes: "I have not received my pension check for October. I have written to the commanding officer, 9th naval district, but have not received any reply. I am entirely dependent upon my pension. Can you advise me what to do?"

Pension claims are handled by the veterans administration. Write to the veterans administration, Washington, D. C. Inquiries about veterans' claims and pensions should not be directed to either the army or navy.

FISHING BRINGS FLOW OF MONEY TO TVA REGION

Tourists Spend $2 for Each Pound Landed

BY ARTHUR EVANS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 8—Commercial fishing is expanding on the reservoirs behind the Tennessee Valley Authority dams. Up in the tributaries game fish, bass, and pike get the emphasis from local fishermen and tourists who come to admire the lakes, parks, and dams for which they are helping pay in federal taxes.

Below in the Mali river, a commercial industry is being advanced to harvest catfish and other non-game fish.

Tourists are expected to be one of the main crops when automobiles start rambling again in force. Tho they may not catch as many fish as commercial fishers, the money the visitors leave behind is important.

Sportsmen Spenders

One TVA biologist estimates that 1 pound of catfish means 25 cents to the resident fisherman, while each pound of bass or pike landed by a visiting angler means $2 worth of business in the valley, in boat hire, gasoline, meals, lodging, lures, and other things on which travelers spend money.

With 10,058 miles of shore line in the reservoirs stretching from Kentucky dam to Norris dam and beyond to Fontana in the Smokies, TVA figures that the system with its 26 dams and lakes should produce up to 25 million pounds of edible fish annually. For years there has been commercial fishing on the Tennessee. Last year commercial buyers bought 700,000 pounds from fishermen in north Alabama, who got about $131,000. When Kentucky dam fills up its reservoir, a lake 184 miles long, the industry is expected to expand.

Sell 80,000 Pound Catch

Estimates are that in 1943, approximately six million pounds of edible fish were caught, including game fish catches of sportsmen. Commercial fishermen last month in the four lower reservoirs above Pickwick, Wilson, Wheeler, and Guntersville dams, a stretch of 232 miles of Main river, sold an 80,000 pound catch. Mostly it was catfish at 18 to 25 cents a pound, and so-called spoonbill catfish at 25 to 30 cents dressed. The latter fish is sent on ice to New York to be sold as smoked sturgeon. Carp and buffalo brought 10 cents a pound.

Most of the commercial fishing is by snaglines, unbaited, each with an average of 500 hooks and anchored to stakes. The snaglines take few scaled game fish. In 1942, 25 snagline fishermen took 600,000 pounds of spoonbill in Wilson reservoir, a yield of 40 pounds per acre of water surface, and it represented an average income of $1,680 per fisherman. One fisherman is reported by the biologists to have sold one night's catch for $305.

No Restocking Necessary

The reservoirs are not being stocked. After 20 years of fishing, Wilson lake is producing plenty of fish thru natural propagation.

In 1940, it was estimated that 1,340 persons were supported by commercial fishing in the lower reservoirs. Average equipment cost $66 and average income was figured at $600.

If the newer reservoirs prove as productive as the lower ones, Dr. A. H. Wiebe, biologist, figures the commercial catch of coarse fish should amount to $2,000,000 a year or more. Also is the subsistence fishing, which health authorities say has improved general health of the people of the valley by more varied diet. At Norris reservoir more than 90 per cent of the catch is game fish. A survey for 1944 showed that in April and May 157,000 fish were caught on 62,000 trips. Total weight was 273,000 pounds. Average individual catch was 2.5 fish and weighed 4.5 pounds. It comprised 49 per cent black bass, 43 per cent black crappie, 3 per cent walleye, the rest sauger and bluegill. In the summer season, May thru October, the catch was somewhat lighter, with 15 per cent black bass and 74 per cent black crappie.

CAPPER TO URGE EISENHOWER AS G.O.P. CANDIDATE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—Sen. Capper [R., Kas.] disclosed today that in a radio speech tomorrow night he will suggest Gen. Eisenhower, army chief of staff, as a candidate for the Republican nomination for President in 1948.

In his prepared statement, which will be broadcast thru his radio station in Topeka, Kas., the senator declared the Kansas general has demonstrated not only his military ability but also his qualities as a diplomat and patriot.

Capper says he regards the general "as a statesman-executive of the highest caliber with a military background, and an acquaintance at first hand with the intricacies of world politics."

ANNUAL FLORIDA STAMPEDE IS OFF TO EARLY START

Tribune Man Joins Group to Send Back Reports

BY GAIL COMPTON
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Vincennes, Ind., Dec. 8—The annual stampede of tourists toward Florida is under way. In hope of finding a place to stay and spend war earned dollars the caravan of sun seekers has started to roll a month earlier than usual.

To discover what one's chances are of finding a spot in the state to vacation and to get an idea of what the expenses will be, this reporter has joined the tide of tourists. In a car typical of many that will be making the trip this winter all of the famous watering spots in the state will be covered. Accommodations ranging from tourist camps to the best hotels will be visited and Tribune readers will get reports on the housing situation, along with costs involved in vacationing in Florida.

From Chicago and the midwest a flood of cars is headed south. Usually the rush does not start until after the holidays. A multitude of rumors of lack of accomodations and fabulous prices commanded during the "season" for any type of space has sent thousands south this month in hope of being early birds.

Gas Is Plentiful

The tourists have money in their pockets. At home there is little to spend it on. The glowingly promised post-war consumers' goods have not appeared. Gas is plentiful. For these reasons people are willing to take a fling at an expensive vacation, and Florida is fairly close to hand.

The Chicago Motor club estimates that travel to Florida this year will double last year's record throng. There are no figures available as to the actual number of Chicagolanders who will join the caravan.

The club said, however, that it is sending 40 Florida routings a day with an estimated three persons traveling in each car.

First Tire Blows Out

The first day on the road for this reporter was ominous. With the car well loaded, we set out full of smiles and thoughts of palm trees and swimming pools. These happy mirages lasted until 70th st. and Stony Island av. in Chicago. There the first tire blew out.

The tire revealed a well developed hole in the casing that was beyond repair. The spare tire was a rather tired recap, so it became obvious a fifth tire was needed if the trip was to continue. There was no time to file thru the office of price administration for a new one. Finally, after two hours, a friend was found who volunteered the use of his spare.

The night's goal of Evansville, Ind., on U. S. highway 41 was not reached. Dusk fell early and several hours of driving in the dark quickly showed the dangers involved were not worth the mileage gained, and the car was garaged here.

The car, a 1940 Chevrolet with 83,000 miles on the speedometer, was safe for the road, thanks to Chicago's system of safety lanes and regular inspections. Many other cars, however, proved to be without tail lights or with only one headlight, and as a result the highway was dangerous after dark. Several times, when blinded by the oncoming bright headlights of a discourteous driver we found ourselves almost on top of a car or a truck without tail lights.

Leaving Chicago, the car traveled out Stony Island av. to 130th st., a left turn to Torrence av., then to the Dyer, Ind., road and on past the town, where the route joined U. S. 41. This highway brought the car to Vincennes.

Travel was fairly heavy and one noticed that many gas stations have reopened, and car service is getting back to its pre-war level.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Dec. 9—Skirmish at Great Bridge, Va.

ON DEC. 9, 1775, there occurred at Great Bridge, Va., a skirmish whose importance was out of all proportion to its size. It helped goad the blundering Gov. Dunmore into an action which destroyed Britain's last hope of keeping Virginia loyal.

Dunmore was living on shipboard in the harbor of Norfolk. This town, the wealthiest in Virginia, boasted a large group of Tories. Dunmore, who had failed completely to come to an understanding with the burgesses and council of Virginia, knew that he could depend on a small Norfolk militia for support.

He also had some regulars with him on his little fleet. He constantly harried the anti-British Virginians by sending landing parties to seize their stores and ammunition.

The Virginians finally sent a regiment against him under Col. William Woodford. A few miles south of Norfolk this regiment found itself facing Dunmore's forces across Great Bridge, a structure which spanned a creek and some swampy forest land. Both groups threw up fortifications.

On the morning of Dec. 9, about 150 British regulars led by a Capt. Fordyce started to cross the bridge.

When the British were about 50 yards from the Virginians' breastworks a galling fire began sweeping them. Fordyce, urging on his men, was shot dead.

Woodford then gave the signal to advance. The Virginians swept over the bridge and thru the flanking woods. The enemy retired, and a little later the Virginians, reënforced by a contingent from North Carolina, occupied Norfolk.

Dunmore, back on shipboard and brooding over his humiliation, made up his mind to attack the town with every means at his command and to burn it. This he did—and alienated the last important pro-British sentiment in Virginia.

ABOLISH A-BOMB OR LOSE RIGHTS, DR. UREY SAYS

If effective control over atomic energy is not established, our liberties first will be destroyed and then our civilization, Harold C. Urey, University of Chicago professor of chemistry who aided in the development of the atomic bomb, predicted yesterday at a press conference in the Quadrangle club.

As to our liberties, he explained that in his opinion dictatorial methods would come into use in this country if a secret international competition to develop and manufacture atomic bombs began.

Cites a Possibility

He argued that the powers which now reside in the people would have to be delegated to one or two persons if the decisions necessary under such circumstances were to be made quickly enough and carry the necessary authority. As an example of such a decision, he said it might be necessary to scatter the people over the country to minimize the hazard of the atomic bomb.

"It is not possible to have another technological war and survive, Urey said. "Therefore nothing is as important as preventing war."

To do away with the danger of a war which might exterminate civilization, he recommended a rigid international control which would make it impossible for any nation to manufacture or store atomic bombs.

No One Should Have Bombs

"We will have to have laws made by an international organization and we will have to have machinery to punish individuals in any country who try to make or store the bombs," Urey said.

Asked whether he believed nobody, not even the international organization, should have the bombs, he said that was what he meant. He pointed out that if the bombs existed there would have to be manufacturing plans and storage facilities for them, and that these plants and facilities would have to be located in some country or countries.

Other nations, Urey said, would be fearful about the superior accessibility of these installations to the government of the country in which they were located.

He recommended that the international control body have access to mines in all countries where fissionable material could be extracted.

GI CASE AGAINST 30 JAPS READY IN SOUTHEAST ASIA

Crime Trials May Open Early Next Year

BY ALFRED WAGG
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 4 [Delayed] — The first indication of when and how alleged war criminals will be tried in southeast Asia for crimes against Americans came today in a statement by officials of the United States army's judge advocate's branch for the India-Burma theater. These officials, under Brig. Gen. C. C. Fenn, judge advocate, said 30 of 200 known cases had been made ready by the Americans for immediate hearing.

The British have demanded that Americans sit on the military boards established by Adm. Mountbatten in this area and help to prosecute the offenders against Americans.

It was officially forecast that the mass trials, particularly those involving cruelty and deaths on the "death railway" between Burma and Siam [Thialand] from October, 1943, until September, 1944, would begin early in 1946.

Much of the evidence was gathered by Americans under the direction of Lt. Col. John E. Murray, formerly of the federal bureau of investigation, now war crimes field director in this theater.

Charges Fall in 7 Classes

The war crimes in this area are listed in seven categories;

1. Death to United States personnel as a result of cruel and inhuman treatment.
2. Death ascribed to forcing sick persons to perform forced labor on short rations.
3. Sadistic beatings.
4. Failure to provide medical supplies.
5. Pilfering Red Cross bundles.
6. Cannibalism.
7. Punishment of prisoners for attempting to escape, in violation of the Geneva convention, to which Japs claim they were not a party.

Rail Work "Biggest Crime"

Regarded as the biggest crime against the allies in southeast Asia was the construction of the Burma-Siam railway with forced prisoner of war labor. Five hundred Americans worked on the railroad; 113 died at the Burma terminus and 12 in Siam, the latest information indicates.

The labor camps are reputed to have contained, in addition to the Americans, 18,000 British and Dutch and 65,000 coolies. The death roll was estimated at one out of every three of the prisoners of war, and one out of every two coolies, from starvation or lack of medical treatment.

After completion of the road in the fall of 1944 many prisoners of war were moved to Kanburi, Siam, and some to Saigon, Indo-China, where they were forced to labor on fortifications.

Massacre by Japs Averted

Lt. Col. Murray said a massacre of allied prisoners by the Japanese was planned on the eve of what the Japs thought would be an invasion of Siam by the allies. A Japanese captain told the investigators that orders issued about Jan. 15, last, to Japanese headquarters at Kanburi, were that not one prisoner of war should be left alive to be liberated by the invading allies. The Japanese proposed to kill the prisoners by herding them into bamboo fenced stockades surrounded by double moats containing 15 feet of water, the captain said. The bamboo fences were to be soaked with inflammable materials, set afire, and the prisoners shot with machine guns.

One of the Japanese whom the investigators hope to find and put on trial is a ferocious colonel. He is alleged to have had an American flyer, shot down over the Jap 33d army headquarters, beheaded with a Burmese knife known as a dah. It took three strokes to kill the victim with the dull blade, it is said.

"Suicide" Is Doubted

Witnesses are said to have reported that the colonel had the victim's flesh roasted and served to guests. The colonel left a suicide note and fled before allied soldiers arrived, but his suicide is doubted.

The psychology of the accused war criminals makes them indifferent to their culpability. They beat enemy soldiers in many cases just as they did their own troops. The Koreans who were camp guards and followed the Japs' lead assert that they had to adopt Japanese practices.

Reports Third of Romania Jews Lost Under Nazis

BUCHAREST, Romania, Dec. 8 [Reuters]—Romania lost a third of her Jewish population in the war thru German "liquidation," Dr. William Filderman, president of the Jewish organization of Romania, said today. Of 720,000 in Romania before the war, he added, 240,000 disappeared, and the figure excludes 40,000 expected to return from Germany, Poland and Russia.

Carrier Smoke

Aircraft carrier belching smoke at Navy pier, as photographed from Tribune Tower.

Main engines of the decommissioned aircraft carriers, Wolverine and Sable, were fully fired yesterday in one of the periodical testings given the ships, which are tied up near Navy pier awaiting disposition by the navy. Firing of the engines caused a huge cloud of jet black smoke to flow over the pier and adjacent buildings. An engineering officer on duty said the testing must be made on idle ships. The two aircraft carriers, used for training navy carrier pilots, were decommissioned last Nov. 8. Small crews remain aboard.

TERM RAILROADS CHIEF VIOLATORS OF SMOKE RULES

The railroads were the worst violators of the city's smoke ordinance in the past year, Frank Chambers, head of the city's smoke abatement department, reported yesterday. Three railroads were fined a total of $500 by Judge Francis Borrelli in the License court 10 days ago for violations of the ordinance.

Records in the smoke abatement bureau show that in the first 11 months of this year inspectors observed a total of 1,659 smoke violations in the operation of locomotives. During that same period a total of 507 violations were observed in buildings in the city.

Record of Violations

The record of violations for the five previous years was:

	1940	1941	1942	1943	1944
Buildings	2,449	1,797	1,185	784	648
Railroads	1,138	1,309	1,167	1,128	1,799

Chambers said that the records show that building violations have been reduced almost 80 per cent in the last five years, while railroad violations have increased approximately 75 per cent. Railroad officials recently were summoned to his office and warned that they must reduce to a minimum the smoking locomotives.

The railroad executives said that the use of poorer grades of coal, resulting from federal restrictions, was the largest factor in the smoke violations. Other reasons given for the nuisance were heavier loads required to be handled by the railroads and the employment of inexperienced firemen.

Use Electric Eye Devices

The railroad representatives promised that the nuisance would be abated as soon as better grades of coal could be obtained and, the employment situation improved. Chambers reported that better grades of coal are now coming into the city and that the companies would be expected to end the smoke from locomotives immediately.

Chambers reported that many large buildings are installing in chimneys electric eye devices which sound or flash a warning the moment smoke starts to leave the boilers. The engineer or firemen in these buildings can take steps immediately to stop the smoke nuisance. Building owners who have cheaper grades of coal on hand were warned that they should be careful in firing their boilers in order to prevent excessive smoke.

R. O. T. C. MEDALS TO BE AWARDED FOR TENTH YEAR

Tribune Again to Reward Outstanding Cadets

BY PHILIP MAXWELL

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will celebrate its 10th year of awarding medals to deserving cadets of the Reserve Officers Training corps in 78 schools and colleges in eight midwestern states this season and next spring. More than 600 gold and silver medals are to be given, a custom established by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, in the school year of 1935-'36.

The largest number of awards go to the Chicago unit, the largest in America, which comprises 30 high schools, while other medals are presented to high and normal schools, to universities and colleges, and to essentially military academies in the five Chicagoland states, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Indiana, and in Minnesota, Kansas, and Missouri.

THE TRIBUNE and W-G-N will be hosts again to several thousand R. O. T. C. cadets, among whom will be the medal winners, at a Chicago Theater of the Air performance on Saturday night, Jan. 19, in the Medinah temple.

Parade Annual Feature

Another Tribune supported R. O. T. C. event is the annual parade of 10,000 cadets from 29 Chicago public schools and St. Mel High school up Michigan av., held near the close of school in the spring. This newspaper coöperates with the Chicago board of education in the event and presents two sets of colors to the two winning schools just before the parade. The winners are chosen from federal inspection ratings.

That the medal awards are highly appreciated is shown by the scores of letters received from R. O. T. C. professors of military science and tactics, from school heads, and from the students themselves. Typical of the comments made by military leaders is this paragraph from Maj. John E. Conrad, who is in charge of the R. O. T. C. training at Western Military academy, Alton, Ill: "In the minds of the cadets, the award of a Tribune medal to a cadet represents the highest military achievement which it is possible for him to acquire at this school."

Schools Outside Chicago

The medal awards go both to army and naval units. The list, not including the 30 Chicago high schools, is as follows:

W-G-N PRESENTS '3 MUSKETEERS' ON AIR THEATER

Alexandre Dumas' famous story, "The Three Musketeers," set to music in the inimitable style of Rudolph Friml, was presented last night by the Chicago Theater of the Air before a capacity crowd in Medinah temple. The broadcast was heard over W-G-N and the Mutual network. Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, spoke.

Marion Claire, leading soprano of W-G-N, sang the role of Lady Constance Bonacieux, the noblewoman who caught the fancy of D'Artagnan, the swashbuckling romantic, sung by Bruce Foote, baritone. Porthos, D'Artagnan's close friend, was played by Earle Wilkie.

The score, one of Friml's loveliest works, was played by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra and directed by Henry Weber. One of the season's largest dramatic casts supported the singing stars. Four hundred members of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Banking were guests at the broadcast.

WOMAN KILLED IN CRASH

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 8 [AP]—Mrs. Louise Danner, 22, of Champaign, was killed today when a car overturned half a mile east of St. Joseph.

SLAYING OF VET CALLED UNJUST; KILLER SEIZED

Rock Island, Ill., Dec. 8 [Special]—Orville S. Bryan, merchant policeman who shot and killed an air force veteran in uniform in an alley here last Saturday, was arrested today on a manslaughter warrant.

Issuance of the warrant followed the opening today of a sealed verdict returned last night after a three day inquest. The verdict held that Bryan's victim had died of a gunshot wound "unjustly inflicted" by the officer.

The victim was Donald Nagle, 22, of Davenport, Ia., a former sergeant who had returned to his parents' home two weeks before after receiving his army discharge. He entered an alley behind a restaurant where he had eaten a late snack and was set upon by three dogs. Bryan was attracted to the alley by the barking and shot Nagle as he tried to clamber over a fence.

PLANE CRASHES AIRPORT TREES; 17 SOLDIERS DIE

Two Pilots Also Killed in Storm at Billings

Billings, Mont., Dec. 8 (AP)—Nineteen persons, most of them overseas veterans, were killed today when a twin engine transport plane struck tree tops and crashed as it attempted to land here in a blinding snowstorm.

Four of the plane's 23 occupants, who were en route from Newark, N. J., to Seattle, Wash., for discharge or reassignment, were in a critical condition at Billings hospital tonight.

Two Pilots Killed

Among the dead were two Northwest Airlines pilots, George D. Miller, captain, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Vernon W. Pfannkuck, first officer, of Breda, Ia., who died in a hospital.

Names of all but seven of the dead were made public tonight by Maj. G. D. Fairless of the Great Falls army air base. Other victims, whose next of kin live in rural areas and could not be reached today for notification, will be identified tomorrow. None of the victims was from the Chicago area.

At the Minneapolis home of Capt. Miller, a telegram offering him the rank of commander if he would return to the navy was received a few hours after he was killed. He was a lieutenant commander when he was released from the naval air transport service Oct. 15.

Tree Rips Off Wing

In the early morning snowy darkness the plane came in too low to land and the control tower requested it to try again. On the second sweep, airport authorities said, a wing struck tops of trees on a boulevard and ripped off.

The craft nosed dived to a nearby field and burst into flames.

The fire illuminated the vicinity and in the glare police found six army men and one of the pilots groping about. The other pilot was found under an engine which had been torn loose. The injured screamed in agony.

Bodies of most of the dead sat in the seats with safety belts still fastened. Billings firemen put out the flames.

Federal, army, and air lines officials prepared at once for an inquiry.

Hunt Missing Navy Flyers

Miami, Fla., Dec. 8 (AP)—Groping thru dense fog, a small army of war time assault craft — "weasel" marsh buggies, "alligators" and jeeps — was scouring the swamplands in north central Florida tonight in quest of possible survivors among 27 missing naval airmen.

Red flares and a camp fire, spotted by an Eastern Airlines pilot over the wilderness between Orlando and Melbourne at 2 a. m. today, suddenly intensified the three day old search for the lost flyers.

Thruout the day army, navy, and coast guard planes and a blimp flew over the swamp and patroled far out to sea in a vain attempt to locate wreckage or still living members of the six plane crews who vanished in the tropical dusk last Wednesday.

All the missing planes were based at Fort Lauderdale naval air station. The five torpedo bombers were on a training flight toward the Bahamas. One theory advanced is that they were flying in wing to wing "dead man" formation and went down in a mass collision when caught in the stormy darkness.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—The names of 13 United States army personnel killed in a C-47 transport plane crash in Argentina were announced tonight by the war department. The plane had been missing since Dec. 3. The army victims and next of kin included: Lt. Earl S. King Jr., co-pilot; father, Mishawaka, Ind., and Sgt. Clarence J. Setko; Mrs. Kathryn A. Setko, wife, 1412 N. 12th st., Superior, Wis.

LINDY TO SPEAK AT AERO CLUB'S DINNER DEC. 17

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh will discuss military aviation in his first public speech since before the war at an Aero Club of Washington dinner Dec. 17. The occasion commemorates the 42d anniversary of the Wright brothers' first flight at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

Lindbergh, who resigned his commission as an army colonel before the war, served as a special war department consultant and spent some time in combat areas in connection with his work with the United Aircraft corporation. He has refused to comment on widespread reports that he shot down a Japanese warplane in the South Pacific.

Robert Kinkead, president of the Aero club, announced Lindbergh's appearance.

TRACE MYSTERY OF RICH WIDOW; HOLD HUSBAND

San Francisco Police Act in Chicago Case

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 8 [Special]—San Francisco police said today they have begun an investigation to determine whether a woman who died Nov. 29 in a Portland, Ore., hotel under the name of Mrs. Delora Krebs Cline actually was the former wealthy Chicago widow, Mrs. Delora Krebs.

Reasons for doubting the identity of the woman who died in Portland have developed from investigation into the past of Alfred Leonard Cline, 56, who married Mrs. Krebs in Chicago on May 26, 1944, police said.

He Is Arrested

Cline was arrested here yesterday on charges of forging annuity checks sent to the former Mrs. Krebs by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. The arrest was made at the request of Chicago police and coincided with the arrival here of Atty. Gerald Ryan of Chicago, representing the estate of the Chicago woman.

Police said evidence indicates the former Mrs. Krebs dropped out of sight, so far as her relatives and friends were concerned, after she left Chicago for Portland with Cline soon after her marriage.

Ryan said a nephew of the former Mrs. Krebs in Columbus, O., made repeated efforts to get in touch with her in Portland by telephone, but that Cline always answered the phone and told the nephew she was out or too sick to come to the phone.

Bundle of Checks

Ryan turned over to police a bundle of annuity checks which had been sent to Mrs. Cline by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. These checks averaged $500 a month and all had been indorsed with what purported to be the signature of Mrs. Cline. Police said further studies will be made but that preliminary examination indicated all the indorsements were forgeries.

Two police inspectors will be sent tomorrow to Portland with Ryan, it was said, and photographs of Mrs. Cline will be shown to employes of the hotel where the woman known there as Mrs. Cline died. A Portland doctor certified that death was due to cerebral hemorrhage and the body was cremated after private services.

Police said they also plan to ask a court order Monday to examine the woman's ashes, now at the Cypress Lawn cemetery in San Francisco.

Life of Luxury

Police said that after the death of his supposed wife Cline came to San Francisco and began a life of luxury. They estimated he obtained $250,000 thru the sale of securities which had belonged to his wife and said they are investigating reports that he presented several San Francisco women with automobiles. Search was continued for an unidentified woman reported to have been with Cline since Sunday at the Mark Twain hotel here.

Police also revealed that three notebooks were found in Cline's hotel room here containing the names and addresses of approximately 50 women in various parts of the United States.

After arraignment on a forgery charge, Cline angrily refused to discuss his past life, but police confirmed reports he has been the subject of inquiry several times as the result of the deaths of women who had willed him their property. He was sent to Folsom prison in California in 1933 for a 10 year term for drugging and robbing a San Francisco business man and was released about a year before he met and married Mrs. Krebs.

His first wife died in 1931, leaving him $20,000, and a second wife died in 1933, leaving him $15,000. An English evangelist, the Rev. E. F. Jones, signed over an $11,000 estate to Cline two days before his death in Bakersfield, Cal., in 1931, police said.

No News at Home

Ames, Ia., Dec. 8 [Special]—Kenneth Frankhauser, a nephew of Mrs. Delora Krebs Cline, said at his farm home near here tonight that all direct contact between Mrs. Cline and members of her family ended shortly after October, 1944.

Mrs. Cline and her new husband, Alfred Leonard Cline, visited the Frankhausers early in October of that year, Frankhauser said in an interview, and left for Nevada after four days. About two weeks after they left, the Frankhausers received a postcard from Reno, Nev., signed by Mrs. Cline.

This card was the last communication which the Frankhausers or other members of the family received from Mrs. Cline.

NEW ZEALAND TO FORCE HOSPITAL TAX PAYMENTS

County Officials Made Subject to Fines

BY QUENTIN POPE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Dec. 8—Open warfare flared today between the national Labor party and local governments over hospital taxes as the Laborites introduced a law intended to compel local administrators to collect taxes to help out the soaring cost of national medical care.

Under the law, any local government which fails to move to raise taxes for the maintenance of the regional hospitals, which are approximately one-third supported by local taxes, every member of the local body shall be held to have committed an offense and be liable to a fine of $250 or $25 for each day on which the offense continues.

This punitive move was provoked by the action of Mangonui county. This small county, 240 miles north of Auckland, last year refused to collect the hospital taxes.

Its Subsidies Diverted

The treasury thereupon diverted the subsidies which would have been paid the county for operating its hospital and spent them on highways and maintenance works. This year the county again refused to collect the taxes for the hospital because its small community must provide $41,000, representing 3 per cent of the value of the farm lands within its borders, besides which the farmers must pay social security taxes and a heavy income tax.

The county also rejected a bill from the works department for a proportion of the cost of operating the major highways.

The government's plan, aimed at preventing an extension of Mangonui county's tax strike, provides that the government may order any debtor to deduct from money due to an offender sums sufficient to take care of defaulted taxes.

To Collect Thru Coöps

The administration means to apply this law by hitting the farmers thru the coöperative dairy companies, of which they are members and from which they receive checks for milk and cream turned over for processing and sale under the nationalized marketing system.

Hitting back at the government's new law, Mangonui county officials declared their tax rates are now more than 100 per cent above what the committee on local government held was a fair level.

The latest official figures covering hospital costs by the health department last February to a parliamentary investigating committee, showed patients' fees and monetary aid granted hospitals by the government in 1943, under the existing plan which leaves the national finance bearing rather more than two-thirds of the operating costs, amounted to 11½ million dollars.

Costs Four Times Larger

In 1938, the first year of the free hospital plan, the payment was $2,700,000, the health department said.

These figures show that hospital costs virtually quadrupled in five years, and that the local bodies' burdens have risen almost in this proportion, tho the government gave local governments some relief in 1943 by increasing its payments.

The figures of local hospital districts near Wellington show hospital costs are still soaring. Wellington city this year must find more than a million dollars for its hospitals, of which the 1945 increase is $300,000.

Mangonui must find $300,000, a rise of $46,000, this year. North Canterbury's 1945 costs are $800,000, an increase of 42 per cent.

TRUMAN LEAVES FOR YACHT TRIP WITH FRIENDS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—President Truman left Washington this afternoon at 5 o'clock for a week-end cruise on the Potomac river with a group of friends.

The party boarded the Presidential yacht Williamsburg at the navy yard, with the return scheduled for about 8 a. m. Monday.

The President was accompanied by Joseph E. Davies, former ambassador to Moscow; Senators Scott W. Lucas [D., Ill.] and Warren Magnuson [D., Wash.]; Treasury Secretary Vinson; Frank C. Walker, former postmaster general; George E. Allen, Washington insurance man, and Comdr. Clark Clifford, assistant naval aide.

$641,000 FREED BY GREEN FOR MEDICAL CENTER

Reveal State May Buy Downtown Building

Gov. Green yesterday released $641,000 to acquire property for the west side medical center, a dream of city planners for a quarter of a century. It also was learned that the 12 story building at 323 S. Franklin st. soon may be purchased by the state for consolidation of its unemployment compensation and employment service offices.

The money turned over yesterday for the medical center is part of $1,100,000 designated for the center and included in the state's post-war public works program. David H. Brill, secretary of the medical center commission, said, "This is really the first daylight since James Ward Thorne proposed the idea to Charles H. Wacker, president of the Chicago Plan commission, in 1919."

Area Is Blighted

The area within the center's boundaries—Ashland av. and Oakley blvd., Congress st. and Roosevelt rd.—is classed as blighted and almost half of it, said Brill, is so heavily delinquent in taxes that it can be acquired by foreclosure. The total area is 302 acres and is divided into 2,200 parcels.

George B. McKibbin, director of planning for the state, said proposed action to purchase the building at 323 S. Franklin st. is based on the advisability of consolidating locations of the unemployment compensation agency and the employment service because functions are related.

Price Not Disclosed

The building was purchased recently at a receiver's sale by Ben K. Goodman who has offered to remodel the building, without profit, to meet the state's needs, McKibbin said. No purchase price or other contract details have been decided upon, McKibbin said.

The unemployment compensation agency must give up its present offices in the Merchandise Mart before next June 30. The employment service offices are in another building.

McKibbin pointed out that this proposed project is not to be confused with the authorization given by the legislature at its last session for purchase or construction for .6 million dollars of a building in Chicago to house general state offices. No plans have been made for this larger project.

GROWTH OF MAN TO BE SHOWN IN PLASTIC MODELS

A group of plastic models designed to portray the physical growth and personality development of a human being from fetus to adulthood is being prepared in the medical laboratories of the University of Illinois for exhibition next spring in the Museum of Science and Industry, the university disclosed yesterday.

Plaster casts, relief work, paintings, and drawings will help tell the exhibit's story, "How We Grow." Laboratory technicians said yesterday that visual arts probably never before have been used so extensively in a project in this country to interpret medical knowledge of human growth and nutrition.

The complete display will occupy 10 cases in chronological arrangement. A life size transparent figure of a pregnant woman will be the center of the group. Work has been in progress for more than a year.

KING'S MEN TO VIEW THE KING'S HORSES AGAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Dec. 8—Add signs of the return to normalcy in Great Britain: The king's horses will again be on view to the public as they were before the war starting Jan. 2, Buckingham palace disclosed tonight.

However, there will be only 21 horses to look at as compared with 80 in the good old days. The state coach and elaborate state and ceremonial harness also will be on display.

Applications for tickets must be made by mail addressed to the superintendent of the royal stables. The royal family also disclosed plans for a Christmas party at Sandringham house, Norfolk, a huge castle not used during the war.

SUBURBS BEAT CITY ON MODERN BUILDING CODE

Its Rules Will Be Plain to Ordinary Persons

BY LEWIS HUNT

While Chicago is only coming to realize that its building code is out of date, the suburbs, it was disclosed yesterday, are about to complete the joint project of writing a modern code for single dwellings that will be uniform thruout the area.

Compared with the cumbersome Chicago code, which was 11 years in the drafting, the suburban code will be so framed that the ordinary citizen planning to build a home can understand it. The code will be finished after one year's work. It will regulate home building for a population of close to one and one-half millions, almost half that of Chicago.

92 Suburbs Join Move

Ninety-two suburbs joined the movement for a uniform code and their representatives organized the Suburban Building Officials' conference. As a meeting ground, they used the Chicago regional planning commission, which takes in 10 Illinois counties outside of Cook. The conference will continue as a cooperative body to revise the code as desirable new building materials and methods are made available.

Most of the 40 conference members who have been most active are architects or engineers, highly qualified for the job, it was pointed out by Howard R. Olson, secretary and planning engineer of the regional commission. C. M. Osborn, Kenilworth village manager, is president. Besides the coöperation of the commission, the conference has had the help of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects and the Illinois Arthitects society.

Higher Building Rate

The project was started when suburban officials found that their existing codes, covering all types of buildings, were not comprehensive in respect to houses, Olson said. Suburban building, which in the last decade has been at a rate far exceeding Chicago's, is 95 to 98 per cent single dwellings.

"The uniform code will be more comprehensive than most suburbs now have and it will assure sound building based on reasonable minimum requirements," Olson said. "Uniformity thruout the suburbs will be desirable from the viewpoint of both the home owner and the builder."

Groundwork of the suburban code is the federal housing administration's minimum requirements, which the city of Chicago adopted in August, 1942, as a temporary war housing ordinance. In the introductory paragraph of the ordinance it was stated: "Unless immediate flexibility and reasonable adjustment of minimum requirements is accomplished, residential construction in the city of Chicago will cease and housing shortages and the movement to the suburbs and to other cities will be accelerated."

Many Codes Studied

Permanent adoption of the FHA regulations was recommended in the Chicago Association of Commerce's recent report recommending complete revision of the city code. Parts of the regulations, it was stated "contribute to better housing and to lowering the cost of its production."

Olson said that many standard codes were studied before the suburban conference settled on the FHA regulations as best suited to its purpose. The code will appear in compact size in a loose leaf binder.

The code will be ready soon after the first of the year and then will go to the local governments for adoption. Under an amendment of the cities and villages act, it can be adopted by reference, thus saving the heavy expense of printing in a local newspaper.

West Suburbs Act to Relieve Lack of Homes

BY AL CHASE
[Real Estate Editor]

While many communities in the Chicago metropolitan area are "doing a lot of talking" about the critical housing situation, two Fox river valley suburbs, Geneva and St. Charles, have started work on a privately financed housing project which eventually will supply homes for several hundred factory employes and returning war veterans. Under the leadership of a group of manufacturers in the two towns, who have financed a revolving building fund, well designed and well built homes are to be sold at actual cost, it was announced yesterday.

More to Be Built Later

Ground has been broken for a group of 40 residences, the first of 160 to be erected during the next two or three months. Later, it is expected, several hundred more will be built as fast as they are needed and conditions warrant. Cash received from the sale of homes will be placed in the revolving fund and used to erect more units.

The idea of coöperative sponsorship of a housing project by manufacturers in the two towns was conceived by C. T. MacNeille, retired vice president of Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., investment house, and a resident of St. Charles, said D. A. Green, St. Charles attorney. MacNeille is donating his personal services in directing the project, said Green.

Most of the 18 manufacturing companies in the suburbs are participating in St. Charles-Geneva Homes, Inc. This nonprofit corporation, which will convert the MacNeille idea into livable, permanent, reasonably priced homes, has obtained a 38 acre tract of land in the western part of the two communities. Half of the land fronts on Anderson blvd., in Geneva, and the other half on S. Third st., in St. Charles.

Some Ready by Next April

Frazier & Raftery, Chicago and Geneva architectural firm, was commissioned by the corporation to lay out the project and draw plans for the homes. J. Howard Raftery said that some of them should be ready for occupancy by next April.

There will be nine types of residences, he said. Some will be brick and some frame, containing one and two stories, with two and three bedrooms. Both gas and coal fired heating systems will be used. The lots will be 60 by 124 feet.

"Economy and speed are the two essential factors in building these homes," Raftery said. "With that in view we are not building many garages, but whenever built they will be an integral part of the house."

The manufacturers supplying the working capital for the project will have first call on the homes erected, to be sold to their employes or war veterans.

Will Be Sold at Cost

"These homes will be built at the minimum construction cost consistent with good building practices and will be sold at cost," he said. "Because of this and the fact that homes will be built in large numbers thru modern methods, a material saving will be effected for the purchasers."

The sole purpose motivating MacNeille and the interested manufacturers in undertaking the project and supplying the necessary capital was the wish to do all they could for Geneva and St. Charles in alleviating the drastic shortage of homes, said Green.

Joseph T. Carp, Inc., of Chicago, will do all construction work other than that local contractors can take over. C. A. Ashley of the Wells Engineering company will handle all engineering work.

Geneva built no homes in 1943 and 1944 and only one in 1945 prior to issuance of permits for the new project. St. Charles had no new homes in 1943 and 1944 and only three this year.

Erected in 3 Days

This two bedroom prefabricated house, built by Liberty Homes, Inc., was set up in Gurnee in three days by three men. It cost $2,500 at the factory. With lot, foundations, and other expenses it cost about $4,500.

De Kalb Plant Purchased by Prefabricator

Assembly line production of moderately priced prefabricated homes is planned by Liberty Homes, Inc., in a factory acquired yesterday in De Kalb, Ill., H. P. Walsh, vice president, announced. A one story building containing 35,000 square feet of floor space on a large area of ground fronting on the Lincoln highway was purchased from Gilbert R. Sheldon for $45,000 thru J. J. Harrington & Co., broker.

The building will be modernized and enlarged, Walsh said. Prefabricated parts of homes will be rolling off the assembly line within 30 days. The company expects to turn out 15 complete homes daily by the middle of February. By mid-summer the company hopes to have a daily output of 20 homes.

Liberty Homes has a prefabricated house in Gurnee which three men set up in three days. Another will be erected shortly in Wheeling. It will cost $2,500 at the factory, or $4,500 with lot, fundation, utilities, and other items. It will be 18 by 36 feet and contain two bedrooms, living room, kitchen, dining nook, and bathroom.

When the company gets into active production two larger types are contemplated, Walsh said. They will range from $5,500 to $6,000 complete on the site.

The company has a plant in Schiller Park which is being moved to De Kalb. Vincent Conley is president of the coporation which has its office headquarters and sales office at 1 N. La Salle st.

Work on New 2 Million Plant at Kankakee

The A. O. Smith corporation, Milwaukee's second largest industry, will manufacture household appliances in its new 2 million dollar plant under construction near Kankakee, it was announced yesterday.

Fred V. Prather

Designed by Fred V. Prather, Chicago architect, the big factory is being built on an 80 acre tract on state highway No. 49 two miles south of the Kankakee business district. The first unit will be 1,200 feet long and 315 feet wide. At each end of the long one story office building will be a two story office unit, 280 by 25 feet.

Prather, who has practiced architecture since 1912 and who has been engaged in war work since 1941, has reopened an office in the Willoughby tower at 8 S. Michigan av.

The entire plant and offices will be heated by gas fired radiant heat units installed in the ceiling. It is being built by the B-W Construction company of Chicago. About 1,000 persons will be employed.

News of the Architects

Henry Peter Glass, a native of Vienna, designed the new half million dollar studio building under construction by W. O. Kling and Associates on the east side of Fairbanks ct. between Ohio and Ontario sts. in collaboration with Alschuler & Friedman, architect. Glass is secretary of the American Designers' institute and an instructor in product design at the Art institute.

Walter H. Sobel has reopened his architectural office at 664 N. Michigan av. From 1942 until recently Sobel was a lieutenant in the navy. He was on the battleship New Mexico for two years.

Irving Park Rd. Building Will Be Built by Attorney

Plans have been made for a $200,000 one story store building to be erected at 4860-74 Irving Park rd., Henry Perlman, attorney, announced yesterday. It will front 110 feet west of and adjoining a building owned by Perlman with 300 feet frontage. Completion is set for Oct. 1, 1946. The entire project will represent an investment of more than half a million dollars, Perlman said. Sidney Finck is architect.

WILMAN LEADS; DECIDE PIN TITLE TODAY

WILDCAT ELEVEN VOTES CONNERS MOST VALUABLE

BIG TEN KEEPS WAR TIME RULE ON FRESHMEN

Will Revert to Old Code After 1946

BY WILFRID SMITH

Freshmen will be permitted to compete on Western conference teams for the scholastic year beginning in September, 1946. Effective immediately competition will be restricted to three years exclusive of the freshman year if the athlete began competition during the emergency period when Big Ten rules permitted freshmen to play.

These were the most important eligibility regulations announced yesterday by the faculty committee of the conference at the conclusion of the three days the directors, coaches, and faculty representatives discussed the problem of returning sports to pre-war normal. The faculty report was read to newspaper men by Prof. Ralph Aigler of Michigan, faculty representative of that university.

After the fall of 1946, university students must adhere to the one year residence rule before becoming eligible for athletic competition.

May Affect Iowa Quintet

The total of four years of eligibility, which includes men who began their athletic careers as freshmen, has several minor points. In the first place, the faculty committee yesterday ruled that any man who had had three years varsity competition prior to the emergency legislation which was enacted in the spring of 1943, now is ineligible. Thus, those who played prior to the war, such as Dick Fisher of Ohio State who this fall returned for a fourth year [he did not compete as a freshman], no longer can play.

This regulation is effective immediately and will affect, it was reported yesterday, one or more members of the University of Iowa basketball team. If any of these players already have had three years of competition at Iowa or any other institution, not including a freshman year which would extend the time to four years, they now are ineligible.

Hume Twins Are Thru

This restriction also ends the competition of other athletes such as the Humé twins, Bob and Ross, of Michigan, who now are in graduate school. Campbell Kane, Indiana's National Collegiate half mile champion, who is expected to complete work for a degree, is another in the same category since he competed three years after a freshman residence year before entering the navy.

The conference also will resume restrictions on transfer students after the start of the 1946 scholastic year. After this date all civilian transfer students must remain in residence one year before becoming eligible. Ex-service men, however, who transfer after the fall of 1946 will become eligible after one term, quarter, or semester if their scholastic grades permit. There may be only one transfer. If the athlete transfers a second time, he must remain in residence a year. Finally, any transfer student, must have been eligible when he left his original university. Otherwise he comes under the residence requirement of one year.

Service Men Get Choice

Service men, who were transferred by military order, are immediately eligible upon return either at the original university or the university to which they had been transferred while in service. Thus, the V-12 players transferred from Illinois to Purdue, for example, may return to either of these universities.

The faculty committee made a concession for service men which will extend conference eligibility to a maximum of four years if he was in service during the emergency period. On this basis, for example, Joe Ponsetto of Michigan, who played three years for Michigan while in a navy unit [he did not compete as a freshman] will be permitted a fourth year of football competition.

May Return as Graduates

Many athletes withdrew by military order during an athletic season. These will be decided upon as individual cases by the conference eligibility committee which will determine how much additional eligibility, if any, each should have. At Northwestern, where athletes were graduated in three years and com-

Dick Conners, 20 year old half back from Chicago, was selected by his teammates as Northwestern university's most valuable football player of 1945 at the annual football dinner given by the Northwestern university club of Chicago in the Continental hotel last night. One thousand alumni and guests attended the dinner which was resumed after a lapse of three years due to the war.

Conners, who starred at Mt. Carmel High school, thus becomes a candidate for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's silver football award to be made to the Western conference player adjudged the most valuable of all the most valuable nominees. The 175 pound athlete is a member of the university's naval R.O.T.C. and has just completed his second year of collegiate football.

He's All Around Star

Selection of Conners was a popular one since the blond speedster's all around skill played a prominent part in the surprising drive of the Wildcats to fourth place in the conference standings. Besides ranking among the conference leaders in ball carrying and kicking, he had few equals as a defensive player and as a blocker.

Conners, who placed third in conference scoring with 24 points, was the key man in Northwestern's ground attack. He gained 635 yards in 115 carries for an average of 5.5 yards. He ranked sixth in conference punting with an average of 39 yards.

It was significant that his outstanding performance was against Indiana, the conference champion, as he contributed runs of 64, 51, and 23 yards to enable the Wildcats to tie the Hoosiers, 7 to 7. His first run set the stage for Northwestern's touchdown. Against Michigan he scored the opening touchdown on the third play of the game with a 63 yard run.

Snyder Praises Squad

Dr. Franklyn B. Snyder, president of Northwestern, said the 1945 team was tops in the university's history for team spirit. He declared that the Wildcats played as a unit thruout the season, giving one of the finest examples of sportsmanship he has seen.

Lynn Waldorf, Northwestern football coach, paid tribute to the squad as having the finest attitude and team spirit of any he has coached in his long career. Ted Payseur, athletic director, also lauded the team.

Capt. C. J. Stuart, in charge of the naval unit at the Evanston school, said he was proud that navy trainees had a part in the team's successful season.

Major League Leaders Open Winter Parley

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

The major leagues' annual winter merry go round will start to spin a bit today at the Palmer House but whether it ever will turn fast enough to get from the plain business into the more interesting trading phase is questionable.

A lot of the magnates were here yesterday, their attention centered on which way they're going to vote in the meetings scheduled for tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Palmer House.

And, meanwhile, a lot of managers are on hand and willing enough to talk of deals they'd like to make but just as willing to concede that it might be just as well to wait and see if what they have on paper looks worse, or better, on the ball field.

Three Principal Topics

So far as anybody knows, for sure, the main business is the night ball subject, which is becoming a perennial; the Pacific Coast league's ambitions to burst loose as a major league outfit and possibly the new major-minor league agreement. The latter has been in the air for several years without progress being made and baseball has continued, so it can hardly be rated important.

Both the American and National will meet tomorrow and Tuesday and at one or both meetings probably will listen to the Pacific Coast league's expansion committee, headed by Clarence Rowland, the circuit boss. After the two majors have heard the story it may be carried to Commissioner A. B. Chandler but the feeling seems to be that the ambitious step will be slapped down before it gets to the big boss. Some of the majors are willing enough to let the coast league go ahead but they are not in the majority.

If the new major-minor pact over which they've been working for so long should be in presentable shape for the major's consideration there probably will be some more written about the way in which Commissioner Chandler's powers have been curtailed. Reports of such activity have been greatly exaggerated.

In the contract signed by the majors with Chandler last April the "detrimental conduct" clause is identical even unto the last comma with the clause in the original contract between the league and the late Judge K. M. Landis. The clause is in the new major league agreement, hence it is more than a little certain to be included in the new major-minor working agreement, if one ever is accepted.

Cubs Involved in Deals

When the majors met in New York last December, and that was before Chandler was elected, they added to their agreement a clause by which the commissioner, whoever he might be, could not term any bit of baseball legislation "detrimental to baseball." If he doesn't like something, it must go back for another vote, and if the two leagues override the veto it becomes law. This is the same law the minors want, they also appreciating that

BOSTON IS GIVEN AAU BOXING IN STORMY SESSION

Richmond, Va., Dec. 8 (AP)—Tension developed and tempers flared today at the 57th annual convention of the national A. A. U. before the national boxing championship was awarded to Boston, the men's track to San Antonio, Tex., and the women's outdoor swimming to Indianapolis, Ind.

Boston got the 1946 championships after two hours of bitter debate after increasing its offer to $5,000 for traveling expense and guaranteeing the national A. A. U. 50 per cent of the profits.

Kansas City Protests

Kansas City had protested the previous awarding of the championship to the Massachusetts capital on a bid of $4,000 and 20 per cent of the net profits as a pool for the traveling athletes. It needed a second count of the votes to show that Boston had won, 16 to 13.

The metropolitan district [New York City] was overwhelmed in its drive to switch the site of the men's track from San Antonio. The New York group, led by Pincus Sober, based its plea for transfer on the fact that many of its Negro athletes might not be welcome in Texas. On the final vote it was 16 to 1 for the Alamo city.

A two day period of jockeying wound up with Indianapolis winning out over San Diego, Cal., for the women's swimming, one of the most hotly contested duels of the present convention. The women's indoor was assigned Seattle.

Boxers to Go Abroad

Following the battle in which Boston won the boxing tourney, the A. A. U. also approved the sending of four boxers to London for a Jan. 21 ring show and also approved the competition of an Argentine squad of boxers in the Boston ring tournament April 8 and 9. In turn, the A. A. U. will send a boxing team to the South American country later in the spring.

Ralph M. Marlowe of Philadelphia, serving as chairman of the boxing group, said the four men sent to London and their coach would be determined by mail vote after the present convention.

At another committee meeting the eligibles for the Sullivan award, given to Anne Curtis a year ago as the athlete having done the most to advance the cause of sportsmanship in the preceding 12 months, was cut to nine.

They are, in alphabetical order: William Bangert, Missouri football and shot putt star; Felix A. [Doc] Blanchard, Army full back and also a shot putter; Arky Erwin of New Orleans, hurdler; Alan Ford, Yale swimmer; Dr. M. A. Northrup of San Francisco, wrestler; Joe Platak of Chicago, handball; James Rafferty of New York, track; William Smith of Honolulu, swimming, and Hazel Walker of Little Rock, Ark., women's basketball.

The convention awarded the senior and national junior wrestling championship contests to New York City.

Redskins Seek Eastern Pro Crown Today

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—Professional football nears its final round tomorrow with a climactic clash between New York's Giants and Washington's Redskins that has the nation's capital by its ear. Weighty governmental problems will be put aside as official Washington, like the man on the street, waits for the outcome.

The Redskins will trot out for the 1 p. m. [Chicago time] kickoff holding full possession of first place in the eastern division of the National football league. A victory would send the Redskins to Cleveland for a Dec. 16 engagement with the Rams, western winners, for the league championship, probably worth upwards of $2,000 to members of the winning team.

Eagles Hope for Redskin Loss

Triumph by the Giants would throw the Redskins back into an eastern title-tie with Philadelphia, providing the Eagles beat the Boston Yanks tomorrow in Philadelphia. Such a result would necessitate a Washington-Philadelphia play-off in Philadelphia Dec. 16, setting back the championship game in Cleveland to Dec. 23.

All tickets to the game have been sold out for weeks. Leading sports writers, radio announcers and college and professional coaches will sit with the 34,788 fans who usually jam Griffith stadium for every Redskin home game.

It's Baugh vs. Herber

The Giants are out of the title race, but Coach Steve Owen, famous for strong finishes, long has had Washington's number. In five final-day meetings with the Redskins, Owen's Giants have won four. And in their over-all series dating back to 1937, the Giants have won 11 of 17 games, with one tie.

Two of pro ball's oldest passers, Arnie Herber of the Giants and Sammy Baugh of the Redskins, are expected to tip the balance one way or the other in the finale here with New York's Frank Liebel and Washington's Steve Bagarus doing most of the catching.

EAGLES BATTLE YANKS

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 8 [Special]—The Philadelphia Eagles, knocked out of a tie for the eastern lead last Sunday, will close their regular season in Shibe park tomorrow against the Boston Yanks. An Eagle victory won't mean a thing unless the New York Giants whip the Washington Redskins, which would necessitate a playoff between the Eagles and Redskins here.

Owner Alexis Thompson of the Eagles, today denied reports that Earle [Greasy] Neale will be dismissed as coach of the team. "He'll be with us as long as he feels like coaching," said Thompson who signed Neale five years ago when he bought the club.

Several of the Boston Yanks—those on lend-lease from Dan Topping's idle Brooklyn Tigers—will be playing for the last time in the National league. Next year they will be members of Topping's New York Football Yankees in the All-America conference.

ILLINOIS ROUTS SAILORS, 58-41, FOR 2D VICTORY

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 8 [Special]—The Illinois basketball team whipped Great Lakes, 58 to 41, in Huff gymnasium tonight before 4,995. It was the second victory of the season for the Illini.

Jack Burmaster of Elgin and Bob Doster of Decatur paced the Illini with 11 points each, but Mel Riebe, Sailor guard, was the leading scorer of the game with 20.

Illinois led Great Lakes, 24 to 21 at the half. The Illini will continue nonconference competition here Tuesday night against Detroit. The first Western conference opponent will be Ohio State here Saturday. Lineup:

MICHIGAN TRIUMPHS, 69-49

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 8 [Special]—Michigan's basketball team drove to a modern Wolverine scoring record here tonight by whipping Western Michigan college, 69 to 49, in a wild contest that saw one Michigan man ejected from the game for too vigorous body contact. The winners led at half time, 36 to 19.

Bob Harrison, Toledo freshman who tallied 15 Wolverine points in the first half, was put away midway of the second period after he had slammed Western's Melvin Vandis to the floor.

Harrison shared scoring honors with Glenn Selbo, navy transferee who played for Western last season. Lineup:

BUDGE DEFEATS TILDEN, 6-0, 6-1, IN PRO TOURNEY

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 8 (AP)—Don Budge, seeded No. 1, today gave the old master, 52 year old Bill Tilden, a few tennis lessons in a 6-0, 6-1 drubbing to go into the finals of the $5,000 world's professional hard court championship meet.

Budge required only 25 minutes to beat Tilden, who obviously was tired from his drawn-out victory yesterday over Lester Stoefen.

Bobby Riggs, second seeded to Budge, defeated Fred Perry, 6-2, 6-1, in the other semi-final match. Riggs will play Budge tomorrow in the finals.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

Joe Wilman, the home town boy who made good in a big strike-and-spare way, is still in charge of the lead in the 5th annual all-star bowling tournament as it enters its ninth and last day this morning on the Auditorium Service Men's Center drives under the sponsorship of Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., and the Bowling Proprietors' association of America. The blond Joseph goes into its decisive quartet of man-to-man bouts at 11:30 a. m. with a Petersen point plunder of 237.15, a total pin collection of 10,140, and a won and lost record of 34½ to 13½ for the first 48 games of the 64 contest marathon.

Still continuing to startle the most fulsome and enthusiastic audience this world series of tenpins has enjoyed in its five year career was the amazing Andrew Varipapa of Hempstead, N. Y. The man of a thousand grimaces and gestures, normally respected as a trick shot artist and no boy as competitive bowlers go, is still maintaining the terrific pace with which he set out in the first match play matinee on Thursday. Andy carries into the final day a Peterson point total of 230.75.

While Wilman, two points plus in charge after Thursday's opening matches and six to the good following Friday's round, was increasing his advantage, Varipapa was slipping to third place after 44 games back of Pvt. Therman Gibson, the energetic soldier from Scott field, Ill. and Detroit. It appeared that Andy might well stay in the No. 3 spot until the schedule brought the two together in the final match of last night.

Fight for Second Place

For the alloted four games, Andy and Therman had the big house resounding with huzzahs reviving the opera days in the old auditorium. Gibson went into the battle with a 44 game record of 211.13 against Varipapa's 210.40. Therman, winner of the rich Petersen classic last spring and leader in the 1944 total pin tests, burst loose with a 214 game to Andy's 196. Then "He Man," as the chunky New Yorker is addressed by his intimates, won the second, a 227-224 thriller. He pursued that by firing a 246 which was too much for Gibby's 192. The soldier took the final on total pins, 220 to 216, but Andy's big third game earned him the Petersen point system edge of the quartet, 19.35 to 19.00, and dropped Gibson to third place with an overall figure of 230.13.

Wilman, working on the same squad as Gibson and Varipapa, encountered an equally tough opponent in Walter Ward, the Cleveland gent of the unlighted stogie who paced all total pin qualifiers last Wednesday night with a grand 7,444. Walter whipped up a first game of 233 to Joe's 208, but from there on the ex-soldier moved too fast for the veteran, winning all of the last three shells with 191, 254, and 197.

Today's program, with squads listed for 11:30 a. m., 12:50 p. m., 2:10 p. m., 3:30 p. m., 5:40 p. m., 7:00 p. m., 8:20 p. m., and 9:40 p. m., promises to be the most thrilling climax in the history of this head-and-head classic of bowling.

Meets Ned Day Today

Wilman, by most handicappers unacquainted with the sport, would seem to be the winner, even with a day to go, but the swift changes

HAWKS, BRUINS CLASH TONIGHT ON STADIUM ICE

Canadiens Win, 1 to 0, Over Toronto

The first Chicago hockey match of the season between the Blackhawks and the Boston Bruins will be played tonight in the Chicago Stadium. Each team has won one of two games played in Boston this year, the Hawks triumphing 5 to 4 and the Bruins 6 to 3.

Individual attention will center on the return of Frank Brimsek to the Boston net. It will mark his first appearance in a regularly scheduled National Hockey league game in nearly three seasons. Brimsek, recently discharged from the coast guard, will replace Paul Bibeault, whose goal tending aided the Bruins in their recent six game winning streak which brought them up from fifth to second place.

Brimsek's return, plus Mike Karakas' position as the Hawks' goalie, puts two native townsmen of Eveleth, Minn., on opposite ends of the ice. Both are graduates of the town's high school where each was in the nets for the prep sextet.

Probable lineup tonight:

Blackhawks		Bruins
Karakas	G	Brimsek
Marincci	D	Crawford
Cooper	D	Egan
Mosienko	R. W.	McGill
M. Bentley	C	Schmidt
D. Bentley	L. W.	Dumart

ON LAST LAP FOR BOWLING CROWN

Connie Schwoegler, 1942 winner of The Tribune's All-Star bowling tournament, is not above receiving advice from his father, Tony, as he gets ready to go into the last session of the fifth meet which ends tonight on the Auditorium service men's center alleys. Connie hails from Madison, Wis., where his dad owns a bowling establishment.

Top two qualifiers for the fifth meet, the winner of which gets the national individual match game bowling crown, were Walter Ward and Steve Nagy, both of Cleveland. Ward, who led the qualifiers with a score of 7,444, 20 more than Nagy's total, spent the last three years giving exhibitions at army and navy camps.

PICARD TAKES 2-STROKE LEAD IN MIAMI OPEN

Miami, Fla., Dec. 8 (AP)—Henry Picard scored a 68 for a 54 hole total of 204 to head the field by two strokes tonight in the $10,000 Miami Open golf tournament. Ben Hogan registered a four under par 66 for a three day total of 206. Trailing Hogan by a stroke was Harold [Jug] McSpadden.

Picard, who hasn't won a major tournament since he beat Byron Nelson on the 37th hole in the 1939 P. G. A. tournament, went out in 35 and came back in 33, two under par. He made an eagle on the par 5 460 yard 13th hole. After his drive, Picard dropped his spoon shot five feet from the hole and sank the putt.

Predicts Victory for Hogan

"Hogan is the man who will win the tournament tomorrow," Picard predicted. "Day in and day out, he's today's greatest golfer. I've never seen anybody hit that ball straighter than he does."

Standing near-by, Hogan grinned. "If I win, the man I'll have to beat will be Picard."

Decide Tenpin Title Today; Wilman Leads

native to the Petersen point system and the schedule preclude any prediction of sure victory for the 1944 runner-up. In the first match, at 11:30, he meets Ned Day of West Allis, Wis., twice winner of the All-Star under the present auspices. Ned yesterday went thru one of the best, yet most unprofitable days of his bright career. In his first three matches, he lost 10 of 12 games while tumbling 2,525 pins against the combined 2,642 of his three opponents, George Vallos of Youngstown, O.; Joe Sinke of Chicago, and Gibson.

Wilman will battle Gibson at 2:10 p. m. and Varipapa at 5:40. p. m. After the 15 scheduled man-to-man bouts are completed, the entire field will engage in a position round, beginning at 9:40 p. m.

Mrs. Paul Krumske may be boss of the home and can give bowling hints, but Paul, the former champion, also has some bowling secrets which he hopes will bring the title back to his Chicago home. Paul, who finished seventh in last year's meet, was seeded into this year's finals.

Another Chicagoan receiving strong support from the local fans is George Morrison, who finished seventh in the qualifying round. A first place victory, and the accompanying crown, would be George's first.

there were times when the late Landis was a bit too autocratic.

The Cubs were mixed up yesterday in a batch of deals, but none of local significance. They released outright to their Los Angeles cousin the services of Pitcher George Comellas, Infielder Reggie Otero, and Infielder Pete Elko. Pitcher Walter Signer was shipped to Nashville.

The Los Angeles cousins were additionally in the news with acquisition of Pitcher Clem Hausmann from the Red Sox in payment for Rip Russell, a onetime Cub. Los Angeles sent to Tulsa, also a Cub holding, Pitchers Ken Hicks, Paul Lammers, Joe Slotter, Catchers Roy Easterwood and Len Greene, and Outfielder Tom Accardo, the latter a Chicago product.

BIG SIX PLANS COMMISSIONER WITHIN A YEAR

But Members Say He'll Have No Powers of Czar

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 8 (AP)—Reports that the Big Six conference will hire a full fledged commissioner of athletics within the next year came from the winter meeting here today.

While the athletic directors and faculty committeemen declined to be quoted, there was little hesitancy on the part of several to say, "We are getting closer to hiring a commissioner—very close."

One source said the new commissioner would have "broad duties in overseeing the conference's athletic affairs," but added that his powers would "stop short of a czar."

Meet Again Next May

The proposed commissioner's duties would in no way conflict with those of the conference's commissioner of officials—Reeves Peters—whose work is limited to handling game officials, one informant explained.

The faculty committee, official governing body of the Big Six, and athletic directors ended their two day executive session by attending to what they termed routine business.

The 1946 outdoor track meet was set for the University of Nebraska on May 18, the same date and site of the next conference meeting.

Kansas City Gets Track Meet

The indoor track meet will be held in Kansas City on March 2.

Dr. H. H. King of Kansas State college was renamed Big Six representative to the National Collegiate Athletic association.

Approval of baseball schedules was postponed until the May meeting.

Loyola displayed superiority in all departments in winning its season opener, 69 to 24. [TRIBUNE Photo]

LOYOLA RETURNS TO ACTION WITH '69-24 TRIUMPH

Loyola university, sparked by its two veterans, Jack Dwan and Bernie Carmen, returned to intercollegiate basketball last night, defeating the American College of Physical Education quintet, 69 to 24, before 1,100 in the Loyola gymnasium. It was Loyola's first game since the conclusion of the 1942-'43 season.

Guard Dwan, who scored 21 points, and Carmen were the individual stars of the Rambler attack that produced an early lead and kept the Loyolans in front thruout the game. Runner-up scoring honors, however, went to Bob Azar, a freshman forward, whose 12 points gave him two more than another freshman, Gene McKeough.

Call on 14 Players

Coach Tom Haggerty's debut as Loyola's coach was made successful by 14 players of the 18 man squad. Dwan and Carmen, who held the Rambler attack together, were playing under their third Loyola coach. Before going into service, during which time Loyola dropped out of intercollegiate competition, they were sophomore stars for the late Lennie Sachs. The following year they played for John [Hicks] Connelly, who was named head coach on Sachs' death. Haggerty last month signed a three year contract as coach.

Loyola went out to an early lead, holding a 31 to 11 advantage at the half. Lineup:

Sports on the Production Line

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS

ANOTHER new project in the industrial recreation field this winter is the North Town Industrial Table Tennis league, which holds forth each Tuesday night at 804 W. Wilson av., where the North Town Table Tennis club is operated by Marlin Tucker.

The new league is an outgrowth of the Illinois Bell Telephone company's intraplant league which operated last season. Three of the six teams in the new setup represent offices of the Illinois Bell company, these being Longbeach, Lake View and Rogers Park. The other three teams are Croname, Inc., Procter & Gamble and Chicago and North Western railroad.

After the first two weeks of the season, the Longbeach team is leading the league with two victories, the only perfect record. Procter & Gamble and Lakeview are next, each having one victory and one tie. Dan Robertson of the Illinois Bell company is the chief organizer and statistician of the league, and on the basis of past performances probably will be one of the top ranking players.

Each team is made up of six men and there will be two rounds on the schedule, with a post-season championship series between the leaders at the end of each round as the climax.

Wilson Quintet Puts Up Battle in League Opener

The North av. Y. M. C. A. Industrial basketball league's opening session Wednesday night was featured by a battle between Utah Radio and Wilson Sporting Goods which well might have been the championship battle of a redhot campaign instead of the starter. Utah won, 34 to 33, after each of the first three quarters had ended with the score tied.

The Wilson team, reinforced by returning service men, is getting back into league competition and, judging by its first effort, again will provide tough competition in industrial circles. In other games last week Oak Mahufacturing beat the J. P. Seeburg corporation, 53 to 15, and Gits Molding won from Russell Electric, 53 to 29. The seventh member of the league, the Eugene Dietzgen company quintet, had a bye.

Play also was started last week in the Division st. Y. M. C. A. Industrial basketball league, with all six of the teams in action. The feature game saw the Hot Shots defeat Admiral Radio, 40 to 39, on a free throw three seconds before the game ended. Jim Hoffman of Admiral was the leading scorer with 21 points. In the other games, Thordarson Electric beat the Illini Club of Deaf, 48 to 18, and the Chicago Silents won from the Y Veterans, 39 to 33.

Acme Steel beat Visking corporation, 37 to 20, and American Air Lines won over Clearing Machine, 41 to 38, Thursday to maintain their places as undefeated leaders in the Englewood Y Industrial Basketball league. Each has won two games. Continental Can, which had a bye the previous week, opened its league competition with a 48 to 37 triumph over the Wrisley Olivilos. The Wrisleys had the high scorer of the week, G. Braun getting 19 points.

Thompson and Illinois Bell Meet; League Lead at Stake

Thompson Elevator and Electric company bowlers, champions of the Chicago Association of Commerce Industrial Bowling league for the last two years, made their bid last week and moved into a tie for first place. They won three straight from A. R. Barnes company while the leading Illinois Bell Telephones were dropping two to the St. Clair Hotels. The Thompsons and Illinois Bells are due to meet Thursday night and an undisputed leader will come out of the match, unless Savoy Drug and Chemical and/or Railway Express Agency, now tied for second, one game behind, take advantage of the situation to move into a tie for the top spot. H. Neumann of the Thompsons has taken over the individual leadership with an average of 181.

J. P. Seeburg corporation maintained its two game lead in the Division st. Y. M. C. A. Industrial Bowling league last week, taking two out of three games from Chicago Rawhide. International Printing Ink kept pace, two games behind the leaders by winning two from Rauland corporation. Lion Manufacturing, in third place, is another game behind.

NAMED VICE PRESIDENT

Ray O'Keefe, former national interscholastic swimming champion and member of the water polo team at the Illinois Athletic club, has been elected vice president of the Kropp Forge company. He also is special assistant to the president.

FORT SHERIDAN MAKES IT SIXTH STRAIGHT, 81-43

The undefeated Fort Sheridan basketball team last night won its sixth straight game, routing Percy Jones hospital of Battle Creek, Mich., 81 to 43, at Fort Sheridan.

Dan Pippin, former University of Missouri star, scored 31 points, breaking the two year old Fort Sheridan individual scoring record of Bob Shaw by one point. The soldiers have scored 486 points for an 81 point a game average. They will play Camp Grant Wednesday night at Fort Sheridan. Lineup:

MIDWEST VOTES TO RESUME FULL ATHLETIC CARDS

The Midwest Collegiate Athletic conference yesterday voted a return to a full, peace time competitive schedule, but continued its war-relaxed eligibility standards for another year.

The league, made up of Beloit, Coe, Cornell [Ia.], Grinnell, Knox, Lawrence, Monmouth, and Ripon colleges, will waive its freshman ban and three year varsity limit until the government's post-war military program is established.

The conference restored its minimum conference football schedule of five games and resumed the conference cross-country meet, which will be held at Coe college Nov. 9.

Starting with the basketball season, official conference champions will be recognized in all major sports, a practice suspended during the war. The annual conference track, tennis, and golf meets were set for May 17 and 18 at Ripon college.

The league's war honor roll listed 95 letter men athletes who died in service.

ARKANSAS JUST A DUCKY SPOT FOR WATERFOWL

BY BOB BECKER

Every day must seem like Christmas to the mallard ducks that congregate at this time of the year in the Arkansas rice fields. Not only has man made ideal lakes and timbered ponds for them to frequent during the day, but close to these aquatic parking lots are thousands of acres of rice fields where they can pick up generous free meals.

With temperatures higher in Arkansas during December and January than in Illinois, no heavy snow to cover up their food supply, and shorter flights required from water to the fields than in the Illinois river corn country, the Arkansas mallards surely must believe in Santa Claus.

Agriculture Helps Hunting

When we were in Stuttgart several weeks ago to help judge the duck calling contest we were impressed by the way the mallard hunting game in the heart of the rice country has developed as a by-product of agriculture.

Some years ago it was necessary to find other sources of water than wells for irrigating rice. As an experiment the first reservoir to impound surface water was constructed. It didn't take long for the mallards south of this new flooded timber lake to find it and use it. They moved in. Thus the mallard hunting era of the Arkansas rice belt got under way.

Now there are many of these reservoirs around Stuttgart whose waters grow rice in summer and support mallards during the hunting season.

Some clubs have moved in to lease the reservoirs during the hunting season. Mallards assemble by the hundreds of thousands around Stuttgart to get fat on the waste rice in the fields and loaf on the artificially made water areas by day which offer some of the finest timber shooting in the country.

The newest and most interesting development in the duck management routine down there is the green timber reservoir.

In former years the reservoirs eventually killed all the trees in them so that they gradually became less attractive to the ducks. Now they are operating green reservoirs just for hunting. The water is let into a tract of timber in the fall, is allowed to stand during the duck season so that shooters can get some wonderful sport with the tree dodging greenheads and then the reservoir is drained in January to keep the trees alive.

Callers Are Best

Remarkable as the mallard concentration is in the rice belt, it's almost matched by the extraordinary ability of the duck callers down there. They really pull 'em out of the sky down into the timber.

When we were out with Slick McCollum and Judge Owen of Stuttgart, nary a decoy was used in the woods. They persuaded the greenheads to come back and look things over solely by their broadcasting on a duck caller.

ONE OF THE WORLD'S GREAT BEERS

Only infinite care can produce a beer like VanMerritt. It begins with a priceless, secret formula and brewing methods uniquely different. Then come choice barley malt, hops, grits and only pure Wisconsin artesian well water. Mellowed by proper aging . . . bottled under rigid control to assure sealed-in flavor . . . thus only can be produced one of the world's great beers—VanMerritt.

$25,000 EVENT AT BAY MEADOWS TO NO WRINKLES

Wise Eagle Is Second; Sammy Angott 3d

San Mateo, Cal., Dec. 8—(AP)—No Wrinkles, ridden by Bob Summers of Toronto, Canada, won the 12th annual running of the $25,000 added Bay Meadows handicap today before a jammed crowd of more than 20,000 fans. Time for the mile and one-eighth on a heavy track was 2:00 4/5.

Wise Eagle ran second and Sammy Angott took third. Foreign Policy was fourth and the 4-to-5 favorite, Whirlabout, was beaten off badly after twice leading the field.

No Wrinkles, owned by K. Marley of Phoenix, Ariz., won by 2½ lengths carrying 112 pounds.

No Wrinkles Earns $20,930

The victory earned No Wrinkles $20,930. Wise Eagle won $5,000, Sammy Angott $2,500, and Foreign Policy, $1,250.

The winner paid $19.10, $10, and $6.20. Wise Eagle returned $8 and $6 and Sammy Angott $4.60.

Whirlabout, winner of the $10,000 added San Mateo handicap last month and the second mare in the country last year, went to the post the heavily backed favorite. A total of $106,225 was bet on the L. B. Mayer entry, out of a total handle of $262,491 wagered on the race.

Whirlabout Takes Lead

Whirlabout took the lead at the quarter by a neck, dropped back to second at the half and went back to the front at the three-quarter pole. Tony Skoronski could not keep the mare up, however, and she dropped back to fifth, finally finishing in sixth position as No Wrinkles and Foreign Policy made successive charges. Wise Eagle and Sammy Angott meanwhile came up to finish in that order to the winner.

VOLCANO WINS $2,500 RACE

New Orleans, La., Dec. 8 (AP)—The Silver Star Stock farm's Volcano won the $2,500 added mile and a sixteenth Bayou St. John handicap at the Fair Grounds today. Valdina Lamar finished second and Mrs. Frank Nugent's Espino Gold third.

SOUTH DAKOTA WINS

Hot Springs, Ark., Dec. 8 (AP) — South Dakota captured the $1,500 Au Revoir handicap today before 6,000 fans as Oaklawn park closed its first fall race meeting. Grey Days finished a length and a quarter behind the winner and had a neck margin over W. W. Jones' Bull Play. The winner paid $3.60 straight.

De Paul Series Opens College Basket Play

BY WILFRID SMITH

The collegiate basketball season, prefaced by the recent All-Star game, gets under way this week in the Chicago Stadium with the first invitational tournament sponsored by De Paul university. Six teams will participate with two games Wednesday, two on Friday, and the championship Saturday night.

In the opening round, De Paul will meet Bowling Green, O., and Hamline will play Indiana State of Terre Haute, Ind. Oregon and Washington, because of the distance, were given byes. Oregon will play the winner of the Hamline-Indiana State game Friday night while Washington is scheduled against the other preliminary victor.

N. U. Opens Tomorrow

In the meantime, Northwestern university, which will appear frequently in the Stadium, starts its campaign tomorrow night against De Pauw university in the Evanston High school gymnasium. Northwestern will have only two lettermen from last season but it is likely Dutch Lonborg, veteran Wildcat coach, will assemble a smooth combination, as is his annual custom.

Max Morris, one of the finest athletes in the Western conference, who just completed a strenuous football campaign, will be the mainstay of the Wildcats. As a center last year, Morris led the conference in scoring. Lonborg likely will shift the star to forward since he has several exceptionally tall players for the pivot position. After the initial face off, however, Morris may work the ball in the center spot.

Lofgren Other Veteran

Phil Lofgren, letterman last season altho he was not a regular, is the other veteran. Lofgren is a forward and if sufficiently improved he will hold the assignment pairing him with Morris.

Gerald Vick, 6 feet 4 inches; Leroy King, 6 feet 5 inches, and Bob Roper, 6 feet 7 inches, are the center candidates. King is a graduate student and formerly competed at Monmouth college. The others are freshmen. Buzz Wheeler, navy transfer student from Gustavus Adolphus, heads the group of guards. Wheeler was graduated from a Minneapolis high school and played one year at college before coming to Northwestern Nov. 1. In the list of substitutes from last year's squad Lonborg hopes to find another guard. These men include Ken Wiitgen, Joe Frisch, Burt Hedstrom, Bud Carter, and Bob Kelley.

Newcomers with varsity possibilities are Don Feeney, guard from Gage park; Chuck Lindgren, all-state forward from Rockford; Dick Urdeh, center from Milwaukee; Jim O'Brien, Evanston; Bob Turk, Bob Wilson, and Dick Krauthoeffer. St. Ambrose also sent three athletes in the recent shift of navy personnel, Jim Eversman, Bob McTaggart, and John Ahl.

FENCERS MEET TODAY

The Illinois division of the Amateur Fencers league is sponsoring the first Open foils tournament of the season in Bartlett gymnasium today at 2:30 p. m.

THEY HAVE PLENTY TO TALK ABOUT

missioned in the navy, each athlete, regardless of the time he already has received a degree, may return and will be eligible for one year.

Where athletes have received university degrees because of special technical courses they were required to take during military service, eligibility will be extended for a period comparable to the time required to take additional courses of their own choosing. Several universities give credit for military service. This may lead to a degree almost at once. For eligibility purposes, these credits will not be counted against the time allotted for sports eligibility.

University of Chicago students were placed in a special category by the faculty committee. Since Chicago accepts students after two years of high school and then confers a degree two years later, which normally would be at the end of the sophomore year at other Big Ten universities, competition will be extended for two more years if the athlete wishes to continue as a graduate student at Chicago.

Service Competition Not Counted

The conference reinstated the amateur rule effective immediately. At the conclusion of the current college year, all academic requirements also will be in effect. Competition on service teams will have no bearing on Big Ten eligibility.

Nine football games will be permitted in 1947. Opening date can not be earlier than the last Saturday in September and the final game must be played on the Saturday before the last Thursday in November. If nine games are scheduled, however, six of them must be with conference teams and two of them, at least, must be played at home.

Summer football practice no longer will be permitted. Because freshmen will be permitted to play next fall, practice may start, however, five weeks before the opening game to give adequate training. If an examination period shortens this time, the start of practice may be advanced to compensate.

NORTH CENTRAL PREP BASKET CARD RELEASED

The North Central Prep conference basketball schedule for the 1945-'46 season has been released by Capt. George Mahon and Lt. Gene Rodie, athletic director and basketball coach at Morgan Park Military academy. The opening game, between Onarga and Roosevelt, was played Dec. 1. The remainder of the schedule follows:

Dec. 20—Onarga vs. Roosevelt at Morgan Park, 8 p. m.; Dec. 21—Roosevelt vs. Fullman at Morgan Park, 8 p. m.; Jan. 12—Fullman at Onarga, 8 p. m.; Jan. 19—Morgan Park at Onarga, 8 p. m.; Jan. 23—Morgan Park at Onarga, 8 p. m.; Feb. 15—Onarga at Fullman, 8:30 p. m.; Feb. 15—Onarga at Morgan Park, 8:30 p. m.; and Fullman vs. Roosevelt at Morgan Park, 7:30 p. m.; Feb. 16—Onarga vs. Fullman at Morgan Park, 7:30 p. m.; and Roosevelt at Morgan Park, 8:30 p. m.; Feb. 20—Fullman at Morgan Park, 4:30 p. m.; Feb. 23—Morgan Park at Roosevelt, 8 p. m.

155 TOP HORSES INVADE CHICAGO TRACKS IN 1946

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN

Thorobreds which figured prominently in all the major juvenile stake races of 1945 are included among the nominees announced yesterday for the 1946 renewals of the Classic stakes at Arlington Park and the American Derby at Washington Park. When nominations closed Nov. 15, each had the largest original field in its history—155. The Classic and the Derby purses have been raised from $50,000 to $60,000.

Arlington Park and Washington Park again will coördinate their programs under the directorship of Benjamin F. Lindheimer to provide a continuous sweep of well balanced, high caliber racing thruout the summer.

Arlington Meet Goes Home

With the lifting of war time restrictions, Arlington Park will operate at its own plant for the first time since 1942. The Arlington Park meeting will run from June 17 thru July 27, after which Washington Park will take up the schedule from July 29 thru Labor day, Sept. 2.

Star Pilot, generally considered the best juvenile colt of 1945, is eligible for both events. So are Marine Victory, Mighty Story, Colony Boy, Revoked, Air Rate, Lord Boswell, Knockdown, Spy Song, and every other colt which distinguished himself in 1945. The fillies, too, are well represented among the nominees by such brilliant performers as Beaugay, Honeymoon, and Athene.

Star Pilot's stake victories have included the Hopeful, the Belmont Futurity, the Pimlico Futurity, and the Ardsley handicap. When he was scratched out of the Walden stakes, his stablemate, Colony Boy, came thru to give another victory to the Maine Chance farm.

Other Good Entries

In addition to Star Pilot, Colony Boy, Knockdown, Lord Boswell, and Beaugay, Maine Chance farm's representation in the Classic and American Derby includes They Say, Easton Queen, Harvey's Pal, and War Pippin.

Calumet farm, which won the 1945 Classic with Pot O' Luck, has four nominees in both Classic and Derby. These are Altair, High Shine, High Lea, and In Earnest.

RAILS DEFEND THEIR PULLMAN PURCHASE PLAN

All Bidders Submit Late Arguments

Philadelphia, Dec. 8 (AP)—Briefs of 43 railroads and three other groups seeking to purchase the Pullman company were filed today in United States District court in advance of Monday's oral arguments. The railroads, representing 89 per cent of the carriers over whose tracks Pullman cars are operated, contended that arguments against their plan were "unfounded."

Robert R. Young

The government and other bidders brand the railroad proposal as one designed to aid the large roads, said the brief. It replied the group is "gravely concerned" with the welfare of the small roads.

Belittles Young Opposition

"The only roads which are opposing the plan are the Young controled roads," said the brief.

[Robert R. Young, financier, has allied himself with Otis & Co., Cleveland banking firm, in seeking to purchase the sleeping car service which the government ordered divested from its parent, Pullman, Inc., in an anti-trust order.]

"Thus 95 per cent approves, 3 per cent has not acted, and the remaining fraction is controled by the Young group," it said.

Altho only 89 per cent of the Pullman carrying roads have become signatories to the proposal, the brief said, another 6 per cent "have indicated in writing their approval of the plan of the buying group or, being in trusteeship, have applied for court instructions as to whether they may join the buying group."

A special expediting court will hear Pullman's proposal Monday to sell the sleeping car subsidiary to the railroads.

Invited to Tell Stand

Otis, Standard Steel Spring company of Coraopolis, Pa., and Glore, Forgan & Co., a Chicago banking firm, have submitted opposing bids. They have been invited to the hearing to outline merits of their bids and demerits of opposing bids.

The court received a brief from three railroads giving several reasons why they said the group of 43 railroads should not be permitted to buy the sleeping car service.

These protesting railroads, the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Nickel Plate and the Pere Marquette, controled by Young's Alleghany corporation, supported the Otis plan. They said:

1. The sale would put the new company in control of a group interlocked with Pullman, Inc.

2. The new operating company would be under control of roads who have received favors from it.

3. Monopoly would be furthered by elimination of competition between Pullman and coach service.

4. It does not make adequate provisions for a pool of sleeping cars.

5. Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company would be favored when new cars are purchased.

Unions Also File Brief

A brief was filed on behalf of four labor organizations representing 30,000 of the 35,000 Pullman company employes. It said that all proposals offered are satisfactory to them as long as the court guaranteed that the ultimate purchaser carries out existing labor contracts.

A brief filed by Otis charged Pullman, Inc., and the rail group work to prevent Otis or any other outsider from getting Pullman business and with "threatening a sitdown strike" against Otis should it win. It said the railroads would operate the business on "second hand equipment" and give the public only minimum service.

Standard Steel replied to the government charge that its proposal is "financially unsound" by saying it would be able to "purchase new equipment when and if it became desirable."

Thru Railroad Service Asked by Alleghany

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 8 (AP)—Immediate establishment of thru transcontinental passenger rail service was asked today in a petition filed in United States District court by Alleghany corporation.

It asked Federal Judge George H. Moore to order immediate arrangement by the Missouri Pacific railroad with the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad and other eastern lines for coast to coast service by way of St. Louis.

Deals in Generalities

Alleghany controls Chesapeake and Ohio and has controled Missouri Pacific's corporation which is awaiting financial reorganization. Its proposal, which deals mainly in generalities, provides for the first thru transcontinental service in the country. Passenger traffic at present interchanges at St. Louis, Chicago, New Orleans, and Memphis.

Exact routes are not mentioned in the petition, nor were the eastern and western terminals. It also does not specify if this service would include thru train movement or merely thru movement of Pullman cars.

Points Linked by Roads

Missouri Pacific runs west to El Paso, Tex., and Denver. Chesapeake and Ohio runs from Washington, D. C., and Richmond and Newport News, Va., to Cincinnati, Louisville, and Chicago. It routes some Pullman service into St. Louis over the New York Central. The Nickel plate, controled by Chesapeake and Ohio, runs from St. Louis to Detroit, Buffalo, and Cleveland.

The petition, filed by David J. Tompkins of St. Louis for the company, was entered in the reorganization proceedings of the Missouri Pacific. Judge Moore has a reorganization plan of the road under advisement.

YALE DEVELOPS ELECTRODE THAT GROWS WITH USE

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 8 (AP)—A spark plug electrode that grows with use, an airplane ignition system whose spark plugs are fired by radio frequency currents, and an electrical thermometer for indicating temperatures between minus 50 and 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit were disclosed today as among several major discoveries made in the last four years in Yale university's Dunham laboratory.

A university statement did not describe the material from which the spark plug electrode was made, but said that "it grows in physical dimension, as it is used, by approximately the same amount that an ordinary electrode wears away."

"This growth keeps the spark gap more nearly constant, doubles the length of the life of the spark plug, and reduces considerably the length of time required for overhauling engines," it said.

IMPROVEMENTS OF ROCK ISLAND TOTAL 5 MILLION

The purchase of 5 million dollars worth of new passenger equipment and reconstruction of coach yards and shops head the Rock Island railroad's preparation for increased business, officials said yesterday. The 53 new cars on order include chair cars, night coaches with reclining seats and leg rests, sleeping, observation, dining, and lounge cars. All will be streamlined and built of stainless steel. The company will spend approximately $1,190,000 in rebuilding and rearranging its shops and constructing a new testing laboratory.

Rails and Unions Resume Their Talks Tomorrow

The railroads and their unions tomorrow will resume conversations in the Morrison hotel, seeking to arrive at a basis for a direct conference on the unions' demands for wage increases and changes in working rules. The railroads and 18 of 20 unions agreed last week on negotiations confined to union demands for wage increases. However, the Brotherhood of Trainmen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers insist that the rules demands also be included.

STOCKS SWEEP UPWARD AGAIN ON BIG VOLUME

Broadest Saturday Trade in 5½ Years

Salt Lake Swamped

Salt Lake City, Utah, Dec. 8—(AP)—Doors of the Salt Lake City Stock exchange were locked today against eager share buyers as brokers and bookkeepers strove to catch up with a record wave of trading. The boom, started by eastern capital, apparently was based on the hope of an increase in the price of silver. I. D. Lowe, exchange president, said it would be closed each Saturday until the buying rush subsides.

New York, Dec. 8 (AP)—The stock market today reached another average peak for the last 15 years with gains of fractions to about 3 points on the largest Saturday volume since May 18, 1940.

Amusements, independent motors, scattered rails, and utilities monopolized bidding from the start as dividend hopes vied with inflation psychology for attention. Dealings, generally fast, speeded more in the final 15 minutes. Altho extreme advances were trimmed by profit cashing in many cases before the close, advances outnumbered declines by a wide margin.

The two hour turnover of 1,260,000 shares compared with 1,220,000 a week ago. The week's volume of 12,380,000 was the largest since the week of May 8, 1943. The Associated Press 60 stock average for the day was up 0.3 point at 77, a top since April 13, 1931. In the week it gained 1.1. The industrial average went thru its 1937 peak and ended up 0.7 at 101.8, the highest level since April 16, 1930. It was the broadest Saturday market since May 18, 1940, with 888 issues traded. Of these, 469 rose, 223 fell, and 196 were unchanged.

CHICAGO STOCKS ADVANCE

Prices closed higher in turnover of 34,000 shares yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. Among more active issues, new 1945 peaks were set by Admiral corporation, up 1 at 19, and Oak Manufacturing, up ¾ at 11¾. Chicago corporation rose ¾. Domestic Industries was unchanged, and Commonwealth Edison declined ¼. Among six other issues reaching new highs were Zenith Radio, up 3¾, and North West Utilities 7 per cent preferred, up 3.

RAIL BONDS CLIMB

New York, Dec. 8 (AP)—Active demand for secondary carrier liens sent a selected group of these issues fractions to more than 4 points higher in the bond market today. The Associated Press 20 rail average touched 103, a new high for the year. Total sales were $5,110,000 compared with $3,560,000 last Saturday.

BANKERS BACK AMENDMENTS IN VETERANS' BILL

Pending senate amendments to the GI bill of rights were approved yesterday by the American Bankers Association committee on service for war veterans at the end of a two day meeting in the Drake hotel.

Chester R. Davis, chairman of the committee and vice president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, said the amendments incorporated all the A. B. A. recommendations designed to "make the GI bill more workable and cut red tape."

One recommendation urged that real estate loans to veterans be based on "reasonable value" of property rather than a "reasonable normal value." This change would recognize that the veteran is competing in a rising market and enable him to make better use of his loan, said the committee.

Chicago Bank Clearings Increase to 645.2 Million

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $645,200,000 compared with $594,200,000 in the preceding week and $486,800,000 a year ago, the Chicago Clearing House association said yesterday. The figures:

GRAINS STRONG AS OATS BRING CEILING PRICES

Grain futures prices finished strong yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. Oats led the advance as ceiling prices were bid on supplies for shipment to Chicago for the first time in this crop year.

The upturn in cash oats sent the December future up 1⅞ cents to 77⅝ cents a bushel with the close at the top. The deferred options closed 1 to 1¼ higher. Short covering developed in rye and old crop months closed 3¼ to 4½ higher. July was unchanged at the ceiling and September ½ higher. Corn was unchanged at ceiling prices and barley unchanged. Wheat was unchanged to ½ higher.

Exchange directors ruled that, effective tomorrow, no new commitments may be made in December wheat, corn, and barley futures except by traders who intend to make delivery and have contract grades of the grains available. Any other trading in these futures must be for liquidation. At the start of trade yesterday, open commitments in December wheat were 5,741,000 bushels; corn, 5,472,000, and barley, 381,000.

CHARGES 'LEAKS' IN AGENCIES AID GRAIN TRADERS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—Chairman Thomas [D., Okla.] of the senate agriculture committee today charged that information "leaks" exist in the department of agriculture and OPA which give some grain market dealers an unfair advantage.

At a hearing on the purchasing policy of the agriculture departments' production and marketing division, the committee heard J. B. Hutson, undersecretary of agriculture, and Henry G. Van Veen, of the OPA general counsel's office, contend no such leaks were permitted.

At the same session, Thomas accused the OPA of using "subterfuge and sharp practice" to control prices on the 1945 rye crop. Under the law OPA could not set a ceiling on the 1945 crop because it did not give notice before the planting season. By setting a ceiling on the 1946 crop recently, to become effective next June, the regulation has the effect of controling the price of 1945 rye which will remain in commercial channels at that time.

ABBOTT BUILDS NEW PLANT FOR STREPTOMYCIN

Abbott Laboratories yesterday said construction of its new $100,000 building for the production of streptomycin will be completed by March 1. The addition is part of a million dollar construction program at Abbott's North Chicago headquarters, which will include additions to its general office and pharmacology and research buildings. Streptomycin, a new drug which like penicillin is made from mold formation, is expected to be useful in treatment of certain kidney and intestinal infections.

BRITON SAYS DIVIDEND MANIA PERILS ISLES' SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS

LONDON, Dec. 8 (AP)—Overcautious industrialists are sacrificing scientific development in Britain for higher dividends, the British association's conference on scientific research and industrial planning was told today.

"In Britain we have too many partners and moribund directors who, once a year, totter to a directors' meeting far from the center of production and insist that the 2 million dollars which the technical manager suggests should be spent on research and new equipment should not be provided in the face of the desirability of keeping the year's dividends up to usual," said Prof. M. E. Oliphant, atomic bomb scientist.

Oliphant said the United States and Russia were far ahead of Britain in applied science. He criticized those who urged caution in the development of atomic energy.

SALES VOLUME OF HARVESTER SLUMPS 33 PCT.

International Harvester company total sales in the last quarter of the fiscal year ended Oct. 31 decreased 33 per cent below volume a year earlier, Fowler McCormick, president, said yesterday. Military sales dropped 70 per cent.

Further sales decreases may be expected soon because the only proceeds from military sales will be final settlements on terminated contracts, said McCormick. He estimated that total sales for the 1945 fiscal year would be below the total of 640 million dollars in the preceding fiscal year.

Sales of civilian products increased 44 per cent. The company has no reconversion problem, but the man power shortage and strikes in suppliers' plants must be terminated before a full peace time production rate can be reached, he explained.

Synthetic Rubber Used in Phone Wires to Homes

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 8 (AP)—Synthetic rubber is being used to strengthen the most vulnerable link in telephone lines, the drop wire from the pole to the subscriber's house, Whitney-Blake company said today. Jackets made of neoprene are being fitted to drop wires, leaving them light and flexible but able to stand up under more abuse than the cables.

CHARGES FEW BLACKEN NAME OF PRODUCERS

Delay Store Goods for Tax Gain

The Illinois Federation of Retail associations yesterday charged "a comparative handful of manufacturers" with harming the manufacturing industry and doing irreparable damage to the stores of America and to their customers by refusing to ship urgently needed merchandise until after Jan. 1 when a more favorable tax situation will exist.

J. T. Meek, executive secretary of the federation announced he had written letters to manufacturers whose names were reported to the federation as being guilty of the practice. Meek did not disclose the names of the manufacturers or those making charges, but said "reputable" retail stores turned in the names.

Shifts Blame for Scarcity

Such action has given the office of price administration an opportunity to shift the blame for goods shortages from itself, Meek asserted.

"We do not agree with certain officials that this practice of withholding goods for tax purposes is prevalent," said the spokesman for 40,000 Illinois merchants. "We think they have impugned the intelligence and patriotism of a great and mighty factor in our economy, just as those who lay the blame for our grave shortages on the backs of the rank and file of American labor.

"Financial selfishness may be keeping some needed goods from the market, but not so much as to permit certain agencies to avoid their own stupidity as to pricing adjustments as the contributing factor," he said.

Describes One Instance

Proof the practice is not widespread was shown in the buying of one retailer, who ordered an item from 10 firms, Meek said. Eight of the manufacturers shipped as quickly as possible and the other two were singled out as waiting for more advantageous taxes.

"We believe the manufacturer of a branded article has a definite obligation, not alone to the retailer he supplies, but to the retailers' customers—and we think the majority of manufacturers appreciate this position," said Meek. "This is the principle that motivates the retailer altho he also is in an indentical tax situation with the manufacturer."

HEAVIER LOADS FOR ICED CARS ORDERED BY ODT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8 (AP)—The office of defense transportation today acted to relieve a critical shortage of refrigerator cars by increasing minimum car loadings of potatoes from 45,000 to 50,000 pounds, effective next Saturday. Simultaneously the interstate commerce commission increased the demurrage charges on refrigerator cars to discourage their standing idle at unloading points.

ODT said loadings of perishable goods were running 14 per cent higher than last year and no substantial relief is expected in the next 60 days.

The ICC directed that demurrage charges be increased, after the usual free days, as follows: $11 a car for the first day; $22 for the second day; and $44 a day for each day thereafter. This also is effective Saturday.

Industrial Employment in 7 States Drops 16 Pct.

Industrial employment in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, and the Dakotas dropped from 2,075,000 to 1,737,000 workers, a decrease of 16 per cent, in the first five months after V-E day, the bureau of labor statistics said yesterday.

High Octane Gas Surplus; Cars Not Ready for it Yet

Casper, Wyo., Dec. 8 (AP)—Gustave Egloff of Chicago, petroleum technologist and inventor, said today there is a big surplus of high octane gasoline production "because none of the available motor cars can make efficient use of the product."

Men Building Chicago Mark 50th Birthday

BY RITA FITZPATRICK

The men who build Chicago will celebrate their golden anniversary Wednesday with a banquet. They are old and young. They are architects, builders, steel men, paving contractors, suppliers, and engineers, the leaders in the city's construction business.

Henry Ericsson, charter member of club

They form the Builders' Club of Chicago, a group of hard headed but visionary men who have made Chicago what it is, who seek to make it America's most outstanding city tomorrow.

The Builders' club 50th anniversary dinner at headquarters in the Builders' building, La Salle st. and Wacker dr., will be more than just another banquet. It will be a marker in Chicago history.

Prove Worth, Push Ahead

Soon after the 1893 Columbian Exposition, in which Chicago proved it could build a beautiful temporary city of limestone along the lake, a handful of construction men got together. They envisioned a great city of permanent, practical beauty. Naming themselves after that mythological bird, the phoenix, who rose more magnificent than ever from his own ashes, they formed the Phoenix Club of Chicago.

Within a year they merged with other contractors and building material manufacturers to organize the Building Trades Club of Chicago, which became the Builders Club of Chicago, chartered by the state in December, 1895.

Within the last 50 years its members have built 80 per cent of Chicago. Not only that, they developed new technique copied over the world.

Designed First Skyscraper

Two members designed the world's first skyscraper, the famous old Home Insurance building at Adams and La Salle sts., where the Field building now stands. The first men to use the steel skeleton construction were William Le Baron Jenney and W. B. Mundie. Too, the tallest all-masonry constructed building is the 17 story Monadnock building at Jackson blvd. and Dearborn st.

Chicago builders developed reinforced concrete construction, and the caisson foundation technique, whereby large buildings rest upon posts of cement deep in the earth.

The club's first president, the late Joseph Downey, erected the Illinois Central and the Grand Central stations. Three other depots were built by members, La Salle St. station by William Grace, Union station by John Griffiths, and the North Western by Edgar K. Collison. Grace also erected the County building.

The "Largest" Are Theirs

The world's largest hotel, the Stevens, was a product of Collison. The Merchandise Mart, largest privately owned office building in the world, was the work of John Griffiths' company. State st., one of the great shopping centers of the world, is mainly Builders' handiwork.

Thru the slump in the building industry during the depression and subsequent years, the club did not collapse. Its membership dwindled, but during difficult war years from 1942 to 1944, under the active presidency of Fritz Wagner, the roll increased to more than 500. His energetic successor is Si Kaufman.

Two charter members survive, Henry Ericsson and Harry C. Knisely. At the banquet Ericsson will tell of the club's 50 years. Nathaniel Leverone, chairman of the board of the Canteen Company of America, will be guest speaker. Fred Hurlbutt is anniversary chairman.

ASSAIL TRUMAN PROPOSALS ON HOME BUILDING

Scarce Labor Held Biggest Hurdle

Officials of three Chicago building and real estate groups yesterday assailed as impractical and unnecessary President Truman's proposal that new priorities be established on building materials to channel them into home construction.

Scarcity of labor more than a scarcity of materials is holding up noncommercial building in Chicago, said Floyd G. Dana, president of the Chicago Real Estate board. In addition to the labor shortage caused by the war, the government's action in lifting industrial construction restrictions a month before it withdrew the $8,000 ceiling on new houses gave industry the jump in acquiring both materials and man power, Dana said.

Predict Red Tape Difficulties

This condition will be relieved, he contended, as soon as more service men return and unions complete the training of apprentices, whereas the return of government priorities with their attendant red tape probably would slow up all types of building for an indefinite period.

Pointing out that the winter building slump is near, Dana estimated that, left alone, residential construction would approach its normal rate in six months.

A temporary delay in building new houses is a lesser evil than handicapping industry in the middle of its reconversion by depriving it of what labor and materials are available, Paul D. Angell, executive secretary of the Chicago Building Congress, Inc., said.

Termed Less Critical

Altho the housing shortage is severe, it is less critical than the effect on general employment and rehabilitation which would result from giving private homes the first claim on building materials, he said.

An official of the Chicago Metropolitan Home Builders' association estimated that the President's proposed priorities might slow all types of building 30 to 50 per cent. He suggested, if any type of temporary control is adopted, it should be in the form of screening applications for building permits by local governments.

2 Furniture Mart Floors to Be Used for Appliances

Fifth floor space in the American Furniture Mart, occupied for three years by the navy, again will be used to display electric appliances in the winter market, Jan. 7 to 19, Col. Lawrence H. Whiting, mart president, said yesterday. Appliances will also be shown on the 17th floor, the two floors offering what was said would be a record concentration of home appliance displays.

SILVER SITUATION

The stock market has always kept close watch of the political measures designed to "do something for silver." Quite apart from the question as to how the financial community regarded the large indirect subsidies granted the mining industry by congressional or executive action, market history shows that many traders were alert to try to profit from them.

The latest move in Washington which stimulated speculative interest in silver mining securities was the rise ordered last Sept. 21 in the ceiling price of foreign silver from 45 to 71 cents an ounce, equal to the priced fixed since 1939 for government purchases of newly mined domestic silver. Large advances have since been recorded in shares of companies having important silver mining properties in Central America.

OPA explained that the 45 cent level was lower than market prices in other parts of the world and might keep needed supplies from entering this country. However the 71 cent ceiling was well above foreign prices at that time, which were reported "as high as 60 cents." The London price was then 25½ pence, equal to about 43 cents. It has since risen to 44 pence.

Mexico and its silver producers are the chief beneficiaries of the higher ceiling. So far as the producers are concerned there is some uncertainty as to how much of the added profit will be left after Mexican taxes.

What the price of foreign silver will be after pent-up demands incident to the war are supplied is problematical. It is recalled that the metal, largely in response to the administration's buying program, rose above 81 cents in 1935 from 25 cents in 1933 only to slump to 45 cents in the open market the next year, when speculators unloaded, and later to 35 cents.

Silver interests, not satisfied with the 71 cent domestic price, have sought the equivalent of the full monetary value, or $1.29. Despite the additional contribution to the general inflationary influences, the treasury lately has been gradually monetizing the free silver remaining in its general fund. Silver certificates outstanding have risen from 1 billion 816 million dollars last June to more than 2 billions.

The treasury's purchases of silver in recent years were virtually suspended because of the large industrial demands for war purposes, but vast additional purchases must be made to meet the goal of the silver purchase act of 1934. Demands from silver consuming industries and others for the repeal of this measure, however, may revive.

GEN. DOUGLAS A. MacARTHUR AND THE RUMOR MONGERS

By ARTHUR VEYSEY

Tokyo

GENERAL OF THE ARMY DOUGLAS A. MacARTHUR, supreme commander of war time allied ground forces in the Pacific and now Emperor Hirohito's boss, was always feared and respected by the Japs. It is safe to say the beaten enemy recognises MacArthur as the greatest strategist of the war, a grim avenger of Bataan and Corregidor. But in the ranks of his own army—and more so in the navy and air forces—he is not so well understood. Correspondents often are surprised to encounter criticism which they know of their own knowledge to be unwarranted. In spite of this criticism, nobody denies MacArthur's extraordinary gifts as a soldier or his high resolve to spare as many American lives as possible.

This article is a friendly examination of the general's personality, his war record, and also of some of the stories that have been told about him. Many of these tales have ebbed and flowed across the entire Pacific. Whether they are true or not is a matter of interest to returning Pacific GI's, especially in view of MacArthur's assignment as commander of the occupation army.

The first story arose when the general left the Philippines in March, 1942. In almost no time the "Dugout Doug" fable blossomed. Day by day it grew. Late in 1943, when paratroopers were to be used for the first time in New Guinea, MacArthur went with the planes. General Kenney, then 5th air force commander, urged him not to go. "Can't you put a pill in his coffee or do something to keep him away?" Kenney asked the general's aide. After the paratroop drop a news picture came out showing MacArthur at the waist door of a plane. "It's a fake," MacArthur heiress said.

Landing after landing, MacArthur showed up on beachheads within a few hours after the first wave. He joined forward patrols and even went beyond. The "Dugout Doug" fable took a beating, but rather than yield the cult claimed the beachhead visits were pure publicity.

The second story can be titled "MacArthur's Mansion." The storytellers said that when the general moved his headquarters from Brisbane, Australia, to Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea, he had a mansion built for his use. It was erected atop a mountain reached by a concrete highway which, according to various versions, alone cost from $100,000 to $2,000,000. The cost of the mansion itself was put at between $100,000 and $500,000.

Best accounts said the mansion had 14 rooms, all air-conditioned, with carpets so thick you needed snowshoes to keep from sinking in to the waist. The dining hall was lighted, according to people who went in for details, by a giant glass chandelier MacArthur brought with him from the Philippines. To install it, taletellers said, the roof and ceiling had to be removed and rebuilt 18 inches higher so people wouldn't bump their heads on the crystal gadget. To add the feminine touch for women-hungry soldier audiences, tale mongers said the chandelier had been flown to Guinea by a WAC who was boss of decorations.

The third story is still a-building. It pictures MacArthur as a vast holder of Philippine real estate. To protect his properties, taletellers say, he ordered that Manila not be bombed before our Luzon landing, and that during the fight for the city certain buildings be spared from artillery. Among these was the Manila hotel, where MacArthur lived prior to the war. "MacArthur, of course, is part owner of the hotel," the storytellers added in a whisper, with a knowing wink or confidential nudge in the ribs. The wide property holdings his foes give him are cited also as an explanation of why the general is a powerful booster for restoration of the Philippines economically and politically.

This report is not a defense of MacArthur. MacArthur the general or the man needs no defense. This is merely a peek at the record—a record often neglected and almost always distorted.

Until 1941 war department orders to generals commanding the Philippine department directed them to prepare to hold the Manila bay entrance in case of attack. They were directed to maintain six months' supplies for three regiments of infantry, one regiment of cavalry, one regiment of field artillery, the coast artillery, and 11,000 Philippine scouts, who together made up the American far eastern army. The orders directed that in case of attack troops would retire to Bataan and Corregidor.

The most important part of this order was the sentence authorizing six months' supplies. It provided a maximum limit on supplies, not a minimum. Should necessities of war require a change in the defense plan, a change could be made; but with supplies limited, nothing could stretch the maximum defense beyond six months. Because needs as predicted in peace time differ radically from actual needs in war, the odds were that the garrison would run short of some vital supplies in less than six months.

And in addition supplies on hand in peace time were never up to the six months level.

That was the situation when on July 27, 1941, MacArthur, who had been serving as military adviser to the president of the Philippine Commonwealth, was recalled by the army and made commanding general in the far east.

War was imminent. Philippine militia was merged with American forces. The six month limit on supplies was thrown out the window. MacArthur was authorized to requisition whatever was necessary in men and supplies for defense of the islands.

The plan to retire to Bataan was set aside. Instead MacArthur prepared to meet the Japs on the beaches, to try to keep them from coming ashore, or, if they did manage to land, to beat them back into the sea. As a last resort he would retire to Bataan and Corregidor. He asked for troops and men accordingly.

The army at home replied quickly. By October troops and supplies were arriving. But also by October American and Nip reconnaissance planes passed at sea with gun crews alert. Any day the shooting might begin.

MacArthur could hope only for time. Schedules of shipment of troops and equipment were set up so that by April the Philippines would have a completely rounded defense force. In April the army would be ready to fight on the beaches.

But the Japs didn't wait. MacArthur's troops and supplies were unbalanced. Flyers had arrived, but not their planes. Corregidor had so much canned milk the Japs were still using it this year, but the quinine supply was sufficient for only four months.

Nevertheless the troops, including Maywood's gallant tankmen, tried to meet the Japs on the beaches. They were overcome. MacArthur saw he could not drive the Nips off. He fell back to Bataan.

Twice in these early months the war department ordered MacArthur to Australia. Both times he demurred. His reply was that he and Mrs. MacArthur and his 4-year-old son would share the fate of the troops. In March President Roosevelt ordered MacArthur to Australia.

On March 11 MacArthur turned the Philippine command over to Lieutenant General Wainwright and started by PT boat to Australia with his staff, his wife, son Arthur, and the boy's Chinese nurse.

Some critics say MacArthur could have violated the Presidential order and remained with the troops. But, further than leaving an orders, MacArthur left with the understanding that an army was a-building in Australia which he would bring back to the Philippines in time to rescue the Bataan and Corregidor forces.

When MacArthur reached Australia and learned his new army consisted only of a few service troops he was the saddest man in the American army.

News from Bataan and Corregidor worsened. In Australia the general learned supplies or men could not arrive in time. The men, if they continued fighting on Bataan and Corregidor, were doomed to death or surrender.

MacArthur presented to the war department a plan. It was this: He asked that he return to the Philippines with his aide and one other staff officer to launch an attack which he had in the back of his head before he left the islands.

If Bataan and Corregidor troops could break thru the Jap line on the east coast of Bataan and fight their way into the Luzon plain they could then take to the hills and carry on guerrilla warfare, even possibly sending spidtng parties into the Manila area. The war department said no.

On May 6, not quite five months after the Japs attacked, Corregidor surrendered. The American and Filipino soldiers were driven off to prison in the march of death. Only 1,100 were still alive in Philippine prison camps when we returned.

Men who know MacArthur intimately know there was no lack of loyalty to his men when he left the Philippines. They wish they could make people understand that.

Just as military and nonmilitary strategists can find no flaw in the Philippine defense, neither can they pick errors in the campaign from Australia thru New Guinea back to the Philippines.

To rewin the Philippines, Southwest Pacific forces had to defeat 450,000 Nips in the Philippines, 30,000 in the Halmaheras, 275,000 in New Guinea, the Solomons, New Britain, New Ireland, and the Admiralties. In addition 200,000 more were in the East Indies blocking the passage from Australia up the west coast of New Guinea. The total is 945,000.

Admittedly some of these Solomon Nips were the concern of South Pacific forces under the navy's Admiral Halsey, and the East Indies Nips never were engaged.

The Nips in the Southwest Pacific are now, after three years, beaten. Our losses at latest count were 23,788 killed, 11,211 missing, and 50,578 injured.

Any one who even pretends to be fair must credit to MacArthur the strategy that defeated almost a million Nips at a loss of 23,788 killed. His staff is first to give him credit. They say he had to force the Admiralties landing down their throats. Opposition to Hollandia was almost as strong. Several advised against Leyte and Mindoro.

MacArthur stood alone in favor of making the Luzon landing at Lingayen. For 45 minutes he talked to army, navy, and air officers urging it. At the end they conceded, but MacArthur absolved them of blame should the operation be costly or fail.

Each landing has been pure strategy. Once ashore, credit for beating the Japs must go to the men, but the credit for deciding where and when to go ashore must go to the general.

Original plans called for two divisions—about 40,000 men—going into the Admiralties. But late in February of last year headquarters received a report that Los Negros, tiny hook-shaped island on the eastern tip of the island chain, had been temporarily evacuated.

Altho information showed 6,000 Japs on Manus Island near-by, MacArthur decided to try to steal the islands. He gave the job to the 1st cavalry division, and two days later 900 troops, combat and supply, including Seabee builders, were on ships bound for the Admiralties. The operation was ticklish. If Los Negros had been regarrisoned the tiny cavalry force would have to withdraw. MacArthur went along so he could personally decide if the troops should stay. The troops got ashore with relatively few losses. Los Negros and its Momote air strip were only lightly held. MacArthur told the cavalrymen to stay. "You have the enemy by the tail—don't let him go," was the way he put it to Brig. Gen. Bill Chase of the cavalry.

The 6,000 Nips from Manus came over to fight, and for three or four days—until reenforcements arrived—it was touch and go.

MacArthur's appearance on the Admiralty beachhead was a blow to the "Dugout Doug" people. But that wasn't why he went. "For personal publicity" is just as silly a reason. (Continued on page four)

THE ARTIST

● The color sketch of General MacArthur reproduced on this page is the work of Maj. John Cullen Murphy, a New York magazine cover artist who during the war was attached to headquarters of a coast artillery unit, antiaircraft section, in the Southwest Pacific. Major Murphy followed General MacArthur along the road that ended in Tokyo, and it was in the Japanese capital that he obtained the autograph that appears on the sketch.

TOPS AMONG TEENS

WILLIAM ARNOLD

LONG, lean, and lanky like America's No. 1 boyman, Harry James, young Bill Arnold of Dayton, O., is rumored to play the hottest trumpet this side of Kiser High school. Just 17 and recently graduated from Kiser High, this chap with the rare talent for sending out the sweet and solid makes all the arrangements, plays the trumpet, and leads his own 14 piece band, a group made up entirely of high school boys.

The band was started three years ago when Bill was a 14 year-old sophomore and has grown in size and popularity till it's now booked solid as long as three months in advance, hitting up the jive for club dances, school proms, and youth clubs in Dayton and nearby cities. Offering an evening ranging from the sweet and simple down to "Caldonia," the boys in the band can now divide a regular weekly income that goes into neat round figures. This high school band is also a popular entertainment feature at the local soldiers' service club in Dayton.

Besides making good grades and coming in on the right down beat, this ambitious young musician worked three hours every day in his father's dry cleaning plant while in school, had time for school sports, and took frequent canoeing trips in his own canoe. His nomination as the outstanding student in the school was decided by the junior and senior classes and a special faculty committee. And by all the students of Kiser High and all the Dayton teen-agers who dance to his music Bill Arnold and his band are strictly "recommended for listening."

HEART TO HEART

BY SHEILA JOHN DALY

(Copyright: 1948: The Chicago Tribune)

PULL UP a rocking chair, hitch your feet up to the fire, and just relax. It's time for the old graybeards to get together to make with the wise chatter about the how, when, where, and whodunits of dating. These may be the same old situations, but they loom up like new problems every time a guy or gal is faced with a dateless Friday evening, a dateless week-end, or an entire future with no dates on the schedule at all! So here's the No. 1 story in this week's mail, a letter from a high school gal who wails that "it's been a long, long time!"

". . . but it's been over three months since we broke up, and I haven't had a date since. I met him first when I was a sophomore, dated him off and on for about five weeks, and then he gave me his class ring. We agreed to go steady then, and with the specific arrangement that neither one of us would date any one else and that we would be honest and talk it over if either one of us ever wanted to break up.

"Everything was wonderful for almost a year; then I thought I liked another boy, so—since we had agreed to be honest—I told Jim about it. He was a good sport about it and told me to think it over. A couple of weeks later I gave him his ring back, but we still went out together. After a while he just stopped calling me. Now I realize I still like him, and tho I've tried to get him back, I can't. And, worse than that, no one else asks me out, either! Sometimes I think he has told all the fellows that I'm still his girl."

No use crying over lost class rings and mooning about the good times you used to have! Why not be frank and admit that you tried the boy's patience a bit too hard? In dating, as in everything else, a little sweetness goes a long way, but, little sweetness, you went too far! You weren't sure of your own feelings, but you were sure of just how your joy boy felt; you tried a little experiment and the whole friendship just blew up in your face.

"RECORDially Yours" appears on page ten

You'll just have to get back into circulation as best you can—perhaps you have a good gal friend with an extra boy friend for a blind date; you might try being interesting to a few of the joes in the history or dramatics club at school; or, better still, have the gang over for a Friday evening, with a couple of extra boys who would find you fun. But be sure you learned a lesson this time—and next time you decide to go steady your heart will really be in it. Boys can wait for anything—except for a girl to make up her mind!

"Ever since we started high school a certain crowd of us fellows has run around together. We're pretty young to date, except for dances, so we usually go bowling, to a movie, or just sit around and talk. There is one particular boy who doesn't like me. I don't know why he doesn't like me, but he just doesn't—I can tell. I don't want to start any arguments, but it's kind of crowding me out of the gang."

If one boy out of a whole crowd doesn't like you, that's nothing to worry about! Just go over in your own mind a quick list of 10 persons whom you know—and out of that 10, how many do you like? There are probably one or two who don't particularly appeal to you. And maybe that's just how the boy in the crowd feels about you; he doesn't dislike you, but you just aren't one of his favorites!

Maybe you can figure out why. Did you ever hurt his feelings (sure, boys have feelings, too!) by forgetting to include him in some gang get-together; did you ever cross him up by asking his girl to a dance, or have you let your attitude get mixed so that he thinks that you don't like him, and thus put him on the defensive? Give the friendship a real chance by doing everything you can—listen hard when he talks, laugh at his jokes (all right, so you heard that one last night), and make him feel "important." If only half the people in the world liked you, you'd still have a lot of friends—but it's better to have everybody on your side!

"I don't know what's wrong with me. I'm 17, and I have plenty of dates, but no fellow ever asks me out more than once! I know I'm attractive, because I'm always careful about good grooming, have pretty hair which I keep well brushed, and even a large wardrobe. I'm a good dancer, practice at home, and would love to dance all the time. I'm not too shy and can just about talk to any one about anything. I've done everything I know to be friendly and easy to get along with. I try to be fun on dates, laugh and have a good time, and if a boy seems shy I try to ease him out of it so he'll have a good time, too. I often

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

HITCHED TO A STAR

The Cornel Wildes. Her screen name, now that she has decided to be a film actress, is Patricia Knight.

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune)

Hollywood

IF YOU want to be a movie star, marry one and let him star, and maybe thru him you can become one.

Hollywood, once the place where stars felt they had to marry outside the profession in order to make domestic life a success, has now become the stronghold of the all-pro romance.

I might say offhand that Hollywood marriages enjoy about the same batting average as most modern domestic relationships, but if I did I'd be wrong. Of course, right at the start I'll remind you that marital rifts of John and Jane Doe do not make newsprint—they aren't important enough. Marriage in movieland carries a heavy handicap. Fan worship is calculated to turn even the most solid minds. Fame never has been regarded as a stabilizer—it certainly isn't where authors, artists, sculptors, designers, and other creative lines are concerned. Movie salaries encourage dizzy adventures in living not possible to the average wage earner. In short, the Hollywood marriage starts off with 100 strikes against it. If it comes off at all it's good.

Glenn Ford and Eleanor Powell and their son, Peter.

Most recent example of the all-professional marriage is the Cornel Wildes'. When Cornel's beautiful wife, Patricia Knight, wanted to try her luck in pictures her husband persuaded 20th Century-Fox to give her a screen test. Then, because he wanted her to appear under the best possible conditions, he rehearsed her himself and acted with her in the test. He also rustled one of the finest test staffs available—Director John Stahl and Camera Man Leon Shamroy. The result was a long-term contract for Patricia Knight. It's somewhat of a libel on her beauty and ability to say that Cornel's personally conducted campaign made her a success; she's a platinum blonde with the sort of figure that entitles her to one of those tags of "the Legs" or "the Body" variety. And in addition to that she's had excellent stage experience.

The Wildes met when they were both playing small parts in Broadway shows. They eloped shortly after appearing with Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier in "Romeo and Juliet." Began a honeymoon journey which wound up in Hollywood, a spot Cornel considered the ideal one for quick fame and fortune.

"I wanted to make certain Cornel was going to be a success," Mrs. Wilde told me, "before I made an attempt at the screen. It took him several years to get to first base. [At that, Cornel clicked on a loan-out to Columbia when he made 'A Song to Remember,' playing Chopin to Merle Oberon's George Sand.] I had Wendy during that time of waiting. Then when Cornel first clicked Wendy was too small to leave even with a competent nurse. She'll soon be 3 now, and I can work away from home with a free mind."

The Cornel Wildes want to make pictures together. As a rule this plan doesn't meet with enthusiasm from movie producers. Even Mary Pickford and Doug Fairbanks tried it only once. That was in "The Taming of the Shrew." But Cornel's latest, "Leave Her to Heaven," with Gene Tierney is considered so good he may carry his point. He has a quietly persuasive manner that so far has had 100 per cent results.

Rita Hayworth and Orson Welles' talents don't seem to jell in the same script. Nor have I heard them say they wanted to get together in a film. At present Orson's directing and acting in "The Stranger," while Rita's just finished "Gilda" opposite Glenn Ford. But they both admit that marriage to some one in the same line of work is infinitely preferable to trying to explain the intricacies of a film star's life to some one from "civilian" walks of life. And after all they both know that with previous mates that didn't jell.

Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor are another pair who believe screen lives are best understood by those who live them and who feel that they can make more happiness for themselves this way even if they can't stagger their work so vacations always match. Yet Barbara's first marriage—to Frank Fay, also a movie actor—was a failure, because she was going up and he was going in the opposite direction. His salary was going the same way. Never forget that salary angle. A man likes to feel that his earning capacity is superior to his wife's—even if his talent isn't.

Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier are outstanding both in their careers and their marriage. They prefer to work together when possible. She's desperately ill, should come for a year to the warm, healing sun of Arizona, but she's too much in love with him to leave London, where the climate for her trouble is the greatest possible handicap. But I believe she'll stay with him no matter what happens. That seems to be a love story like "Romeo and Juliet."

Harry James and Betty Grable haven't been in the same picture since "Springtime in the Rockies," but they weren't married then. It was the job on which they met. Harry has signed a three year contract since then; but he's with Maureen O'Hara in "Kitten on the Keys." He and Betty want to make pictures together, but so far the studio has said no.

Joan Crawford always married actors. Each one she thought was more nearly ideal in his way than the one who preceded him. The partings have always been violent, followed by periods of great unhappiness until the next one came along. There never was a marriage that started off with more loving thoughts than Joan's and young Doug Fairbanks', but the fact that she was an established star and he was still struggling might have had something to do with their later unhappiness—plus the fact that the Doug Fairbankses Sr. wouldn't recognize her.

Then when she married Franchot Tone, Franchot still had the Theater (with a capital "T") before his eyes. He'd been a great success on the stage and never for one moment wanted to forget his first love—the theater. So together they built a small theater in the garden of their home. They put on plays; he taught her a great deal about acting. Franchot became as big a star on the screen as he had been in the theater. But their marriage failed.

Joan's happier than ever with her third husband, Phil Terry. After two years' absence from the screen, Joan's on the crest again with "Mildred Pierce." Phil seems satisfied to go along in good routine jobs. He's an awfully nice chap and a good actor, but he hasn't got star quality. Maybe they'll be happier because of this.

Joan Blondell's marital difficulties with Dick Powell started when he was off the screen for several years, and Joan, not wanting to have him hurt, refused job after job all the time he couldn't get one. She practically ruined her own chances of a career to help his; then, when he got back on his feet again, the trouble started. But, thru her own efforts and industry, she's again climbing the ladder. It will be interesting to see how Dick makes out with his new movie wife, June Allyson, whose career right now is much bigger than his.

Your guess is as good as mine as to what will be the outcome of the Paulette Goddard-Burgess Meredith marriage. Right now they're complementing each other's careers, and yet Paulette couldn't remain with Charley Chaplin, who's supposed to be one of the greatest teachers of them all.

John Loder and Hedy Lamarr don't work in the same pictures, but they sure do bring their scripts home with them—especially Hedy. I've always said that this was the great danger with two people working together. A career means that you become self-centered—think of yourself and not the other fellow. How can two people discuss (and be interested in) two different parts at the same time? Can't be done. If a star's husband is a doctor, lawyer, or buttonhole maker, he may get bored at times, but at least he can listen.

On that side of the ledger we have Margaret Sullavan and her manager husband, Leland Hayward. Irene Dunne is mighty happy with her doctor. Teresa Wright and her writer mate, Niven Busch, never seem to clash.

All Merle Oberon's husband, Camera Man Lucien Ballard, has to do is see that she looks beautiful on the screen. And that isn't difficult, because nature got there ahead of him and paved the way.

Harry James and Betty Grable.

Dorothy McGuire and her photographer mate, John Swope, are doing all right, too.

The Fred MacMurrays are a model couple. She retired when they were married and has no aspirations for a career. Alice Faye had to put the career of her band leader, Phil Harris, ahead of her own. The Dana Andrewses are happily married—she only wants to be Mrs. Andrews. Glenn Ford and Eleanor Powell seem to be making a go of it.

Then we have the example of Jennifer Jones and Bob Walker, who suffered thru poverty and the birth of two adorable boys. They were both struggling to get a foothold in radio. They got it. Then she came to the coast first and thru David Selznick got. "The Song of Bernadette." But she beat Bob to the screen in his "See Here, Private Hargrove" by only about two months. He made a solid hit in that, and you all know what happened with her "Bernadette." But when success for both was at the pinnacle, look what happened! You look, 'cause I'm subject to acrophobia.

"Sure!" smiles Bobbie. "We always come back for a second glass 'cause Borden's is the best-tasting milk in town!"

"Hear that, mothers?" asks Elsie, the Borden Cow. "It's worth knowing that's what children think, because the better milk tastes, the better chance of getting them to drink all they need.

"Children do need lots of milk, you know, 'cause it's so full of body-building vitamins and minerals.

"And Borden's—thanks to Quality Control—is milk at its very best—always pure and fresh and grand-tasting.

"Why not try it for your family? You'll see for yourself why more and more mothers every day are switching to Borden's—the best-tasting milk in town!"

General MacArthur and the Rumor Mongers

MacArthur accompanied the Admiralty invasion force because he could not delegate the decision to withdraw or reënforce to any one else.

The Admiralty steal worked. The two divisions—the 24th and 41st—earmarked for the Admiralty campaign, instead went to Hollandia. Hollandia was more strategy. It was the main Nip supply base in New Guinea. Wewak and Madang were forward Nip bases. Between them was Hansa bay. Some staff members advised landing at Hansa bay, weaker than Madang and Wewak, and, being between them, a beachhead there would tend to neutralize both Madang and Wewak.

MacArthur decided to go past all three, but to make the Nips think Hansa bay was his target. Air strikes were patterned to further that belief. Small scout parties were sent into Hansa bay by night to leave maps and papers which, when "accidentally" found by the Nips, would convince them a landing was imminent. One patrol tragically was caught by the Nips.

To strengthen Hansa bay, the Japs moved in a division pledged to defend Hollandia. So when our troops went to Hollandia we found it virtually unprotected. Again MacArthur was present and there was no delay in exploiting our success. The 41st division was pulled out within a few days and sent on up the New Guinea coast to Wakde and Biak.

By August of last year our troops had reached the tip of New Guinea. The next month they moved into the Halmaheras, not on the strongly held main island, but on satellite Morotai. The Morotai landing was unopposed. Being north of the main Halmahera bases, our beachhead was a strike at the Jap rear. In addition, it indicated to strategists, including the Jap high command, that the Philippines would be attacked from the south. That meant Mindanao. Instead the first Philippine landing came at Leyte, in the rear of Mindanao.

Then Mindoro, also in the central Philippines, to provide air cover for Luzon and further split the islands in half. And finally Lingayen. Had we landed on southern Luzon, Lingayen and even Manila would have been available to the Japs for attempts to reënforcement. But Lingayen was in the Jap rear and it doomed the Luzon Japs to fight alone.

After leaving the Philippines, MacArthur's first headquarters was at Melbourne. In four months he moved to Brisbane. For the comfort of GHQ there is no comparison between Brisbane and Melbourne or Sydney to the south. Brisbane is an overgrown country town. GHQ offices spread about town. The general and his family lived at Lennon's hotel, best in the city, but far from the class of Chicago's Drake or Ambassador.

Advanced headquarters was set up in Port Moresby, New Guinea. For personal use there MacArthur had the commissioner's residence, a high sounding name for a screened, tin roofed planter's house. Once some overstuffed furniture and refrigerators were flown in and when MacArthur learned of it he issued a rebuke. A MacArthur rebuke is no joke.

Last summer headquarters moved from Brisbane to Hollandia. Atop a hill there MacArthur's "mansion" rose. From the valley floor it looked magnificent, its white paint sparkling in the sun, clean of dust or mud that alternately plagued the valley floor.

The "mansion" actually was two prefabricated army sheds built side by side. The floor, of pine, was laid on pilings. The roof was sheets of corrugated iron. The walls were half plywood and half screen. There was an old fashioned toilet and shower. Some overstuffed furniture and rugs from the Brisbane office were brought along. There was no glass chandelier. The road up the hill was rough and steep.

A few stories or pictures would have spiked the "MacArthur mansion" story a-borning, but censorship and the general's dislike of photographers in his office or quarters prohibited that. Ignorance nourished the story.

Ignorance is now feeding the current tale about MacArthur and his "Manila real estate."

Before the Luzon landing MacArthur ordered no bombing of Manila. When we entered the city in February we came with orders to use no artillery. The orders were aimed at saving Filipino lives. But when troops discovered the Nips firmly entrenched in parts of the city MacArthur repealed the ban on artillery. Our troops used every gun they could bring to bear.

One glance at the battleground, including the burned out Manila hotel, should put the lie to the "let's save my property" tale. MacArthur owns in part or full no property in Manila.

In Manila the general lived with his wife, son Arthur (now 7), the Chinese nurse, and Joe, his Filipino orderly, in a house that was the home of an automobile dealer.

Now, in Tokyo, he rises about 7 a. m., shaves, and eats a hefty breakfast. About 9 he goes to his office. He works until 1. He reads thick reports. He jots notes. He paces, pondering problems or dictating. His staff officers come and go. When they present some problem he is apt to say "Here, write this down," and, using them as secretaries, outline plans. On an average day he meets three groups of visitors. At work he is solemn. His power of concentration is so intense he appears almost grim. But at home with his family or while relaxed during sea trips he is full of small talk and anecdotes. Most of his stories concern his father.

His mind is prodigious. His staff is constantly amazed when they come up with some plan or problem only to discover he has already studied it or was waiting for final facts before reaching a decision.

His memory is astounding. Gene Tunney paid him a call one day. For an hour the two men talked. MacArthur's father started him on the way to being a fight fan when just a youth. He's still a fight fan and has seen almost all the heavyweight championship bouts. He and Tunney replayed these blow by blow. Tunney came out of the general's office in a daze. "He knows more about the fight game than I do," the ex-champ said.

MacArthur's manner of speech and writing fits a five star general. Listening to him talk is an experience. After one of his three press conferences an old time reporter, and one of the most capable to hit the Pacific, remarked, "We have just had one of the historic interviews of the war." Today he probably has forgotten what the general said, but he will never forget the impact of his personality.

The general goes to bed about 11:30. Eating and sleeping well, he is in excellent health. In the last year and a half he has had only one slight cold, and that time he doctored himself with a couple of pills of his own prescribing. Nevertheless, he carries the mark of his 65 years, especially his thinning hair and the lines on his face and throat.

The general smokes a cigar after meals and puffs two or three pipefuls of tobacco during the day. He likes lots of pipes. Some months ago a picture was taken of him smoking a corncob pipe some one had given him. He was flooded by corncob gifts that still supply him. He drinks occasionally.

During Luzon campaign days he was in the field almost every day, traveling in a jeep with his driver and two aides. He seldom stopped at division or regimental headquarters because when he did the commanders insisted he take along guards. On one of the first days during the reconquest of Bataan he started down the coast road. He came to a forward patrol.

Mrs. MacArthur autographs programs for members of all-Filipino cast of show given for troops.

There had just been a fight and six Americans and about 50 Japs lay dead. He asked for particulars.

The troops hadn't resumed their advance. MacArthur was eager to go on. The commander insisted three jeep loads of tommy gunners accompany him if he must go. The general's convoy went down the road thru jungled, hilly country perfect for ambushes. After six miles he came to an unfordable river. The bridge was out. He turned back. But as he did so he explained why he had come. In typical MacArthur English he said: "This has eased the pain that for three years has been gnawing in my heart."

It does no good to warn MacArthur of dangers. At Balikpapan he planned to go ashore two hours after the troops. He sat on the deck of a cruiser and ordered a bowl of chocolate sodas—he takes his sodas three in one. The beachhead commander radioed that mortars were falling on the beach and advised the general to delay his trip. MacArthur read the message, called for his aides, canceled the sodas, and went overside at once.

Few know MacArthur intimately. It wouldn't take a very big room to hold them all. His days are devoted almost exclusively to his staff. His evenings go to his family. He has held only three press conferences. He made his first radio speech the day we landed in the Philippines. His public appearances are rare.

Yet there are many who see MacArthur as a master publicist. Southwest Pacific news stories usually began, "MacArthur's headquarters." MacArthur habitually refers to "our" troops, ships, planes.

News stories began "MacArthur's Headquarters" because reporters recognize the news value of the general's name, just as when the President takes a train trip news accounts begin "With the President's Special Train," not "On the Pennsylvania Railroad."

Daily communiques never carried MacArthur's name. They were always dated from general headquarters, Southwest Pacific area. For months they were signed by Brig. Gen. L. A. Diller, public relations officer. Toward the end of the war they were unsigned.

MacArthur uses the pronoun "our" in the same way that most people refer to "my" state or "my" country or any group with which they are identified. Yet when MacArthur once referred to "our" navy a scream went across the Pacific like a tornado.

MacArthur frequently speaks of God. It brings much sneering. MacArthur has a deep personal faith, altho he seldom attends church services. Furthermore he believes that development of the arts and sciences has outstripped the advance of human character and that Christian principles offer the remedy for the world's worst woes.

"TISSUE STARVATION"
Early and Advanced Stages

ADVANCED "TISSUE STARVATION" as above can cause pronounced scarlet-red discoloration and lesions of the tongue.

TONGUE LESIONS like these may result from a continuing—even if relatively mild—deficiency of vitamins in the body.

MORBID CHANGES in mouth tissues due to advanced "Tissue Starvation." A severe case, resulting from long vitamin shortages.

EARLY STAGE of "Tissue Starvation" due to vitamin deficiency as evidenced in the lips. Lesions are visible, if minor.

THICKENING and discoloration of the whites of the eyes. An advanced condition, producible by a prolonged vitamin lack.

MILD, COMMON vitamin deficiency in the eyes. Eye whites should not be cloudy when in health, but clear . . . bluish-white.

"TISSUE STARVATION" is producible by a lack of vitamins in the living cells of your body

The Signs of Vitamin Deficiency often appear first in Eyes, Skin, Tongue and Mouth

VERY few Americans understand the true nature of vitamins. Vitamins are not just something we find in our food, as many have been led to believe. Vitamins are part and parcel of all body tissues and—if you haven't enough of them—your deficiency may be revealed in your body itself.

You can carry a vitamin deficiency—a "Tissue Starvation"—even if overweight. Medical research reveals, in fact, that thousands of Americans do show signs of "Tissue Starvation" producible by a shortage of vitamins.

To avoid error, compare carefully the two columns of unretouched photographs above. The left-hand column shows severe, advanced cases seldom found in healthy American surroundings. But the right-hand column represents tissue changes in their early, common stage.

Watch for these signs! They may, of course, result from other conditions such as irritation, infection or other malnutrition, but "Tissue Starvation" due to vitamin deficiency is a frequent and basic cause. So help guard against this form of "Tissue Starvation" by taking One-A-Day (brand) Multiple Vitamins. You get all the known needed vitamins in One-A-Day (brand) Multiple Vitamin Capsules—A, B_1, B_2, C and D, plus Niacin Amide, Calcium Pantothenate and B_6.

Special Conditioning Factors

Body tissues need the protection of extra vitamins as a result of certain conditioning factors, such as the following:

Diarrhea	Alcoholism
Food allergy	Over-indulgence
Pregnancy	Reducing diets
Certain digestive disturbances	Physical overwork
	Diabetes

When these factors are present, your daily intake of vitamins may need to be increased.

The MILES PLAN For Health Protection

1. PROPER DIET. Vitamin deficiencies may accrue gradually in the body tissues throughout your entire life. So try to eat a balanced diet every day from now on.

2. PROTECTIVE VITAMINS. Take one capsule of One-A-Day Multiple Vitamins every day.

3. CONDITIONING FACTORS. Certain conditions and habits increase vitamin needs. Protect yourself then by taking extra vitamins.

4. SEE YOUR DOCTOR—if you think you have lesions—as above—that indicate vitamin deficiency.

MEET ADELE JERGENS!

PINCH-HITTING for Gypsy Rose Lee in the fabulous Broadway musical, "Star and Garter," won Adele Jergens her movie chance, and the first important role she was assigned naturally was that of a strip-tease dancer. That was in the Irene Dunne-Charles Boyer film, "Together Again." But it wasn't long before Adele switched from a prancer to a princess, getting the co-starring feminine role with Evelyn Keyes in "A Thousand and One Nights."

Adele was born a Nubel, and early in life became the Nubel prize winner. She won dancing scholarships, jobs in continental revues, and finally the beauty contest for New York's world fair. No wonder—she is a statuesque blonde, 5 feet 6½ inches tall, weighs 128 pounds, and has been a model or actress ever since she gave up the idea of becoming a newspaper woman. Spanish ancestry accounts for the fire in her eyes and in her acting. She was born in Brooklyn, but keeps the date a secret.

LINDA DARNELL
in
"Fallen Angel"

1 Stella (Linda Darnell), after an unexplained absence of three days, returns to her job as a waitress at a roadside diner. She makes no attempt to enlighten Mark Judd (Charles Bickford), retired New York cop and one of her admirers.

2 An interested eavesdropper to the conversation between Stella and her boss (Percy Kilbride) is Eric Stanton (Dana Andrews). En route to San Francisco, Eric was stranded when his bus fare ran out. He meets Stella.

3 Sensing an opportunity to make some easy money, Eric tells Professor Madley, Psychic Extraordinary (John Carradine), and his assistant, Joe Ellis (Olin Howland), he will fill the town hall with paid admissions for a seance.

4 Drumming up business, Eric calls at the Mills home and persuades Clara Mills (Anne Revere) and her younger sister, June (Alice Faye), to attend the seance. Their father, the mayor, had died a few weeks previously.

5 The whole town turns out for the seance. Armed with facts that Eric has managed to unearth, Professor Madley puts on a good show. June and Clara Mills are duly impressed.

6 With his share of the take from the seance, Eric calls on Stella. She is infuriated when Eric refuses to agree to marry her.

7 Mindful of June Mills' inheritance from her father, Eric conducts a whirlwind courtship and persuades June to become his wife. June's sister grudgingly congratulates the bride and groom.

8 On their wedding night June vainly waits for Eric to come home. She learns later that Eric had visited Stella and that Stella was murdered that same evening.

9 Mark Judd, assigned to the case, confronts Eric and Dave Atkins (Bruce Cabot), Stella's neighbor (Dorothy Adams) is of having seen both these men at Stella's door the night of the murder. Judd is convinced of Eric's guilt.

10 Eric convinces June that he is completely innocent of Stella's murder. Together they hide in San Francisco while he goes after evidence.

11 Later Eric takes his evidence to Judd and forces a grudging admission that it points clearly to Atkins as the killer. Absolved, Eric rushes to his bride.

MEETA BONITA

Hollywood Camera Study by LOUIS WOLF

By FREIDA ZYLSTRA

BONITA GRANVILLE'S stage experience dates back to her cradle days when she used to make offstage sound effects while her parents rehearsed. Her father was a comedy star with the Ziegfeld Follies and her mother was the well known Rosina Timponi Granville of the stage.

Bonita was born in 1923 in New York City, and three years later her father carried her onto the stage in one of his acts. When she was 8 she went to Hollywood with her father's vaudeville show. RKO Studios signed her immediately to play in "Westward Passage" as Ann Harding's daughter because she resembled the older star. She has been constantly busy in pictures ever since.

She made a memorable hit as the hateful little brat in "These Three," and played a similar part in "Hitler's Children." For several years after that she was given nothing but brat parts. She finally outgrew the character. As a teen-age girl she began playing more dramatic roles. Her most recent picture for RKO Studios is "All Men Are Liars."

Bonita and her mother rent a charming house in Toluca Lake. Bonita has been putting into effect some of the things she learned at her school of interior decorating. She studied dress designing, too, just in case she ever decided not to be an actress.

She is popular with the young men in Hollywood, but marriage doesn't interest her yet—for at least two years, she says. Soft drinks are on her taboo list. She doesn't need the calories.

Her one favorite beauty habit is scrubbing her face with a complexion brush and lots of soap and water. Because she is a natural blonde, she shampoos her hair often.

Bonita is 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 103 pounds. She is a natural blonde with blue eyes.

Bonita likes swimming and other similar exercises. Here she relaxes with her mother on the sun porch of their home.

Chi Chi is Bonita's favorite Poke. She's had it for eight years.

Her bedroom is extremely feminine. Furniture is blond antique. It is here that she has her study and answers fan mail.

This is the six room home in Toluca Lake where Bonita and her mother live. Bonita has directed the decoration, as she studied interior decorating in school.

COOD for conversation

There's no place like the barber shop to talk things over. And there's nothing like a mellow Dutch Masters to call up memories of the good old days when a man had his own initialed mug, and this great cigar was the same fine smoke.

Mary Meade Writes About— Meats in Casserole

WHEN pork chops aren't available, try a casserole dish with other meats. Suitable choices are veal or lamb chops, frankfurters, or sliced luncheon meat. Sliced ham, Canadian style bacon, or pork sausages are especially good, with sweet potatoes.

If sweet potatoes are used, omit the milk in the recipe. Instead use a cup of hot water added to the drippings in the pan. A little brown sugar may be sprinkled over the potatoes.

PORK CHOPS AND SCALLOPED POTATOES

(Serves four)

4 pork chops
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 medium potatoes
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk

Cook pork chops slowly in skillet until nicely browned on both sides. Season with part of the salt and pepper. Pour off all but one tablespoon of drippings. Place a layer of pared and sliced potatoes in a greased casserole, sprinkle with flour and seasonings; then repeat with remaining potatoes. Add milk. Place browned pork chops on top of potatoes and pour drippings in pan over all. Cover and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 1 to 1½ hours, or until done.

One of our most popular recipes recently was for a cake made with pudding mix and no sugar. Here's its counterpart—crisp oatmeal cookies. The recipe calls for butterscotch mix, but chocolate or vanilla may be used.

SUGARLESS BUTTERSCOTCH COOKIES

(2½ dozen cookies)

½ cup shortening
1 package butterscotch pudding mix
1 egg
1 cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup rolled oats (quick or regular), uncooked
½ cup nut meats

Cream shortening and pudding mix together, add egg, and beat until fluffy. Sift together flour, soda, cream of tartar, and salt. Add to creamed mixture with rolled oats and nut meats. When well mixed drop from a teaspoon on a greased baking sheet. Flatten with a fork. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 12 to 15 minutes.

Brown pork chops in a skillet, then slow-bake them with scalloped potatoes.

Butterscotch and chocolate pudding mix sweeten and flavor these cookies.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS BY BOB BECKER

BEFORE THE WAR upward of 500,000 happy-go-lucky pups were bought around Christmas and given as presents to lucky boys and girls. In some homes young dogs were gifts to older people who valued the companionship of a good dog. Then came the war and a gradual decline in America's thriving kennels. It was impossible to get help to run some of the large kennels, so dog breeding was curtailed, while many of the topnotch handlers and trainers went into service.

Now it's getting close to Christmas, and thousands of families again will be looking for puppies to be brought into the home as living Yule gifts. The only trouble is that, just like most other things that all of us need and have been wanting to buy for several years, dogs are scarce.

Our suggestion to prospective buyers of Christmas pups is to do your shopping early and remember that there are few breeds that are not ideal companions for children. Altho we recommend the purchase of a purebred pup, if you can't find one, and the children insist on a dog this Christmas, a crossbred of uncertain parentage is better than no dog at all. Of course you don't know how a crossbred pup is going to look when it grows up and you take a chance on how it will turn out. But most of these pups of uncertain parentage are amusing, smart, and loyal.

In buying a pup the purchaser should keep several things in mind. First, if you have a choice of pups of various ages you probably will find it easier to start with one that is 4 months old than one that is 7 weeks old. The older the pup the easier it is to teach and the stronger it is. We know many families, however, who want the younger dogs because they are more amusing.

As for the breeds that are suitable for children, you can pick most any one of them and not make a mistake. For example, the terriers make excellent pets. Most of the hunting breeds are friendly, smart companion dogs, if the family doesn't object to medium sized or even large dogs. We know of one family with two children which finally decided on a boxer.

The cocker is the most popular pet dog today and still is in great demand. The Scotty, fox terrier, dachshund, Boston terrier, Kerry blue, boxer, Welsh, cairn, Pekingese, springer, shepherd, poodle, Dalmatian, and many other breeds continue to have great appeal as companion dogs, and collie breeders haven't been able to supply the demand for pups of that breed. (The demand for collies took a decided spurt after the motion pictures featuring Lassie were released.)

If a family that is shopping for a Christmas puppy will do just a little reading about the various breeds, and how to feed and train a puppy, it will find that introducing a dog into the family circle will be much easier. Therefore we suggest to the prospective dog buyer that he buy himself a Christmas present of a good dog book right now and read the suggestions in it on dog care. Two of the most comprehensive yet inexpensive books on feeding, training, and general care are "Feeding the Dog" and "Training the Dog," sold by the Tribune Public Service Office, 1 S. Dearborn st. Each costs just 30 cents by mail. Both are illustrated and contain scores of tips on raising pups. A larger illustrated book on sale at book stores is "How to Raise and Train Your Puppy."

AMERICAN HEROES OF WORLD WAR II.

This is another of the series on outstanding American heroes of World War II. Subjects are heroes who have been decorated for valor. Illustrations are by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Vernak.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

HE REFUSED to bear arms in the defense of his country, but he proved nevertheless to be one of the outstanding heroes of the war. Pvt. 1st Class Desmond T. Doss, 26, of Richmond, Va., a member of a religious sect opposed to war and killing, was made a medical corpsman and was permitted by the army to observe his Saturdays as days of prayer. He risked his life saving the lives of fellow members of the 77th division in the fighting on Guam and Leyte, and for his valorous services in the latter campaign he was awarded the bronze star.

It was when his unit, the 307th infantry medical detachment, faced the terrible ordeals of fire on Okinawa, however, that he rose to the supreme heights of bravery for which on Oct. 12 he was decorated with the medal of honor (congressional medal) by President Truman—the first conscientious objector to receive this award.

The war department citation accompanying the decoration stated that Doss on April 29, 1945, remained in a fire-swept area to help succor 75 casualties when their comrades had been driven back by artillery, mortar, and machine gun fire. He carried the wounded men back to safety and helped lower them on litters down the face of a cliff.

On May 2, according to the citation, he exposed himself to heavy fire to rescue a wounded soldier whom he found lying 200 yards in front of the American line. Three days later he again braved Japanese fire to assist a wounded artillery officer, and still that day he crawled to within 25 feet of an enemy position to render aid to a casualty. Then he carried the wounded man 100 yards to safety.

On May 21, in a night attack near Shuri, he remained in exposed territory, giving aid to the injured, until he himself was wounded by a grenade. While he was being carried on a stretcher Doss saw a more seriously wounded man, and he crawled off the stretcher and directed its bearers to give their first attention to the other man. While waiting for the bearers to return to him he was wounded again.

How to give your family a warm welcome on a cold winter night

An electric range means less holiday cleaning for you!

With Christmas gifts to buy, dinners to plan—wouldn't it be wonderful to cut holiday cleaning time to a minimum? If you'd like the perfect answer to this problem, own an automatic electric range—and watch what happens in your kitchen.

Walls and woodwork will stay glistening white . . . pots and pans won't need the stiff scouring that hurts hands and manicures. Curtains, too, will keep their "just out of the suds" look. As for your precious range—you'll keep it new-looking with the quick flip of a damp cloth over the surface.

The reason?—flameless electric heat means no soot, no smoke, no gritty dirt. The result!—a kitchen that stays clean far longer than you dreamed possible.

Visit Edison's downtown store—see the electric kitchens and ranges on display there. Decide which electric range you're going to have in your kitchen—then count on lots less cleaning at holiday time and all year 'round!

have parties at my house and ask boys who have asked me out before.

"One boy took me to a school dance, and I've asked him to three parties since, but he never asked me for another date! So you see it isn't because I'm not friendly. I write letters to two service men, and they seem to like to hear from me, but when they do come home they just come over for a short visit and don't even ask me out. I don't go in for necking, but I'm always willing to kiss a boy good night."

You're undoubtedly a good gal with a good heart, and some one will love you for it—but did you ever hear of an eager beaver? You're just too good to be true, so no wonder fellows can't quite believe it when you give out with the smiles, the chatter—and the doorstep affections! Boys like girls to have fun on dates, and they like dates with gals who obviously like them—but they don't want to be burdened with characters who act like smitten kittens on a first evening! So try to hold back a little in your enthusiasm. Friendship—and dating—is a fifty-fifty proposition, so don't overdo your share. Give the boy a chance to come half way!

Recordially Yours

WILL DAVIDSON

IF YOU HAD ever tried to tell Ferdinand Joseph Morton that he wasn't the greatest piano player in the world you probably would have started a harangue that would finally have had you really believing that Morton was Mr. Jazz himself. Jelly Roll was no one to deny his own ability. He preferred, in fact, to broadcast it on every occasion. But he was great, and he knew that a smug world would never appreciate the strength and beauty and importance of jazz unless some one shocked it to attention. Jelly Roll died in 1941, before his come-back was effective, but he left us a heritage of legend and the more substantial treasure of recordings; and now DECCA brings four of his piano solos in Volume I. of the Jelly Roll Morton series, another feature in its vastly important Brunswick Collectors' library.

Jelly Roll Morton

Morton was born in New Orleans in the '80s of French-Negro parents. Music was his heritage, and he grew up among the primitive greats of the early blues and rag period. As with so many middle class Negroes of the period, Ferd sought respite from the crushing social and economic humiliation forced upon his class by expressing himself in the music of the day. He absorbed it constantly, and later was to express it in some of the greatest of jazz classics. He barnstormed, hit Chicago along about 1914, worked the river boats.

In 1926 he recorded the four piano solos included in this album: "King Porter Stomp," "The Pearls," "Sweetheart o' Mine," "Fat Meat and Greens." Morton wrote "King Porter Stomp" in 1906, and it has been a standard part of the jazz book ever since. As played by Jelly Roll it has that loyalty to the melody that was the hallmark of all great jazz, coupled with imaginative treatment of rhythm and background. Blaring swing can't destroy the effectiveness of the "Stomp," but it lives most beautifully in renditions such as this. The other numbers are excellent examples of Morton's style and comprise an important addition to any jazz library.

JOE AND JIM

June Allyson

Here's that face you admire so much. Miss Allyson was on the stage in New York, and her latest film was "Her Highness and the Bellboy."

Dear Miss Tinée: We are trying to settle an argument and hope you can help. In the movie picture "Trocadero" there was an orchestra leader. I think he was called Steve, and I personally believe it was Dick Purcell, but no one agrees with me. How about it.

MRS. J. K.

There was no Steve listed in the cast of that film, and I think you're referring to Spike. If so, it was Dick Purcell, and you win the argument.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Berkeley, Cal.

REGISTRATION at the University of California at Berkeley when this fall semester opened was something to see rather than to go to. Ten thousand students—the largest number on this extremely beautiful campus since 1942—turned up for enrollment, and for a few days confusion reigned. "Awful" is the only word for the housing situation in these parts—and with a lot of faculty members still on leave and a lot of somewhat inexperienced help handling the paper work, the university found the unexpectedly large influx of students rather strenuous to handle.

But things straightened out, as they always do, after just a few days. Hastily improvised classrooms in every spare corner relieved the pressure, which had the boys and girls sitting on the floor in some sections, and in a surprisingly short time the whole campus took on the color and tempo reminiscent of the good old days before the war.

With so many men back, wearing discharge buttons and garbed in all sorts of outfits supplemented with pieces of GI clothing, the place began to look like its old self. Almost all of the traditional social events, casualties during the war years, will be revived this term. Fraternity houses are reopening at a furious rate, and school hadn't been in session three days before the perennial prank of painting the big "C" high on one of the typical Berkeley hills was restored with all the usual pre-war enthusiasm.

And for a while here it looked as tho all 10,000 students had chosen as their pet extracurricular activity the curious cult of bubble blowing. In classrooms, in the union, and on the sunny steps of Wheeler hall, which is the between-class rendezvous, all the girls and all the men, including the mature veterans of the worst of all wars, were vastly amused by the aimless sport of blowing bubbles, using a wire ring and a soap-glycerin liquid that makes perfect iridescent spheres that dance in the sunlight. This is a southern California fad that the northern college kids approve; it is an expression, perhaps, of their pleasure at being back in school, with the situation nearly normally carefree.

The university itself has some reason to be pleased with itself, too. Its University of California Los Alamos scientific laboratory was recently awarded the army-navy production "E" flag with three stars for continued excellence over a period of two years on the development of the atomic bomb. It was at this laboratory near Santa Fe, N. M., that tests were made until the scientists were sure enough of their accomplishments to risk a full dress rehearsal for Hiroshima and Nagasaki at Alamogordo. The university was also presented with a scroll for its large part in the project, both awards having been held up for a couple of years for security reasons. One of California State university's professors of physics, Dr. J. R. Oppenheimer, was director of the atomic bomb project.

On this campus, one of eight which comprise the whole university, there are two cyclotrons, which were of course utilized for war's scientific research. All during the hostilities another of its campuses, that of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography at La Jolla, was the scene of other kinds of research, notably that of currents and wave measurements, valuable in timing and executing invasions by sea. U. C. L. A., in Los Angeles, is another of the state campuses; others are that of the college of agriculture at Davis, the citrus experiment station at Riverside, the Lick astronomical department at Mount Hamilton, the San Francisco campus for nursing, medicine, dentistry, and pharmacy, and the recently acquired liberal arts college at Santa Barbara, for which the state is presently engaged in building a new campus. This is a giant among universities.

But of all its campuses Berkeley is the most thrilling. Many of its buildings are magnificent—notably Wheeler hall, which accommodates close to 5,000 students; its Doe library (only the Congressional library and Harvard's are larger); its Life Science building, and its choice terraced union. Dominating the whole colony, which abounds with fine trees and beautiful foliage, is the tall Sather campanile, approached from 11 sides by broad avenues. The campus, 530 acres in all, rises gently to the hills and affords from almost everywhere breath-taking views of San Francisco bay, the city, the ocean, the mountains, and the Golden Gate bridge.

What to do FOR COLDS

DOCTORS ADVISE THESE 5 BASIC STEPS, in addition to any temporary relief measures, to help your system throw off a cold. See how lemons help:

5 BASIC STEPS ADVISED BY PHYSICIANS		LEMONS HELP WITH ALL 5
1	Get plenty of rest; overcome fatigue; build resistance.	Lemons are among the richest sources of vitamin C, which combats fatigue and fights infection.
2	Alkalinize your system.	Lemon juice with water and baking soda forms sodium citrate, an excellent alkalinizer.
3	Insure regular elimination.	Lemon juice and water, with or without soda, is mildly laxative for most people.
4	Eat lightly. Take plenty of liquids, especially citrus juices.	Fresh lemon drinks are favorites.
5	Keep warm; avoid further chill. If cold persists, see your doctor.	Hot lemonade is almost universally prescribed.

GET FULL BENEFITS FROM LEMONS—FOLLOW THIS ROUTINE

At first sign of a cold drink a glass of lemon and soda. Take another every 3 or 4 hours.

To induce perspiration, take a hot lemonade when you go to bed.

Lemon and soda forms natural sodium citrate. Supplies vitamins and all other benefits of fresh lemon juice, plus an increased alkalinizing effect. Consumed at once, soda does not appreciably reduce vitamin content.

To avoid colds build your resistance! Join the millions who now drink lemon and water daily. Juice of one lemon in glass of plain water, first thing on arising.

To make lemon & soda pour juice of 1 lemon in a half glass of water. Add — slowly — half teaspoon baking soda (bicarbonate). Drink as foaming quiets.

A CANDIDATE for winter resort wear is this play suit of pink bonbon chambray. Its black stripes and straps create a jumper effect when the matching skirt is worn.

Acme

STRIPES pattern the boyish shorts of this spun rayon swim suit and are echoed in the edging of the brief, black bra.

THIS Christmas again, there'll be too few Parker 51's. For rocket fuzes and other matériel came first at Parker, until the very day of Peace. And now, as always, we make every "51" pen patiently, precisely. These writing instruments cannot be hurried out.

Yet a Parker "51" is worth waiting for... as you will discover. It is styled with tomorrow's beauty. Its Osmiridium tip writes with such smoothness it seems to float across paper. And only the "51" is designed for satisfactory use of Parker "51" Ink that dries as it writes.

For a few, there'll be a Parker "51" this Christmas. To others, our regret that they must wait a little longer for this "most wanted" pen.

This higher type of Intimate Feminine Hygiene

Lifts 'VEIL OF IGNORANCE' From Intimate Problem!

Greaseless Suppository Gives Hours of Continuous Medication

Here's why this higher standard of intimate feminine cleanliness is so widely used in U. S. among highly intelligent and exacting women:

1. Zonitors are a greaseless, stainless snow white vaginal suppository—so easily inserted, daintier and more convenient to use.
2. So powerfully germicidal yet safe to delicate tissues.
3. When inserted — Zonitors immediately begin to release their powerful germicidal properties and continue to do so for hours. Yet they are non-irritating, non-poisonous, non-smarting.
4. Zonitors actually destroy odor.
5. They immediately kill every germ they touch. Of course it's not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract. BUT YOU CAN BE SURE—Zonitors kill all reachable living germs and keep them from multiplying.
6. Never leaves any sticky, greasy residue. Easily removed with plain water douche. All drugstores. Follow easy directions.

This Filter in ROYAL DEMUTH

cools the smoke as it cleanses the smoke

—makes pipe function superbly

$3.50

THE changeable filter has a patented construction that filters flakes and juices before smoke reaches your mouth.

Yes, this absorbent cellophane wrapped filter is changeable! When stained from the tars and nicotine that it imprisons, replace with a fresh refill.

Royal Demuth is thoroughly seasoned, expertly styled, exquisitely fashioned. Over 100 skilled manufacturing operations go into each pipe.

THE SHELL WITH A "RADIO BRAIN"

Army, Navy lift censorship on mystery weapon that licked V-Bomb, Kamikaze attacks

NOT EVEN the Atomic Bomb was more "hush-hush" than the "Variable Time Radio Proximity Fuse"—a fuse that decides for itself when to explode; requires no advance setting.

For 2½ years, on land and sea, it made possible unprecedented accuracy of fire: against V-bombs, Kamikaze planes, and enemy troops.

Transmitter, receiver, and detonating mechanism all draw power from a tiny "Eveready" "Mini-Max" battery: a "powerhouse" rugged enough to withstand the shock of the gun's discharge: a force 20,000 times that of gravity!

FIVE-TUBE RADIO transmitter and receiver—powered by the special "Eveready" "Mini-Max" battery—broadcasts a continuous radio wave from the flying shell. Reflected by the target, the returning wave explodes the shell automatically and at the correct instant.

"CIGARETTE CASE" RADIOS, small enough to wear, are on the way! This 22½-volt "Mini-Max" Battery is typical of developments that make such sets possible. It's less than the size of a box of safety matches, yet it's built to last and l-a-s-t!

TYPICAL OF PEACETIME application of "Eveready" "Mini-Max" power is this 15-volt hearing-aid battery. Small, light, powerful, it gives many hours of service at sensationally low cost per hour! It is now available.

Jimminy! CHRISTMAS EVERY DAY!

ADD WALNUTS—add goodness!

★ AND EXTRA NOURISHMENT, TOO

Just see what new excitement walnuts give your meals. Crisp, fresh variety! Rich, mellow flavor! All this—and "plus" food values, too. Precious protein, to help make up for meat. Vitamins A and B_1—calcium, iron and phosphorus for extra mineral intake. So keep a well-filled walnut bowl handy all through the holidays—folks like to eat 'em like candy. Swell for lunchboxes, too — right in the shell!

New glamour for salads

It's a feast for sure, with molded cranberry or beet salad—chopped walnuts in the mixings, big golden halves topping it off. See for yourself: any salad—fruit, vegetable, aspic—looks better, tastes better, with walnuts.

New variety for cakes, cookies, desserts

¼ cup shortening or meat drippings
½ cup boiling water
1 cup molasses
2½ cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
1½ teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
1 cup chopped Diamond Walnuts
Diamond Walnut Halves

DIAMOND GINGERBREAD—Granny's favorite recipe goes easy on hard-to-get ingredients—goes glamorous with golden walnuts! Imagine—no sugar! No eggs! But it's party fare, with luxury flavor—simple, too!

Stir boiling water into shortening until melted. Add molasses. Sift dry ingredients, add praise-winning walnuts. (Choose hand-selected "Diamonds." More crisp kernels per pound—they're California's finest!) Add dry ingredients to molasses mixture; beat just until smooth. Bake in well-greased 8x8x2" pan in moderate oven (350° F.) about 35 minutes. Serve warm, with your favorite frosting—or unfrosted. For special occasions, try Orange-Cream Cheese frosting: Blend 2 cakes (3 oz. size) cream cheese with ¼ cup orange marmalade. Add dash of salt, and spread roughly on warm gingerbread. Decorate the frosting with big, plump Diamond Walnut halves. Serves 8.

Note: Walnuts win new friends for old recipes, any course in your meal! Add 'em to hot-breads for extra food values. Taste the new "style" they give soft desserts, custards and puddings. It's true—walnuts add goodness!

Perfume won't MASK
SCALP ODOR

NO MATTER how fragrant your perfume, it can't mask disagreeable SCALP ODOR!

That's what he could've told you as you danced last night. Your hat would probably reveal your secret, too. But why wait for an unfortunate situation to prove to you that just as the body perspires, so does the scalp. And hair, particularly oily hair, collects disagreeable odors. The result is SCALP ODOR—an unpleasant offense.

Make sure your hair doesn't offend. Shampoo it regularly with Packer's Pine Tar Shampoo...the gentle, pure, medicinal pine shampoo that leaves your hair thoroughly cleansed...naturally fragrant. The delicate pine scent does its work—then disappears.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

by MILTON CANIFF

OUR SITUATION IS AWKWARD, BUT NOT PARTICULARLY DANGEROUS...

THE LANDING STRIP HERE WAS DESIGNED FOR MUCH SMALLER AIRCRAFT THAN OUR TRANSPORT! ...WE CAME DOWN LOW ON GAS AND I WAS ABLE TO STOP THE ROLL IN TIME BECAUSE OF OUR REDUCED WEIGHT...

WHEN THE WEATHER CLEARS, THE ARMY WILL FLY IN PLENTY OF FUEL, BUT THE RUNWAY WILL BE TOO SHORT FOR US... SO THE LOCAL AUTHORITIES WILL RECRUIT NATIVE WORKMEN TO LENGTHEN THE STRIP...

GOOD HEAVENS, MAN, I HAVE BUSINESS IN THE INTERIOR—I CAN'T SIT IN THIS FORSAKEN HOLE WAITING FOR A CONSTRUCTION PROJECT...

I'M SURE OUR PEOPLE WILL FLY SMALL AIRCRAFT IN TO FERRY YOU PASSENGERS TO SOME FULL-SCALE AIRPORT —WHEN THIS STORM ENDS...

IS THAT THE FINAL WORD, CAPTAIN? WE ARE DEFINITELY MAROONED?

'DELAYED' IS A BETTER WORD... THERE IS PLENTY OF FOOD, CLOTHING AND HEAT—AND YOU MAY SEND LIMITED RADIO MESSAGES OVER THE ARMY FACILITIES...

UP TO NOW, THE U.S.O. CAMP SHOWS MUST THINK I'M SAVING MYSELF FOR THE BROADWAY OPENING... I COULD HAVE ENTERTAINED MORE SOLDIERS AT THE STAGE DOOR CANTEEN!

YOU COULDN'T HELP GOING TO THE HOSPITAL WHILE YOUR UNIT MOVED ON—AND YOU CAN'T HELP THIS...

BUT THINK OF MY CAREER, TERRY... WHY COULDN'T FATE HAVE PUT AT LEAST AN ASSISTANT HOLLYWOOD DIRECTOR ON THAT PLANE SO I COULD MAKE AN IMPRESSION WHILE WE'RE STUCK HERE?

MAKE AN IMPRESSION ON ME, WATCHFOB! —I MIGHT BE A BIG PRODUCER SOME DAY!

I DON'T THINK YOUR EARS ARE POINTED ENOUGH, TERRY... REMIND ME NEVER TO MARRY YOU AND SPOIL THIS BEAUTIFUL FRIENDSHIP!

COULD I SPEAK WITH YOU FOR A MOMENT, LIEUTENANT?

I DON'T WISH TO ALARM THE CIVILIANS —BUT A HALF-STARVED JAPANESE SOLDIER TRIED TO BREAK INTO THE GARRISON FOOD STORES LAST NIGHT...

WHY DIDN'T HE SURRENDER AND GET FED? ONE OF THE BANZAI—BOY HOLDOUTS, HUH?

APPARENTLY... BUT THE QUESTION IS—ARE THERE MORE HUNGRY DIE-HARDS AROUND? ARE THEY ORGANIZED? HEADS UP AND CARRY YOUR WEAPON!...

WILCO...

ANYTHING WRONG, TERRY?

NO, FOB... NOTHING'S WRONG...

OH, YOU'RE JUST BREAKING THAT PALLOR IN FOR A FRIEND?

WE'RE NOT MORE THAN A HUNDRED YARDS FROM SHALLOW WATER, RIGHT AT THE VILLAGE WHERE WE USED TO LIVE....

BUT I HEAR THAT SPEED-BOAT... SH-H-H... IT'S COMING CLOSER...

ELUDING PURSUIT IN THE FOG, ANNIE AND THE TOGGLES APPROACH SAFETY AS THE SHORE DRAWS NEARER ...AND NEARER...AND NEARER!

LEAPIN' LIZARDS! TH' FOG IS LIFTIN'!

BUT THEY WON'T DARE TO TRY ANYTHING HERE!

WE COULD CALL FOR HELP... THE POLICE WOULD BE SURE TO HEAR US...

OH-OH! HERE THEY COME! STAND BY FOR TROUBLE!

AH! IMAGINE MEETING YOU HERE! ONE YELP AND WE'LL CUT YOU DOWN—UNDERSTAND?

ALL RIGHT—LIVELY NOW! AH, YES... YOUR DOG—IF YOU WANT HIM ALIVE, CALL HIM, ANNIE!

O.K., SANDY! NO USE GETTIN' KILLED—

TAKE THEM BELOW AND GAG THEM—TAKE NO CHANCES!

OH-H—SO NEAR—WHY, THERE'S THE CHIEF OF POLICE NOW!

B-B-BUT WE DON'T DARE DO A THING!

YEAH? WELL, I DARE...

HELP! POLICE! WE'RE BEIN' KIDNAPED!

HEY! WHAT'S GOIN' ON OUT THERE? ... OH, HELLO! IS THAT YOU, MR. TIDNAB?

HELLO, CHIEF! HO-HO! OUR SAIL BOAT BROKE LOOSE ... NEARLY DRIFTED ASHORE HERE BEFORE WE FOUND IT—

OH!... BUT WHAT WAS ALL THAT YELLIN'? SOMETHIN' ABOUT BEIN' KIDNAPED—IT SOUNDED LIKE A CHILD!

OH, THAT! HO-HO! TH' BOYS HAD THE RADIO ON—TURN IT UP, JOE!

...WELL, FOLKS—WILL OUR LITTLE FRIEND ESCAPE THE FOUL CLUTCHES OF THE BRUTE? TUNE IN TOMORROW AT THE SAME TIME— —AND IN THE MEANTIME REMEMBER TO ASK FOR SOKNITS—SAID BACKWARDS THAT SPELLS— (CLICK)—

HA-HA! SURE SOUNDED LIKE A CRIME WAVE! THAT'S A GOOD ONE ON ME—WELL, GLAD YOU FOUND YOUR BOAT, MR. TIDNAB—

NICE WORK, JOE! I ALWAYS SAID THERE MUST BE SOME USE FOR EX-RADIO ANNOUNCERS—

WELL, FOLKS—WE JUST COULDN'T BEAR TO LET YOU LEAVE US WITHOUT SAYING GOODBY—EH, BOYS?

YA! VE'VOULD HAVE MISSED YOU!

HEE-HEE! WE SO HAPPY YOU RETURN NOW!

FLESH FLISH

"ALLIE same me hungries for flesh flish," the Chinaman told the Dunce one day. "Me gloing to catchie flish."

"How, in the name of Tompkins, are you going to catch a fresh fish with the creek covered with ice?" asked the Dunce.

"Flish thru hole in ice," answered the Chinaman.

The Dunce was always ready to go fishing and he brought out his hook and line and the two Teenie Weenies trudged thru the snow to the creek which ran near the Teenie Weenie village. The Chinaman had brought a Teenie Weenie ax with him and the two little chaps hacked a couple of holes thru the ice.

The two Teenie Weenies fished, and fished, and fished, but they never had a single nibble. They were nearly discouraged, when the Chinaman felt a slight tug at his line. He gave a mighty pull and at the same instant the Dunce's line was nearly jerked out of his tiny hands.

"I've got him! I've got him!" shouted the Dunce, as he pulled with all his Teenie Weenie might on his line.

"Me gottie flish! Me gottie blig flish!" screamed the Chinaman, holding tight to his line, which was jerking violently. "Allie same no minnow flish. This blig flish and we all time need plenties of help if we catchie him."

The Chinaman opened up his little mouth and began screaming for help, while the Dunce joined him in even more lusty yells. Presently Gogo came running to the bank of the creek. He grabbed the Dunce's line, and the two little chaps gave a mighty tug that nearly pulled the Chinaman thru his hole in the ice. The two hooks had caught beneath the water, and each Teenie Weenie thought he had hooked a fish.

"Peers to me yo' fellows went to a lot of trouble fo' to catch yo'selves," laughed Gogo.

"Well, I'd never have come down here fishin' if I had known I wasn't going to catch anything but a Chinaman," grinned the Dunce.

"Allie same, me no want to catchie nothings but a Dunce, either," laughed the Chinaman.

All the Teenie Weenies had a great laugh when they heard how the Dunce and the Chinaman had caught each other, and the Cook opened an acorn of pickled minnow and gave the Chinaman a piece as big as a grain of corn. The Chinaman made a chowder out of the pickled fish, and he invited the Dunce to help eat the "flesh flish" they hadn't caught.

GASOLINE ALLEY APPEARS DAILY IN THE TRIBUNE

SHE'S ENGAGED! She's Lovely! She uses Pond's!

CHRISTINA MUIR NEWBERRY, II
daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Phelps Newberry engaged to James Douglas Darling, II

Christina and Jim met early last spring in Overbrook—one of Philadelphia's fashionable "Mainline" suburbs—while Christina was visiting her brother, in the Army Ordnance.

A few weeks later Christina said "yes"... she's another charming Pond's bride-to-be—tall, slim, with shining dark hair, green-gray eyes.

Christina has a happy little way of knowing just what she likes and why. And Pond's Cold Cream is one of her "likes." "I don't see how there could be a nicer face cream anywhere," she says of this silky cream.

This is how she uses Pond's: She smooths soft, fragrant Pond's Cold Cream on face and throat—then smacks over it lightly to help loosen and dissolve dirt and make-up. Tissues off.

She rinses with more Pond's—using quick little whirls of her fingers to work it all around. Tissues again. "This second creaming is grand to make your face feel extra clean and soft," she says.

Copy her twice-over Pond's creamings every night and every morning—for in-between-time freshen-ups, too! It's no accident so many more women and girls use Pond's than any other face cream at any price. Ask for a luxurious, big jar today!

CLOTHING NEEDED! Christina helps regularly at the Needlework Guild in Detroit, where she lives. Here, she is helping to list and pack new clothes to send away. Never before have so many people needed "just everyday clothes," she says. There are clothing relief agencies you can help where you live.

CHOIR OF 1,200 TO BROADCAST SONGS OF YULE

Citizens Show Will Honor Holiday

Rev. John Hubbard

The reverent strains of "Silent Night" instead of shrill school cheers will open the Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast at 9:30 a. m. Dec. 22 over W-G-N. Christmas carols sung by the choruses of 14 suburban high schools will replace the customary salute to a Chicagoland school. The songs will be recorded following the Theater of the Air show in Medinah temple, Saturday night.

A choir of 1,200 will sing the following selections: "The First Noel," "Joy to the World," "O, Come All Ye Faithful," "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," and "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing."

Select Special Choir

A choir of 135 voices, chosen from the best vocalists in each school and under the direction of Walter Armbruster of Thornton Township High school and Junior college, will sing "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Light," "Beautiful Saviour," and "A Merry Christmas."

"Anticipating Christmas" will be the title of a message to be delivered by the Rev. John B. Hubbard, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal church, Park Ridge. Father Hubbard will speak on the significance of this first American peace time Christmas in five years, emphasizing the unselfish nature of the holiday.

Schools Sending Singers

Schools to be represented in the choir and their directors are: Argo Community, Arthur Seith; Blue Island Community, Sheldon Westman; East Aurora, Margaret F. Pouk; Lew Wallace and Horace Mann of Gary, Ind., Helen Eggers and Eula Winters; Glenbard, Raymond Carr; Lyons Township, Clarence Dissinger; Maine Township, Alexander Harley; Niles Township, Clara Klaus; Oak Park-River Forest, Ruth Edna Wood; Proviso Township, R. Lee Osburn; Thornton Township, Armbruster; Wheaton, Margaret Dirks, and Hinsdale, Ina Mae Sanders, who will be general director.

A carry-over from the regular Citizens broadcasts will be the reading of the air edition of interscholastic news by William Charles Wingo, Argo Township senior. A quiz on Yuletide traditions and customs will offer six wise students a chance to win $5 in victory stamps. Contestants will be chosen the night of the show from among the students of East Aurora, Lyons Township, Oak Park-River Forest, Maine Township, Niles Township, and Wallace High schools.

Group Plans Broadcast

Plans for the broadcast were made by the In-and-About Chicago Music Educators club, Helen G. Cravener, president. Other officers are: Arthur W. Seith, vice president; Maude B. Purdum, secretary, and Helen Egger, secretary.

Directors are: Armbruster, Jessie Carter, Margaret Dirks, Eileen Mannion, Mary McKay, R. Lee Osburn, Margaret F. Pouk, Carr, Lillian L. Schaeffer, Ann Trimingham, Sheldon C. Westman, and Beulah I. Zander.

Prior to the recording, the high school singers will witness a performance of "Hansel and Gretel" by the Theater of the Air cast. Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE will fill his usual role as master of ceremonies.

Women Voters to Hear State President Talk

Mrs. Walter Fisher, president of the Illinois League of Women Voters and past president of Winnetka PTA, will speak on "Politics—Good or Bad?" before the north side league at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday in Indian Boundary fieldhouse, 2500 Lunt av.

American girls who distrust their charm after hearing Yanks' approval of Australian, French, or English beauty may receive reassurance from Sgt. Ernest M. Zobel, 6420 Wayne av., Okinawa veteran who has returned to Chicago after 15 months in the Pacific.

Sgt. Zobel

"I didn't want to marry any of those foreigners," announced the 24 year old sergeant. "It's an American girl for me!" The bronze star was awarded Sgt. Zobel for service with the 96th infantry division on Okinawa last June when he saved the life of a wounded buddy by dragging him to cover despite intense machine gun fire.

A Sullivan High school graduate and former John Marshall law school student, Sgt. Zobel is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Zobel, on furlough after three years in the army. "Don't know whether he's decided to return to law school or not," said the soldier's father. "I think he's busy looking for a wife."

Great Care Necessary During Primary Stages in Production of Milady's Mink Coat

So that the legend of beauty attached to the mink may be perpetuated, ranchers give infinite care to their herds from the breeding period in March thru the pelting season in November. Paul Serdar, owner of the Imperial Mink ranch, Wadsworth, rechecks the grading of milk pelts before putting the animals in the gas box. By blowing thru pipe, he checks underfur for color and texture, and leather for primeness. The whiteness of the pelt determines its condition. Holding the mink is Mike Serdar, while Paul Neal and Russell Bristol await judgment.

When skinning is completed, the pelt is put on a board and refrigerated. Then the fleshing is begun, entailing removal of fat attached to the skin, which formed a cushion between pelt and animal carcass. Loretta Lauer uses ordinary table knife to remove fat. She is the wife of an Imperial farm worker now in service. When the knife is applied (right), it cuts thru to the leather, but the frozen pelt is not injured. Approximately one-fourth pound of fat is yielded from each mink. This, together with carcass, is sold to rendering plants.

The minks are taken from the furring pens, in which they were placed about two months ago, and graded for pelting. The animals then are put in the gas box. Excellence of fur is determined by breeding, diet, and caging.

The minks are put to death in the gas box in batches of 30 to 40. Then the pelting process is completed before the next group is prepared for pelting. Each animal is skinned immediately by clamping the forepaw, and slitting the animal's underbody from rear paw to rear paw. Mark Balmas, beginning the operation, takes pains not to damage the pads (paws). Process takes approximately two minutes.

With towels protecting the precious fur, Mark Balmer pulls the skin over the mink's head as one peels off a sock. Pelt remains inside out thru remainder of process, and arrives at New York auctions with the leather side exposed. M. J. Neal (right) prepares the next pelt for skinning.

Final step is the removal of pelts from the board on which they were stretched immediately following skinning, as M. J. Neal demonstrates. Pelts average in length from 32 to 36 inches, and are 4½ inches wide at base tapering to 2½ inches at shoulder.

MINK GIVING UP PELTS AT PEAK OF SPLENDOR

Headed for Auction in the East

BY GENEVIEVE FLAVIN

Stilled of life in the full moment of its beauty, thus is bequeathed and perpetuated the mink legend. Brought, within a six months span, to the full complement of growth, ranch bred varieties of this branch of the weasel family are pelted in November, providing such gemlike mutations as the platinum, Kohinor, and silver frost, as well as the long time dark favorites.

Within the last two weeks some 2,200 mink at Paul Serdar's Imperial mink ranch near Wadsworth have been prepared for the New York December auctions. Part of a herd of 3,500, the greater percentage is from those born in May.

From the moment the litters of 2½ inch hairless kittens appeared until their selection at maturity by New York grading experts for pelting, the herd received the utmost care from Serdar and his staff.

Carefully Planned Diet

The diet was vitamin balanced and consisted of ground horsemeat, leafy green vegetables, tripe, fish, pre-cooked whole grain cereals, milk, and tomatoes. Each day 1,500 pounds of this menu were served the 3,500 mink. Results came with the harvest of females weighing from 2 to 2½ pounds, 32 inches in length, and males of 4 to 6 pounds each, approximating 36 inches in length.

Because of the highly nutritious diet, the pelts reached a silken, fine haired perfection, deep plied and richly colored. Protection from sun and rain helped to insure even fading qualities, which long will be appreciated by the eventual purchaser of coats fashioned from these mink.

Foretelling the exact moment to begin pelting, Serdar stated, becomes almost psychic. He compared the final unfolding of the mink's undercoating to that of a rose. "There comes that moment when the bloom reaches the zenith of perfection, and beyond that instance is overblown. We capture the mink bloom at its supremacy, for, like the rose, it, too, begins to lose beauty beyond this point."

Must Recheck Grading

Thruout the pelting period workers at the Imperial ranch handled from 200 to 300 mink a day. The process began with the rechecking by Serdar of the New York experts' grading, and with the deaths of batches of 30 to 40 mink at a time thru use of a cyno gas box.

Each batch or group of mink then is completely put thru the pelting steps before the next group is selected. Death in the cyno gas box comes almost immediately. Then, while still warm, the animal is skinned. This step takes approximately two minutes and consists of slitting the pelt from hind pad to hind pad, and removing the skin overhead, as one peels off a sock.

Pelts then are stretched on boards and put into the freezer, so that the layer of fat, which formed a cushion between the skin and carcass, can harden. Later this is removed with ordinary dinner knives, yielding about a fourth of a pound each. This fat, together with the carcass, is sold to rendering plants that sell it to soap manufacturers.

Judge Pelt by Whiteness

When the pelts are completely dried they are removed from the boards, bundled, packaged, and prepared for shipping to the auctioneers. They remain inside out with the leather of the pelt showing. Thru the whiteness of the pelt the purchaser judges its primeness. [A completely white pelt attests perfect prime.] The leather also records injuries and scars.

Because the fur remains inside out, as when drawn over the mink's head, the purchaser must judge the quality by looking at and feeling the fur just above the exposed tail. The hind paws also are shown, but these are finally used by manufacturers for inexpensive mink paw sports coats.

Serdar will travel to the auction in New York this month. For he states the story is not finished until the final hammer drops, signifying the last bid and the last pelt sold. "Tho each rancher estimates the sales value of his crop, like all other produce, it is determined by the number of pelts brought or sent to the auction, their variety, and fineness.

Fifty to Seventy Pelts in Coat

At auction headquarters — there are three in the United States designated each year to handle certain mutations—the rancher's bundles are rematched and bundled in coat lots. [The average mink coat requires from 50 to 70 pelts. These bundles then are auctioned off to the highest bidder. The rancher, however, if he does not like the top price offered, may refuse the bid.

The Imperial farm crop will include all color mutations save the fabulous white mink, which will be put on the market, by agreement of all mink ranchers, next year. Termed a freak, the white mink first was produced several years ago in Canada.

Represent All Types

Winner of first place this year in the North Central Mink show for mutations, the Serdar pelts will excite active interest among bidders. The colors represent all types developed: the platinum mink of the variety which last year brought the highest price [$25,000] ever paid for a mink coat; the silver blue, which brought $385 a skin in the 1943 auctions, establishing it as more expensive than sable; the ever popular black; the Kohinor, which is white

Mrs. Frederick A. Graff, 71, 1465 Olive av., hinted that her 81 year old husband may be a problem child even after 50 years of marriage. Said she: "I can't keep him home from work even when he's sick. He likes his job. But we are so happy. We hope for many more years together." Graff has been employed 53 years by a Loop men's clothing store.

An open house in the home of their daughter, Mrs. William C. Henning, Winnetka, marked the 50th milestone for Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Henning, who live with their son, Walter C., at 333 Barton av., Evanston. More than 40 friends and relatives attended.

Before his retirement several years ago Henning was a vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago. The couple, Evanstonians for 20 years, has three grandchildren.

Wed for 60 Years

Their 60th wedding was observed by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Peterson, 1124 Dobson st., Evanston, both of whom were born in 1862 in Sweden. Two sons, three daughters, and four grandchildren were among persons attending an open house. Two grandsons in service were unable to be present. The Petersons came to the United States in 1880. They met in Joliet and were married there in 1885. In 1925 they moved from Joliet to Evanston.

DANCES AROUND WORLD TWICE WITH ONE LEG

Showman Tells Yanks: 'Don't Be Licked!'

BY RAY SCHOTTER

"The young fellows in those hospitals are going to be sick with the misery of a thousand heartaches," said the tall, broad shouldered speaker as he moved easily about, polishing a glass which he held up speculatively against the sunlight spotting the room.

"They're going to feel the world crack from underneath them all too often, but if they keep hammering away in their minds that they simply will not be licked—that they can't lose—that they are as good as any man who walks this earth—no charity organization will be paying their board bill 10 years from now."

Six foot, 175 pound Frank Morgner, 1164 N. Dearborn st., feels he is qualified to speak on the future awaiting many a World War II vet now undergoing treatment in army and navy hospitals. Frank holds this belief because he has danced his way around the world twice. There is, however, one important addition. Frank danced on one leg!

Finds His Double

Morgner tasted the bitterness that many soldiers now are experiencing when he was only 9. It was the old story of childish carelessness. He ran out into the street to climb aboard a slow moving wagon, and he slipped.

In spite of the loss of his right leg he became a newsboy on the streets of Columbus, O. Not many months later he met the lad who was to be his friend and partner for a quarter century in show business.

Curiously enough the friend, Foy Large, had lost his left leg when he also was 9. Large's experience was much the same as Morgner's except he slipped beneath a steam locomotive. The two became fast friends, partly because of the similarity of their accidents and partly because each was nearly of the same height, weight, and age. Each had similar tastes; each sold newspapers.

Take Up Tumbling

The two in younger life never attempted to walk with artificial limbs. They made their way about Columbus with the aid of crutches. While they worked and went to school they amused themselves practicing tumbling stunts in a gymnasium.

Frank first got the idea that they capitalize on their handicap; that they attempt to get into show business. What had been play now became a tortuous grind. Morgner, the understander in a balancing act, would rise slowly and stand erect. Then he began lifting a barbell which weekly was made heavier. When he could arise carrying a load of 150 pounds, he attempted the same stunt balancing Large on his hands.

Get Chance With Circus

The two invented a comedy routine to add lightness to their act. Meanwhile they haunted the offices of a local booking agency. The chance came when the Shrine circus visited the city. They were given a one performance spot—a very minor spot—on the bill. How was their act received? Suffice to say they stayed with the circus seven years.

Meanwhile, Large and Morgner had been experimenting with a dance routine. They had a special, extraordinarily wide suit constructed which would clothe the two. The trousers had only two legs—one for Large's and one for Morgner's. By wrapping their arms about each other they could walk onto the stage; go into their dance routine, and do a few tumbling acts and a hand stand for variety.

They felt they were good enough now to quit the circus and go into vaudeville. After a tryout in the old Royal theater in New York City, they played upstate New York, and then at the all-important Palace theater in the metropolis.

They were signed to a three year contract on the Keith-Orpheum circuit, and then they visited every major city in America many times. They decided on a foreign tour, and were booked at the Palladium in London, the Scala in Berlin, and the Alhambra in Paris. They played four months in Australia before returning to the United States where they remained several years before returning to Europe.

Frank makes plain that their success was due neither to accident nor genius. Their determination never to say licked, and steady, grinding work were the deciding elements.

Warns About Future

"These young fellows getting out of hospitals don't want sympathy or charity," Morgner said. "All they want is a chance—and the right—to be treated as any other normal American citizen.

"Right now the public is bubbling over with willingness to give any wounded vet his chance. What the vet must be warned against is what will be the public's attitude five or 10 years from now?"

Morgner believes nothing was more morale shattering than to walk into a business establishment and have the manager say, "We don't want any one legged help around here."

"That's when any soldier," Morgner continued, "will have to grit his teeth and say, 'They're not going to lick me. I'm just as good as any man with two legs. I can win, and I'm going to win.'

Dreams Are Happy Ones

"If they will keep that thought uppermost, neither he nor the public will have to worry about his getting established on some busy corner—with a tin cup as his only asset."

Morgner had one sidelight on his misfortune. Always in his dreams, he said, he has two legs.

"In spite of all the years I've been with only one leg, I always see myself running, and jumping, and walking just as any normal person. That may give you some idea of what lies ahead of a disabled vet psychologically."

Frank quit the show business three years ago chiefly because his wife, Elsie, objected to the long periods he was away from home on tour. Large is training another one legged partner in Petersburg, Ill., to go back on the boards. Frank since has bought a share in the Radio grill, 110 E. Hubbard st., where he carries on every day walking with the aid of an artificial limb.

Fifty per cent of the customers do not know the leg is artificial.

Let's Take a Jaunt Down the Rialto

The Monopedic Marvels, former vaudeville team, nonchalantly decide to take a stroll down the boulevard. Foy Large (left), Petersburg, Ill., and Frank Morgner, 1164 N. Dearborn st., on the stage together a quarter century, broke up their act when the latter decided to go into business. Each man lost a leg when only 9 years old. Morgner has decided views on how the public should treat hospitalized war veterans.

veiled with blue-black guard hairs; light and dark pastels, and the silver blue.

From the Imperial herd, Serdar has chosen 900 of the finest females and 100 males for next year's breeding. A polygamous animal, the male mink may be bred successfully each year to eight or 10 females. The female in turn may be mated first to a black mink, then a week later to a blue frost, and the following week to a Kohinor. When her litter is produced it will have a black kitten, a blue frost kitten, and a Kohinor. Size of the litters range from one to 12, with the average set at five. The gestation period is 32 to 78 days. The young are born in litters despite different breeding dates. The number of kittens in no way affects the quality of the mink. This is determined in the breeding, future diet, and housing, Serdar explained.

FUNDS SOUGHT FOR MEDICAL CARE OF NEGRO

Churches to Tell Today of Hospital's Needs

The aid of Evanston and north shore residents, church groups, and business organizations is being sought this month in a drive to complete the $200,000 Evanston Community hospital building fund.

Dr. Tittle

C. D. Foster

Having pledged their support, most of the churches from Rogers Park community up to and including Waukegan will appeal to their congregations today to support the campaign.

The hospital, which is located at 2026 Brown av., is the only medical center for Negroes residing in the city's northern limits and suburbs.

$30,000 of Fund Raised

More than $30,000 has been raised this year in these districts. It is expected that the remainder will be met thru individual, church group, and business firm subscriptions.

Heading the drive are Dr. Ernest F. Tittle, pastor of Evanston First Methodist church, chairman of the sponsors' committee, and Clyde D. Foster, president of Quinlan & Tyson real estate company, as general chairman. Foster has served as president of the hospital board for 15 years.

Dr. Tittle will introduce Dr. Elizabeth W. Hill, chief of staff at Community hospital, to his congregation during morning services today, when she personally will launch the campaign among the membership. Dr. Tittle and Foster also have announced the creation of a special gifts group which will solicit wealthy north shore residents and corporations within the next two weeks. The goal is $50,000. Owen L. Coon, 1201 Sheridan rd., Evanston, president of General Finance corporation, will head the committee with Foster and Tittle.

Open Hospital in 1930

The present hospital was established in 1930 in a remodeled house on Brown st. Its capacity of 18 beds, even then, was not considered adequate. For years a daily average of 28 patients has been cared for in this space, resulting in overcrowding and impairment of efficiency, said Foster. What is more serious, he pointed out, is that injured and critically ill patients must be turned away for lack of facilities.

The proposed building, designed by Perkins, Wheeler & Will, architects, will accommodate 50 patients, a level considered safe for the average need as established by hospital and medical authorities.

Of simple, modern design, allowing for functional operation and arrangement, the building will be erected at Gray st. and Foster av. While including no luxuries or frills, it will provide efficient medical treatment.

Serve as Sponsors

Serving on the medical staff are 11 white north shore physicians.

AN OLD TIMER SLIPS INTO 80S, STILL AT WORK

Predicting the Weather Is His Specialty

BY RUTH LOGAN

Like your work and keep your health and some day you'll have a birthday cake with 80 candles. Frank A. Wheeler, famous along Erie st. as a weather forecaster, proved his prophecy of longevity last week.

Fellow employes in Currier Lee Warehouses, Inc., 427 Erie st., where Wheeler hasn't missed a day of work as a cooper in 25 years, served not one but two gaily iced cakes at a birthday party during a lunch hour. Overwhelmed by the surprise, Wheeler mourned that he wasn't dressed for the occasion.

Tops Weather Bureau

The octogenarian also has ventured to predict outcomes of races and Presidential elections [the last three correctly], tho not with the accuracy that characterizes his weather forecasts. "We pay more attention to Frank than the weather bureau. He never misses," declared Ward Castle, president of the firm.

"Candy companies in the neighborhood make shipments if Frank mentions a cold wave and hesitate if he says the weather will be warm," Castle continued.

"It's no secret, just common sense," Wheeler argued. "I study the direction of the wind three days before and three days after the beginning of each season, and then strike an average. It tells me the weather for three months ahead. I've been doing it for a long time."

Likes Occasional Nip

A third rule for longevity that's good for him but maybe not for everybody, said Wheeler, concerns the taking of an occasional shot of whisky or a glass of beer. "But just once in a while," he cautioned. "I'm not really a drinking man."

Wheelers' birthday gifts included a bottle of his favorite brand, which he said suits him because of his age even if, being a bachelor, he doesn't have any grandchildren. He expects to keep his job 15 or 20 years yet. "Retire? Who wants to retire?" scoffed the cooper, who works without glasses and has perfect hearing. He stopped smoking six years ago. "I'm as strong and can work as long as anybody. I often take a hand with the other men loading 200 pound boxes."

Once a Lumberjack

Born in 1865 in Freeport, Ill., Wheeler has lived since 1893 in Chicago. From then until 1900 he worked each winter as a lumberjack in Michigan. "I was a top loader," he said reminiscently. "The job was a lot more dangerous then than now." He pointed to a scar over his left eye, souvenir of one of several hairbreadth escapes from death.

Wheeler also has worked in grocery stores and flour mills and has driven a dray. He recalled Chicago's muddy streets and board sidewalks of 50 years ago but insisted that the city "hasn't changed much. It's always been a busy place." He saw his first automobile in 1897, an electric car with a guide lever instead of a steering wheel.

Can 80 Candles Go on One Cake?

LEADING SINGERS JOIN IN TRIBUTE TO JEROME KERN

Hour's Memorial Program Starts at 330 P. M.

BY LARRY WOLTERS

A group o fthe leading popular singers of America will pay tribute to the late Jerome Kern who wrote much of the most tuneful music of the century. A few years ago Kern visited W-G-N and gave his advice to young composers who were then participating in a contest for a typically American operetta. The competition was sponsored by the station.

Jerome Kern

"Your writing must be sincere, honest, unaffected, and genuine," Kern said. "It must come from the honest, unaffected, and genuine," heart." That was a good description of Kern's own music. He had a great gift for song. He wrote more than 100 musical productions, 31 for the stage alone, and hundreds of songs. Today it seems that such Kern melodies as "Ol' Man River," from "Show Boat," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" from "Roberta," and a score of others will be everlasting.

Many Stars to Be Heard

On today's memorial program will be heard Bing Crosby, Nelson Eddy, Judy Garland, Hildegarde, Patrice Munsel, Dinah Shore, Frank Sinatra, and Earl Wrightson. Several of them have been associated with the introduction of Kern songs, others have popularized them. They will be supported by the orchestras of Robert Armbruster and Al Goodman. The program will be aired over WBBM-CBS from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m., replacing the regular Nelson Eddy show and the Family hour for today.

Oscar Hammerstein II., with whom Kern collaborated on "Show Boat" is in charge of production and the entire script. Irving Berlin, Richard Rodgers, and Deems Taylor, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, all close personal friends of Kern, are assisting in the production.

Medley Opens Program

The hour will open with a medley by the full company. Eddy will sing "All the Things You Are," in Hollywood, and then will join Miss Munsel in a duet of "Make Believe." Miss Munsel will be in New York.

Miss Munsel then will sing "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," Wrightson, "The Night Was Made for Love," and Jack Smith, "Who."

Sinatra will sing "The Song Is You," Crosby, "I've Told Every Little Star," and Hildegarde, "The Last Time I Saw Paris," which has come to be identified with her name.

Miss Garland's solo will be "Look for the Silver Lining." Miss Shore will sing "Just My Bill," which Helen Morgan made famous. Goodman will feature "Waltz in Swingtime," and Armbruster's orchestra and chorus another medley. Eddy, Miss Munsel, and the entire company will join in the finale singing and playing of "Ol' Man River."

Gets Wish

Mary Paxton, who conducts the Wishing Well program over W-G-N at 8:45 a. m. weekdays, had her own wish come true. Her husband, Durward Kirby, ABC network announcer, is getting out of the navy this week.

Jascha Heifetz Sunday Evening Hour Soloist

Jascha Heifetz, violinist, will be soloist on the Sunday Evening hour over WLS-ABC at 7 o'clock tonight. His selections will include the Andante and Rondo from Lalo's "Symphony Espagnole" and Smetana's "Songs of Home." Stock Yards Drama on W-G-N's Chicago Story

The growth of the meat packing industry in Chicago will be depicted on W-G-N's Chicago Story at 9 o'clock tonight. The production will dramatize highlights in the history of the stockyards. A musical background for the show will be furnished by a 17 piece orchestra under the direction of Robert Trendler.

CHOIR OF 1,200 TO BROADCAST SONGS OF YULE

Citizens Show Will Honor Holiday

The reverent strains of "Silent Night" instead of shrill school cheers will open the Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast at 9:30 a. m. Dec. 22 over W-G-N. Christmas carols sung by the choruses of 14 suburban high schools will replace the customary salute to a Chicagoland school. The songs will be recorded following the Theater of the Air show in Medinah temple, Saturday night.

Rev. John Hubbard

A choir of 1,200 will sing the following selections: "The First Noel," "Joy to the World," "O, Come All Ye Faithful," "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," and "Hark!" the Herald Angels Sing."

Select Special Choir

A choir of 135 voices, chosen from the best vocalists in each school and under the direction of Walter Armbruster of Thornton Township High school and Junior college, will sing "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Light," "Beautiful Saviour," and "A Merry Christmas."

"Anticipating Christmas" will be the title of a message to be delivered by the Rev. John B. Hubbard, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal church, Park Ridge. Father Hubbard will speak on the significance of this first American peace time Christmas in five years, emphasizing the unselfish nature of the holiday.

Schools Sending Singers

Schools to be represented in the choir and their directors are: Argo Community, Arthur Seith; Blue Island Community, Sheldon Westman; East Aurora, Margaret F. Pouk; Lew Wallace and Horace Mann of Gary, Ind., Helen Eggers and Eula Winters; Glenbard, Raymond Carr; Lyons Township, Clarence Dissinger; Maine Township, Alexander Harley; Niles Township, Clara Klaus; Oak Park-River Forest, Ruth Edna Wood; Proviso Township, R. Lee Osburn; Thornton Township, Armbruster; Wheaton, Margaret Dirks, and Hinsdale, Ina Mae Sanders, who will be general director.

A carry-over from the regular Citizens broadcasts will be the reading of the air edition of interscholastic news by William Charles Wingo, Argo Township senior. A quiz on Yuletide traditions and customs will offer six wise students a chance to win $5 in victory stamps. Contestants will be chosen the night of the show from among the students of East Aurora, Lyons Township, Oak Park-River Forest, Maine Township, Niles Township, and Wallace High schools.

Hansel and Gretel, Along with Santa, Will Visit Woodlawn Again

Christmas time to most people means the time of the ever popular evergreen trees with brightly colored lights, holly wreaths, and mistletoe, but in Woodlawn it means all of that and something more. For it is during the holiday season that dramatic students, glee club, and orchestra of Loreto academy, 1447 E. 65th st., traditionally present their performance of the ever popular children's operetta, "Hansel and Gretel." Two casts will be used. During the operetta the mother, played by Barbara Zalewski, busily churns butter, while Gretel, portrayed by Mary Jane Huck, catches up with her knitting. Hansel (Frances Perry) spends the time day dreaming.

Gretel, portrayed by Geraldine Walsh, and Hansel (Frances Perry) fall asleep in the woods from sheer exhaustion, but three angels come to protect them. The angels (left to right) are Delphine Ward, Pat Horgan, and Ann Simmons. The operetta will be presented in the academy's auditorium at 8:15 p. m. Friday, next Sunday, Dec. 17 and 18. Matinee performances at 2:15 p. m. will be given Friday, Saturday, and Dec. 17.

A Backward Bunch Are These Vets

Fifteen cooties were dragged, shoved, and thrown into the middle of the room on the second floor of the building at 6533 Cottage Grove av., recently. There they officially were initiated as shavetails [officers] of GI Pup Tent 11, Military Order of the Cootie, fun organization of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The order is an honorary group within the V. F. W. Membership is by invitation only, candidates being selected on the basis of the work they have done for the senior organization. Their special projects are the collection of funds to be used for entertainment of service men in hospitals and promoting the enlistment of eligible men into the ranks of the V. F. W.

Do Everything Backwards

Members of the Cootie pride themselves on the way they do everything backward. At meetings members back into the room when entering. New business is introduced by seconding a motion. The next speaker begins in the customary manner, saying, "I move . . . so and so." On a vote, the noes pass a motion while the ayes defeat it. Booing, rather than applause, is the sign of approval.

None of the usual names are given the leaders. Instead of a president the seam squirrel holds highest office; keeper of the lousey record is the historian, hungry nit the secretary. Three degrees of membership are nit, grey back, and cootie. Only full fledged cooties are permitted to wear the official uniform consisting of white shoes, white trousers with a red stripe down the side, white shirt with as many cooties embroidered on it as possible, red vest with a 15 inch cootie on the back, and red tie and hat with two yellow tassels.

Group Picks Shavetails

Men who were initiated and their offices are: James W. Luke, 6657 Ingleside av., seam squirrel; Henry O. Strey, 3057 Cheltenham pl., blanket bum; Charles F. Jeans, 4615 Emerald av., keeper of the lousey record; Frank Morrissey, 6846 South Park av., pill pusher; Cappelle H. Damrell, 7439 Yates, shyster, and Robert L. Wenestron, 6347 Ingleside av., jimmy legs.

Arthur M. Stanley, 6958 Dorchester av., provost marshal; John J. Martin, 600 E. 75th st., Theodore Behr, 9640 Carpenter st., and William Bell, 6415 Le Claire av., tightwads; Frank O'Leath, 1624 E. 56th st., shirt reader; Alexander Johnston, 7111 Eberhart av., National V. F. W. home chairman, and Richard Butler, 738 W. 87th st., booster chairman.

Men from 11 Posts

Membership of Pup Tent 11 is made up of 70 men from the following south and southwest side V. F. W. posts: James Hamilton Lewis, John McShane, Tractor, Victory, Hyde Park-Kenwood, South Town, Progress, Luzon, Your Buddies, Schuman-Heink, and Ray W. Nelson. An organization for wives of the cooties, patterned along similar lines, is known as The Ladybugs.

As a special Christmas project the unit will participate in the V. F. W. campaign to send 500 service men in army and navy hospitals gifts for Christmas, thru the Tribune's Friend of the Yank program. Pup Ten 11 has pledged to take care of a minimum of 10 men, providing them with gifts amounting to $2.50 or more.

Photo Exhibit

The 7th national salon of photography, sponsored by the Lens Camera club, will be held at the South Side Community Art center, 3831 Michigan av., from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily thru December.

Happy in their home, unaware of the dangers that are to befall their children, the father, played by Betty Rhoads, passes an idle minute with the mother, portrayed by Barbara Zalewski.

Five members of the cast, sans glamorous costumes and makeup, catch up on the task that hangs ever heavy over the heads of all Thespians, the learning of their lines. Left to right are Betty Riedel, who takes the role of the mother; Mary Jane Huck, Gretel; Barbara Walters, the witch; Genevieve Lyons, the dew fairy, and Kathleen Walpole, the father.

Members of the cast give a helping hand to their behind the scenes workers, the backstage committee. Lolita Olivia, who plays the role of the dew fairy, mounts a ladder to trim the mantel with wet asbestos covering, while chorus members Dolores O'Brien (center) and Eloise Tomasik apply covering to the fireplace.

If the witch, played by Jeanne Kessel, doesn't inspire enough horror it won't be because Makeup Artists Mary McInerney, a chorus member who applies the powder, and Joyce Jandro, the dew fairy who applies the eyebrow pencil, didn't spend enough time at their art. Miss Therese Cuny, regional chairman of the national Catholic Theater conference, is director. Russell Harvey directs the glee club.

PLEDGE SCHOOL AS EAST SIDE FILES DEMAND

Petitions Point to Needs of Area

Citizens seeking to speed construction of a $1,250,000 combined grade and high school building planned for East Side community have presented signatures of 13,200 petitioners from East Side, South Deering, and Hegewisch which will be brought to the attention of the board of education.

Signers are residents of the area bounded by Doty av., south city limits, state line, and 95th st. Site chosen for the school is the two blocks from 108th to 110th sts. between Avenues J and H.

Frankland Promises Action

"Construction is supposed to start next Aug. 1," Wilson Frankland, 8819 Harper av., board of education member, said. "Plans are drawn and the site has been acquired. The delay has been caused by war time priorities."

Frankland, labor representative on the board, confirmed the project would cost about $1,250,000.

The coördinating committee to hasten the project which members say has been hanging fire for years includes representatives of the following groups: Gallistel PTA, Taylor PTA, Independent Business Men of East Side, Illiana Civic council, Wolfe Park Civic association, and the East Side Chamber of Commerce. Herman R. Sauer, 10515 Ewing av., is president of the coördinating committee and Fred Bridges, president of the Wolfe Lake Civic association, is secretary.

Cite Distances to Schools

Schools presently serving this area are Gallistel grade school, Ewing av. and 104th st., and Bowen High school, Manistee av. and 89th st. Pointing out these facts, the petition adds:

"There is now and has been a respective group of good citizens that has been unable to secure adequate education for their children because of the great distance to the present schools from their homes. Many of these people live as far south as the city limits which means a distance of six miles to the present high school [Bowen]. Many live as far south as 188th st. which means a distance of two or three miles from the present grade school [Gallistel]."

The petitioners further contend in a resolution that the board of education approved construction of a combined grade and high school on the Avenue J site in 1929. Altho plans were subsequently drawn, they state, the depression that followed and the war led to inaction.

Point to Other Building

Atty. Alfred O'Connor, 9152 Commercial av., pointed out that in the meantime "they have built schools all over Chicago." He listed 13 high schools, 13 grade schools, and five stadiums.

By next spring 1,500 new homes will have been constructed in the East Side community since 1939, Mrs. John W. Lambert, president of Gallistel PTA, said. "Each will average 3.5 persons per family," she said, "which fact makes it vitally necessary to construct the school without delay."

Gallistel is believed to be one of the first PTA groups to go on record indorsing such a project. Members have the approval of their district in this campaign.

Claim District Ignored

In claiming the district had been "ignored" Cyril B. Robb, 10357 Avenue J, a member of Gallistel PTA and the father of five children, declared: "Indignation is great but the demand is greater. We are determined to get immediate action." Mrs. Robb has been an active member of the group also.

Latest reports by members canvassing the territory for signatures were submitted at the East Side Chamber of Commerce meeting held last week in Illiana American Legion hall, 102d st. and Avenue M. Gallistel PTA canvassing the Wolfe Park area brought in 7,200 signatures, Illiana Civic council [incomplete] 3,000, and Taylor PTA 3,000.

Members expect to obtain 15,000 signers. Copies of the resolution have been sent to the following: President James B. McCahey of the board of education, Frankland, Ald. Pacini [10th], Cong. Rowan [D., 2d], State Sen. Butler [R., 13th], and Mayor Kelly.

IS YOUR HOME A MISSING WAR STAMP BUREAU?

Leaders Hope to Convert Them Into Bonds

The Victory loan campaign is on the hunt for approximately 5 million dollars believed to be in bureau drawers and desks in the form of war savings stamps purchased by persons in Chicago and Cook county.

The stamps, in all denominations, usually have been pasted in books with capacities for $18.75 which have never been completely filled. Bond committees are now asking owners to bring this idle capital into use during the final bond drive.

Bond Leaders Report

George Rosenthal, 1003 E. 55th st., and Paul R. Wilkinson, 1525 E. 53d st., co-chairmen of the drive in Hyde Park, have reported bond sales of more than $262,052. In the east side community, Felix M. Buoscio, 9138 Commercial av., reported $14,400 in bonds sold, and Edward Froderman, 3944 Cottage Grove av., chairman in the Kenwood-Oakland community, a total of $530,037.

Hyde Park, Hirsch, and Bowen High schools have reported sales of enough bonds to pay for 45 hospital units at Gardiner General and Vaughan hospitals. A hospital unit consists of an X-ray machine, therapeutic lamp, leg splint, fever cabinet, and other equipment for the care of hospitalized veterans.

Hirsch Well Over Top

Hirsch High school has sold $48,825 worth of bonds, to exceed its quota of $30,000 by 66 per cent. To date 16 hospital units have been purchased. Four of the highest bond salesmen will have their portraits painted by students of the art department.

Hyde Park High school, also with a quota of $30,000, has sold bonds in excess of $41,000. This figure has enabled the purchase of 13 hospital units.

Bowen High school hopes to sell $60,000 in bonds to buy 20 hospital units. To date $48,000 worth has been sold.

Du Sable Passes Goal

Du Sable High school reached its quota of $65,000, but expects to obtain an additional $35,000 before the end of the drive. Stars of "Carmen Jones" appeared at a recent bond drive pep rally. If the anticipated figure of $100,000 is reached, 33 hospital units will be purchased.

Students at Wendell Phillips High school have been soliciting stores, business places, and individuals to bring in $45,000. Altho this is their goal, school officials believe total sales will reach $80,000.

South Shore High school has sold $45,000 to date, but expects to reach its quota of $50,000 and purchase 16 hospital units. Chicago Vocational High school promised to pay for two hospital units and has sold $6,100 worth so far.

Cootie More Than Memory with Vets

To Mrs. Charles George, 2244 Bell av., her husband is just plain Charley, but in the V. F. W. honorary organization, the Military Order of the Cootie, he is a hide gimlet. This title is equivalent to vice commander. During meetings members don brilliant red and white uniforms, but at other times they identify themselves by wearing a silver reproduction of a cootie on their coat collars. Mrs. George usually has to pin the cootie on her husband's coat.

WORKERS RENEW EFFORTS TO FILL WAR FUND QUOTA

With eight more days to go before the close of the Community and War Fund victory campaign, volunteer workers on the south side who have helped raise the city-wide total past 10 million dollars have renewed their efforts to reach the goal of $13,040,700.

James R. Sterling, chairman of the city division, has announced the names of additional south siders awarded memberships in the Order of the Red Feather for their outstanding solicitation.

Recognize South Siders

Mrs. John H. Wheelwright, 5418 Woodlawn av., and Mrs. Solomon Zax, 5515 Hyde Park blvd., co-chairmen of residential solicitation in Hyde Park, merited admission to the order when their section contributed $6,606 or 122 per cent of their $5,400 goal. Leading all other team captains in this section was Mrs. Herman Rosenberg, 5422 University av. Volunteer workers on her team raised $599 or 187 per cent of a $325 quota.

The south side women's special gifts division leads all other workers of the campaign, having raised $318,149 or 97 per cent of its $330,000 goal under the co-chairmanship of Mrs. Otto Madlener and Mrs. Philip D. Block Jr.

Second Highest Team

Second highest return in this city-wide division has been reported by Mrs. C. Arthur Howe and Miss Jane Dubbs, both of South Shore Country club, co-chairmen of the South Shore section. Their teams have collected $5,575 or 111 per cent of the $5,000 quota.

Nearing the 100 per cent mark is the Hyde Park-Kenwood section under the leadership of Mrs. Henry T. Ricketts, 5607 Kenwood av., and Mrs. Clifton M. Utley, 5827 Blackstone av. This section has raised $37,174 or 98 per cent of its $38,000 goal.

LET'S RESTRICT NOISE OF PLAY TO BASEMENT

BY LOUISE BARGELT

We are going to see a definite trend toward soft pedaling the basement gameroom. That is, as far as noise goes. None disputes that it performs its main function in life beautifully. It provides infinite opportunity for pleasure and fun. But if, in performing its natural duties it gives family members upstairs mild or severe case of nerves or jitters it fails to be an entirely satisfactory household asset.

There are many things that can be done to lessen noises, to absorb them, and to relegate them to areas where they are less disturbing.

In houses of tomorrow more basement gamerooms will be placed under the kitchen, rather than under the living room where one usually finds them. The kitchen can .e quite a little noise maker itself unless built and equipped with noise absorption in mind. Thus, those working in it are less likely to be disturbed by underneath hilarity than those who may be talking together in the living room, reading in the library, or sleeping in the bedrooms.

"BALKIN DRUGS—WHERE COURTESY IS ALWAYS FOREMOST"

LEADING SINGERS JOIN IN TRIBUTE TO JEROME KERN

Hour's Memorial Program Starts at 330 P. M.

BY LARRY WOLTERS

A group o fthe leading popular singers of America will pay tribute to the late Jerome Kern who wrote much of the most tuneful music of the century. A few years ago Kern visited W-G-N and gave his advice to young composers who were then participating in a contest for a typically American operetta. The competition was sponsored by the station.

Jerome Kern [Wide World]

"Your writing must be sincere, honest, unaffected, and genuine," Kern said. "It must come from the honest, unaffected, and genuine, heart." That was a good description of Kern's own music. He had a great gift for song. He wrote more than 100 musical productions, 31 for the stage alone, and hundreds of songs. Today it seems that such Kern melodies as "Ol' Man River," from "Show Boat," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" from "Roberta," and a score of others will be everlasting.

Many Stars to Be Heard

On today's memorial program will be heard Bing Crosby, Nelson Eddy, Judy Garland, Hildegarde, Patrice Munsel, Dinah Shore, Frank Sinatra, and Earl Wrightson. Several of them have been associated with the introduction of Kern songs, others have popularized them. They will be supported by the orchestras of Robert Armbruster and Al Goodman. The program will be aired over WBBM-CBS from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m., replacing the regular Nelson Eddy show and the Family hour for today.

Oscar Hammerstein II., with whom Kern collaborated on "Show Boat" is in charge of production and the entire script. Irving Berlin, Richard Rodgers, and Deems Taylor, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, all close personal friends of Kern, are assisting in the production.

Medley Opens Program

The hour will open with a medley by the full company. Eddy will sing "All the Things You Are," in Hollywood, and then will join Miss Munsel in a duet of "Make Believe." Miss Munsel will be in New York.

Sinatra will sing "The Song Is You," Crosby, "I've Told Every Little Star," and Hildegarde, "The Last Time I Saw Paris," which has come to be identified with her name.

Miss Garland's solo will be "Look for the Silver Lining." Miss Shore will sing "Just My Bill," which Helen Morgan made famous. Goodman will feature "Waltz in Swingtime," and Armbruster's orchestra and chorus another medley. Eddy, Miss Munsel, and the entire company will join in the finale singing and playing of "Ol' Man River."

Saluting the holiday season the Chicago Theater of the Air will present Hemperdinck's operatic fantasy, "Hansel and Gretel," at 9 p. m. next Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual network. Col Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

In response to many requests this season's performance will be a repetition of last year's special rhymed version written by Jack La Frandre, director of the series. OPEN CATHOLIC CAMPAIGN FOR CANNED GOODS

A campaign for canned goods gifts to be distributed to needy families in Europe and the Philippines will be launched today in south side Catholic churches. The nation's Catholics will seek to collect 20 million cans of food by next Sunday.

The Rev. William A. O'Connor has been named chairman of the Chicago campaign by Archbishop Stritch. Headquarters are at 126 N. Des Plaines st. The city-wide goal is two million cans.

Gifts should be contributed in the Christmas spirit and should not be cash, Father O'Connor explained. The food will be distributed to war victims without regard to nationality, creed, color, or political belief.

Stress Need for Milk

Father O'Connor said there is need for evaporated, condensed, and powdered milk, milk formula for infants, and chopped fruits and vegetables. The Catholic Salvage bureau will pick up, label, and package for shipping, donations received in Chicago.

The campaign differs from previous ones for clothing and food conducted by war relief services of the welfare conference, Father O'Connor said, since it will be exclusively the work of the Catholic church. Distribution abroad will be thru church channels.

South side parishes taking part in the drive include: St. Ailbe, 9150 Harper av.; St. Ambrose, 1012 E. 47th st.; Annunciata, 3650 E. 112th st.; St. Anselm, 6045 Michigan av.; St. Bride, 7811 Coles av.; St. Bronislava, 8708 Colfax av.; St. Clara, 6427 Woodlawn av.

Do Too Many Cooks Spoil the Cookies, or Too Many Cookies Spoil the Cooks?

The making of Christmas cookies is a project at the Hinsdale Community Nursery school, and the little tots find it a lot of fun. Mrs. A. T. Galloway, director of the school in the Hinsdale Community house, thrills with Billy Warner over his ability in preparing dough for the oven. Billy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Warren, 421 Ravine rd., Hinsdale. [TRIBUNE Photos by Julius Gantter]

Wielder of the rolling pin is Petie Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Davis, 844 S. Lincoln st., Hinsdale. Petie is interested in turning out a star shaped cookie. The nursery is sponsored by mother groups in the village. Mrs. H. R. Galbraith is assistant director.

Joy of sifting flour goes to Pamela Christy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Christy, 20 E. 5th st., Hinsdale. Pamela is inspired by thoughts of pink and green frosting for the finished product. Grownups aren't the only ones who have the "know how."

Too many cooks won't spoil the cookies with Mrs. Ed Hutchens, mother helper, close by. Among the younger chefs (left to right) are Holly Hutchens, Nancy Greer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Greer, 644 S. Garfield st., and Stephen Dotson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Dotson of N. Adams rd., all of Hinsdale. The nursery school is conducted from 9 to 11:30 o'clock every morning.

MAKE ELMHURST YULE A CHEERY ONE, C. OF C. ASKS

Program of Smiles Gets Under Way

This will be a "Cheery Merry Christmas" in Elmhurst if every one in that city coöperates with the Christmas cheer program of the Elmhurst Chamber of Commerce.

All employes of chamber members have been contacted with a little green booklet of explanation, a letter of advice, and a laped button. "Let's make everybody smile" is the slogan. The chamber, of which R. J. Farrington is president, puts it this way:

"We approach the first Yuletide season in five years when we can celebrate this joyous occasion without the shadow of war over the community and nation.

"Warm Every One's Cockles"

"Let's get everybody to join together in making Elmhurst sparkle and reflect a genuine Christmas spirit until it warms the cockles of each and every Elmhurst citizen's heart and reflects in his face a big smile.

"We'll decorate all windows, the streets will be decorated, and Christmas music will ring out in the Elmhurst air. Your part of the job is to start greeting everybody with a Yuletide smile and a remark about Christmas. It will spread."

"GI's Job Is Done"

The little green booklet with its lighted candle and holly decoration calls attention to the fact that the GIs in service have completed their job.

"Now," insists the chamber, "it's our turn to do our part. Let's throw away the frown. Let's smile and everybody wish everybody else a Merry Christmas."

PLAN RIVERSIDE MEMORIAL FOR REV. A. F. WALDO

Church Group Decides on Stained Windows

Friends of the family of the late Rev. Alfred F. Waldo have organized a committee to establish a memorial to the man who served the Riverside Presbyterian church for nearly a quarter of a century.

The memorial probably will be a pair of stained glass windows nearest the pulpit in the church where the Rev. Mr. Waldo preached for so many years.

Nelson W. Willard, chairman of the Alfred F. Waldo Memorial fund, recalls that under Waldo's ministry the membership increased from 192 to 642 and the community house was built.

Windows Group's Choice

"Many of the late pastor's friends feel that some memorial of the service of his devoted life should be placed in the church," Willard said. "The committee after conferring with Mrs. Waldo and in accordance with her preference, and after considering various suggestions, feels that stained glass windows back of the organist will accomplish this objective most satisfactorily.

"One of our members recalls an interesting conversation with Mr. Waldo, who pointed out the choice location of these windows for memorial purposes, with no thought of their ever being used for him."

Serve on Committee

The Rev. Mr. Waldo, due to ill health, retired as pastor of the Riverside church in 1937, but was pastor emeritus until his death Nov. 20, 1941.

Members of the memorial fund committee serving with Willard are A. L. Chambers, Mrs. A. B. Crawford, Mrs. W. G. Ferguson, Dr. S. S. Fuller, Mrs. J. E. Gardner, Mrs. J. B. Gaylord, Joseph Harrington, Mrs. J. P. Mack, W. J. Malcolmson, Mrs. E. C. McPhee, Mrs. A. R. Owen, J. W. Phillips, Mrs. E. C. Saxe, Mrs. C. C. Scott, H. C. Slocum, and the Rev. Paul Turner.

Aid Hospital

Proviso High school students recently donated $419 for purchasing occupational therapy equipment at Vaughan General hospital.

NURSE SERVICE OF LA GRANGE WILL HOLD TEA

An open house Christmas tea will be held from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon by the La Grange Community Nurse and Service association in the organization's new home at 117 W. Calendar av., La Grange.

Mrs. J. C. Munger, president, and all members of the board will be hostesses. Guests, invited from the entire village, will be asked to bring Christmas gifts for the community shop housed in the English basement of the building.

The program arranged by Mrs. H. G. Wright, house chairman, will include selections by an ensemble from the Lyons Township High music department under direction of C. F. Dissinger and a reading by Mrs. Lou Baker.

Buys Old Landmark

For its new home, the association bought an old landmark in the heart of the La Grange business district and had it attractively remodeled.

On the first floor of the building there is a large assembly room, clinic quarters, and an office for the secretary, Mrs. Vesta Angell. One large room of the clinic quarters is furnished with cherry red chairs. Also provided for is a physician's consultation room, a kitchen, and a bathroom.

The La Grange Community Nurse and Service association has two distinct yet closely related branches — clinics and the community shop. Now, for the first time, the two branches are housed under one roof.

Active for 25 Years

For more than 25 years the association has been instrumental in promoting health and welfare. Equipment for the first clinics was meager. Local physicians donated their services. Other interested persons donated necessary furnishings. Location of the center was shifted from the town hall to the basement of the library building, and now to the new home.

At the monthly chest clinics under the auspices of the Tuberculosis Institute of Chicago and Cook county, Dr. Julius B. Novak is assisted by Mrs. B. H. Lord, community nurse. Baby clinics, with Dr. J. M. McBean and Mrs. Lord in charge, are held the 1st and 4th Wednesdays of each month.

NEW DIRECTOR REHEARSING W. SIDE SYMPHONY

The West Side Symphony orchestra, after a brief recess, has resumed rehearsals under its new director, William Fantozzi, in Garfield park fieldhouse, 100 N. Central Park blvd.

Arthur Tabachnik, former conductor, relinquished his baton to Fantozzi when engagements made such demands on his time he could no longer continue as leader.

The West Side Symphony orchestra was organized last March by Walter L. Larsen, general supervisor of music for the park district.

Fantozzi, who is also director of the Park District Opera and Operetta guild, plans to coördinate the activities of the guild and orchestra so that each organization may benefit by working with the other.

"Guild members," said Fantozzi, "will profit by the experience of rehearsing to the accompaniment of the symphony orchestra which will be trained in operatic scores. The orchestra, on the other hand, will become versed in the techniques required in playing for operatic productions."

Fantozzi was a member of the Chicago Symphony orchestra for 13 years.

Lemont High Will Be Heard Saturday

"The biggest little school in Cook county," that's the way Virgil P. Puzzo, principal, describes Lemont Township High school. Next Saturday he and a group of his students will have half an hour to tell more about their school on the Citizens of Tomorrow program at 9:30 a. m. on W-G-N.

In telling the advantages of attending a small school [199 students are enrolled], Puzzo stressed the fact that personnel problems and guidance are easier because the teachers get to know the student's background and family. The boy or girl never loses his or her individuality.

Easy to Make Friends

"From the student point of view," he said, "it seems easier to make friends." Then he added, "The community takes a genuine interest in what goes on in the school and there seems to be a closer tie-up between the two."

As an example of the tie-up, the principal cited the fact that this afternoon at 2 p. m., the basketball team will play against an alumni team in the gymnasium. Proceeds will be used to erect a town plaque honoring men and women who entered the services. Of the names on this honor roll, 347 will be alumni of the high school, and 13 of the stars for alumni will be gold.

One lone apple tree, growing along the east wall, is all that remains of the orchard that was uprooted to make way for erection of the original building in 1890.

Plan Shop Classroom

The present structure was built in 1924. Two stories, it is of brick construction. Plans are under way for making a general shop classroom in a portable on the campus.

Daily, the school bus covers 59 miles. About one fourth of the enrollment comes from farms in Cook county or adjacent Du Page county.

Two students have been selected as the outstanding entertainers and will be heard on the radio program. They are May Ann Lynch, pianist, and Dolores Migonis, piano accordionist, who will play "Tico-Tico."

Names for Honor Roll

Edward Forzley, Lemont senior, and Verna Jean Adair of Wendell L. Willkie High school, Elwood, Ind., will be added to the program's honor roll by Philip Maxwell, "principal of the air." Both are honor students. Forzley is a member of both the football and basketball teams and a delegate to the Chicago Youth conference.

Students who will take part in the history-music quiz are: Forzley, James Lind, Doris Hoster, Mary Lou Jeffery, Carol Strand, and Rita Rowley. School cheers will be led by Eileen Doolin, Geraldine Diaz, Betty Schultz, Lorraine Coakley, and Lois Grant. The colors will be posted by James Lind, Martin Mitchell, Erwin Domagalski, and William Swearingen.

Members of the mixed chorus, directed by Miss Josephine Johnson, will sing the school song, "Star Dust," and "Make Believe."

LET'S RESTRICT NOISE OF PLAY TO BASEMENT

BY LOUISE BARGELT

We are going to see a definite trend toward soft pedaling the basement gameroom. That is, as far as noise goes. None disputes that it performs its main function in life beautifully. It provides infinite opportunity for pleasure and fun. But if, in performing its natural duties it gives family members upstairs mild or severe case of nerves or jitters it fails to be an entirely satisfactory household asset.

There are many things that can be done to lessen noises, to absorb them, and to relegate them to areas where they are less disturbing.

Put It Under Kitchen

In houses of tomorrow more basement gamerooms will be placed under the kitchen, rather than under the living room where one usually finds them. The kitchen can be quite a little noise maker itself unless built and equipped with noise absorption in mind. Thus, those working in it are less likely to be disturbed by underneath hilarity than those who may be talking together in the living room, reading in the library, or sleeping in the bedrooms.

Many games of all kinds for indoor sports, and for all ages from 5 to 75, are to be found in the stores. There are old favorites such as darts, table tennis, and shuffle board, as well as new favorites including the game petec, an invigorating sport which its makers claim develops muscular coördination. It is a national game of Brazil.

Draperies Will Help

There are sound absorbent ceilings that will help immensely to lessen clatter, and coverings for air ducts that will imprison noises. There are also sound absorbent plasters you can apply on walls and ceilings. Heavy wall draperies will help. In a gameroom there is not fabric in proportion to the room area. This is one reason its noise problems are greater than those of the living room.

Then too, a basement room that has hard walls, floors, and ceilings will have its sounds reflected rather than absorbed. Another aid is to cover the walls with stiff insulating sheets. We are approaching an era when noises are going to be controled in homes and there is no better place to start on this problem than in the basement game room.

This Week in the Garden

Now that resting time for outdoor plants is here the home gardener must, of necessity, grow his plants in the house. About all the selection he can make is from plants he finds in flower stores or retail greenhouses. Frequently, he grows plants with which he is unfamiliar, those that look good to him or are seasonable.

Conditions in the average room are said to be 5 per cent drier than the desert which makes it practically impossible to grow difficult kinds successfully.

Atmospheric conditions for best results should be maintained at 70 degrees in the day time and 60 at night. Keep atmosphere moist by placing humidifiers on the radiators.

Steam Aided Grandma's Plants

Grandmother could grow fine plants because of the steam rising from cooking utensils. By using jardiniers, pot plants, such as the Boston fern, palm, rubber plant, screw pine, philodendron, and others will not dry out nearly as quickly. Surplus water should be removed for if the pot is permitted to stand in water it will be seriously injured.

When a fresh air gardener has learned the art of watering he will have learned an important garden practice. Pot plants should be watered when the soil is dry and the plants need water.

The best way to water is to place the pot in a container of water and allow it to remain until the soil is wet thru. The pot is then removed, allowed to drain and replaced in the window.

Too much water or too little is injurious, for the soil should be reasonably moist at all times, unless it is at rest. Some plants may need water every day. These include plants in flower and with fibrous roots, such as the primrose or the azalea. Plants like the small pink-flowering begonia semperflorens may suffer from a daily watering.

Syringing Removes Dust

Syringing differs from watering in that the foliage of a plant is sprayed with clear water. Dust will accumulate on the leaves but syringing removes it and enables the stomata [pores] to function properly. On sunny days water in the morning to permit the foliage to enter the cool of the night in a dry condition. Syringing also will knock off lurking insect pests, preventing their increase.

Not all plants have foliage that can be washed, but plants like the fiddle-leaved fig, rubber plant, sansevieria, screw pine or pandanus, aspidistra, weevil plant, dumb cane or Dieffenbachia, palm, and others can be washed. Washing with soapy water tends to reduce insects that may be present.

An interesting inquiry at the Chicago Garden center concerned the report that the blitz of London turned the soil. As a result, it was said, new and unknown plants started into growth.

"New" Plant Just a Weed

Inquiry was made at Kew Gardens, London, for confirmation and a recent letter from the director stated: "No special race of plants has appeared on bombed sites in London. This idea has no doubt arisen thru journalese confusion with the appearance in quantity of the London rocket [sisymbrium irio] on the ruins of London after the Great Fire of 1666."

A prominent pictorial magazine carried the picture of a plant supposed to have appeared on the ruins but it was identified as the coltsfoot [tussilago farfara], a common weed of Great Britain.

The Garden Center, located in the public library just inside the Randolph st. entrance, is operated by the Chicago Horticultural society for the public, and not for members only. Authoritative bulletins are available for gardeners. Drop in and consult the horticulturist in charge. The service is free to all.

Chicago Philharmonic to Offer Wagner Work

The Chicago Philharmonic orchestra, with Henry Weber as director, will present a concert version of the music from Wagner's opera, "Tristan and Isolde" over W-G-N Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. The orchestra also will offer Mozart's Symphony No. 31 in D major, popularly known as his "Paris" symphony.

St. Peter's of Joliet to Give Yule Pageant

St. Peter's Lutheran church, Joliet, will present a Christmas pageant, "When Christ Was Born" tonight and next Sunday in the auditorium. The score for the pageant was written by the Rev. Erdmann W. Frank, pastor. A dramatic cast of 30 and a choir of 30 will take part.

'HANSEL-GRETEL' TO BE BROADCAST ON AIR THEATER

Saluting the holiday season the Chicago Theater of the Air will present Hemperdinck's operatic fantasy, "Hansel and Gretel," at 9 p. m. next Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual network. Marion Claire will sing Gretel and Ruth Slater, contralto, will sing Hansel, her brother who shares her adventures in the dark forest. Bruce Foote, baritone, will sing the part of the father.

Col Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

In response to many requests this season's performance will be a repetition of last year's special rhymed version written by Jack La Frandre, director of the series. The musical setting, including the famous prayer of the two bewildered children, will be provided by the Theater of the Air orchestra and chorus, directed by Henry Weber.

Stock Yards Drama on W-G-N's Chicago Story

The growth of the meat packing industry in Chicago will be depicted on W-G-N's Chicago Story at 9 o'clock tonight. The production will dramatize highlights in the history of the stockyards. A musical background for the show will be furnished by a 17 piece orchestra under the direction of Robert Trendler.

Dorothy Maynor Will Be Harvest of Stars Guest

Dorothy Maynor, Negro soprano, will be a soloist on the Harvest of Stars program over WMAQ-NBC at 1 p. m. today. Raymond Massey will be narrator in a dramatization about America's trail blazers. Howard Barlow is director of the program's orchestra.

LEADING SINGERS JOIN IN TRIBUTE TO JEROME KERN

Hour's Memorial Program Starts at 330 P. M.

BY LARRY WOLTERS

A group o fthe leading popular singers of America will pay tribute to the late Jerome Kern who wrote much of the most tuneful music of the century. A few years ago Kern visited W-G-N and gave his advice to young composers who were then participating in a contest for a typically American operetta. The competition was sponsored by the station.

Jerome Kern

"Your writing must be sincere, honest, unaffected, and genuine," Kern said. "It must come from the honest, unaffected, and genuine, heart." That was a good description of Kern's own music. He had a great gift for song. He wrote more than 100 musical productions, 31 for the stage alone, and hundreds of songs. Today it seems that such Kern melodies as "Ol' Man River," from "Show Boat," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" from "Roberta," and a score of others will be everlasting.

Many Stars to Be Heard

On today's memorial program will be heard Bing Crosby, Nelson Eddy, Judy Garland, Hildegarde, Patrice Munsel, Dinah Shore, Frank Sinatra, and Earl Wrightson. Several of them have been associated with the introduction of Kern songs, others have popularized them. They will be supported by the orchestras of Robert Armbruster and Al Goodman. The program will be aired over WBBM-CBS from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m., replacing the regular Nelson Eddy show and the Family hour for today.

Oscar Hammerstein II., with whom Kern collaborated on "Show Boat" is in charge of production and the entire script. Irving Berlin, Richard Rodgers, and Deems Taylor, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, all close personal friends of Kern, are assisting in the production.

Medley Opens Program

The hour will open with a medley by the full company. Eddy will sing "All the Things You Are," in Hollywood, and then will join Miss Munsel in a duet of "Make Believe." Miss Munsel will be in New York.

Miss Munsel then will sing "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," Wrightson, "The Night Was Made for Love," and Jack Smith, "Who."

Sinatra will sing "The Song Is You," Crosby, "I've Told Every Little Star," and Hildegarde, "The Last Time I Saw Paris," which has come to be identified with her name.

Miss Garland's solo will be "Look for the Silver Lining." Miss Shore will sing "Just My Bill," which Helen Morgan made famous. Goodman will feature "Waltz in Swingtime," and Armbruster's orchestra and chorus another medley. Eddy, Miss Munsel, and the entire company will join in the finale singing and playing of "Ol' Man River."

Gets Wish

Mary Paxton, who conducts the Wishing Well program over W-G-N at 8:45 a. m. weekdays, had her own wish come true. Her husband, Durward Kirby, ABC network announcer, is getting out of the navy this week.

Metropolitan Community Church on Youth Service

The Metropolitan Community Church school will be visited on the Youth Looks Up program at 8 a. m. today over W-G-N. George R. Williamson, superintendent, will welcome the service; Dr. Joseph M. Evans, pastor, will read the scripture lesson. Jerry Walker will tell the story of David and Saul. Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE's staff will conduct the Bible Quiz. Ruth Brown, 17 year old soprano, will be the soloist. She is the music director of the Sunday school.

Menuhin Will Play on Philharmonic Program

Yehudi Menuhin will play Beethoven's Violin Concerto in D major with the New York Philharmonic orchestra, under the direction of Artur Rodzinski, over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today. The orchestra also will present excerpts from Mendelssohn's "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Dmitri Mitroupoulos Directs NBC Symphony

Dmitri Mitroupoulos begins a four week engagement as director of the NBC Symphony orchestra on WMAQ-NBC at 4 p. m. today. Music on today's broadcast will include the Overture to Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and Vaughan Williams' "A London Symphony."

131ST INFANTRY UNITS TO HOLD THEIR REUNION

Meet in Armory at 8 P. M. Tomorrow

Memories of rookie days, summer camps, and old armories and parades will be recalled when men who have served in the 1st [Dandy First] infantry, 131st infantry of the 33d division, and the 1st Illinois reserve militia gather at 8 p. m. tomorrow in Northwest armory, Kedzie and North avs., for their 18th annual homecoming and reunion.

Air Forces Captain Cultivates Art Appreciation While Fighting War

With a war to fight in Europe, Capt. Russell Stoller, 2725 Mango av., still found time to collect rare porcelains manufactured more than 200 years ago in Capo di Monte, near Naples, Italy. Presiding over his Capo group of miserable beggars is an 18 inch fortune teller, one of the prizes of his Capo collection. Realism is apparent in each figurine of this group, for great care was exercised in creating each patch and tatter.

The lovely ladies of the ballet, assembled in a chorus thru Capt. Stoller's searchings, are about 6 inches high and of pastel tinted porcelain. They are keeping a brave face to their public despite the casualties of an occasional broken finger suffered en route to Chicago.

Fancy quenching one's thirst from this 12 inch high stein! Ignoring the utilitarian use, a Capo artist seemed to find the stein a mere excuse to show his skill in crowding a great many cupids and dancing women into a pastoral background. Molding is only a part of the Capo's beauty; the rich colors have lost none of their luster thru the years.

GI Coming Home with a Trusted Pal

There is a hearty welcome home atmosphere awaiting Corp. Marvin Corff and the expectation grows keener with each passing day in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Corff, 4552 N. Lawndale av.

What's more, there is just as hearty a welcome ready for Marvin's marine corps buddy, Sgt. Rocky. There's hope the sergeant can make his future home with the Corff family, for he saved Marvin from a Japanese ambush on Guam.

Coming Home Thru Canal

Marvin and his friend are traveling the slow route home by ship from Treasure Island, Cal., thru the Panama canal, to Camp Le Jeune, N. C. There Sgt. Rocky will complete the career of a dog's life in service. Sgt. Rocky, a devil dog, must be gentled and broken from his combat training.

Corp. Corff's devotion to Rocky is explained clearly enough by a citation accompanying the silver star medal worn on the marine's blouse. In telling of Corff's heroism, the citation says in part. "During a rest period of an all-day patrol period [in Guam] Corp. Corff noticed his war dog 'alert' to something underground in the path of the patrol.

"Unhesitatingly, and without regard for safety, Corff advanced alone and uncovered an ambush of five Japanese soldiers. He opened fire, killing four, and completely routed the enemy, thus saving the patrol from being ambushed with consequent casualties."

Proof of Son's Heroism

The citation is one of the few proofs Marvin's family has that their son played a hero's part in the war.

"In all his letters he was always telling us about the wonders of his dog, and never saying anything about himself," the marine's father explained.

Corff joined the marines in March, 1942, and went overseas one year later. He has seen action in New Caledonia, Guam, and the Marianas. The same goes for his dog, Rocky. The two have been inseparable buddies since training days in Camp Le Jeune.

Mrs. Wiersig

Mrs. Wiersig's five sons and daughters are Charles and Elsie, who live with her; Robert, 2344 N. California av.; Mrs. Minnie Schoenrock, Oak Park, and Emil, Pittsburgh, Pa.

CHOIR OF 1,200 TO BROADCAST SONGS OF YULE

Citizens Show Will Honor Holiday

The reverent strains of "Silent Night" instead of shrill school cheers will open the Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast at 9:30 a. m. Dec. 22 over W-G-N. Christmas carols sung by the choruses of 14 suburban high schools will replace the customary salute to a Chicagoland school. The songs will be recorded following the Theater of the Air show in Medinah temple, Saturday night.

Rev. John Hubbard

A choir of 1,200 will sing the following selections: "The First Noel," "Joy to the World," "O, Come All Ye Faithful," "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," and "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing."

Select Special Choir

A choir of 135 voices, chosen from the best vocalists in each school and under the direction of Walter Armbruster of Thornton Township High school and Junior college, will sing "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Light," "Beautiful Saviour," and "A Merry Christmas."

"Anticipating Christmas" will be the title of a message to be delivered by the Rev. John B. Hubbard, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal church, Park Ridge. Father Hubbard will speak on the significance of this first American peace time Christmas in five years, emphasizing the unselfish nature of the holiday.

Schools Sending Singers

Schools to be represented in the choir and their directors are: Argo Community, Arthur Seith; Blue Island Community, Sheldon Westman; East Aurora, Margaret F. Pouk; Lew Wallace and Horace Mann of Gary, Ind., Helen Eggers and Eula Winters; Glenbard, Raymond Carr; Lyons Township, Clarence Dissinger; Maine Township, Alexander Harley; Niles Township, Clara Klaus; Oak Park-River Forest, Ruth Edna Wood; Proviso Township, R. Lee Osburn; Thornton Township, Armbruster; Wheaton, Margaret Dirks, and Hinsdale, Ina Mae Sanders, who will be general director.

A carry-over from the regular Citizens broadcasts will be the reading of the air edition of interscholastic news by William Charles Wingo, Argo Township senior. A quiz on Yuletide traditions and customs will offer six wise students a chance to win $5 in victory stamps. Contestants will be chosen the night of the show from among the students of East Aurora, Lyons Township, Oak Park-River Forest, Maine Township, Niles Township, and Wallace High schools.

Prior to the recording, the high school singers will witness a performance of "Hansel and Gretel" by the Theater of the Air cast. Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE will fill his usual role as master of ceremonies.

Glee Clubs Concert

The Federal-Laradef glee clubs will present a concert Tuesday night in North Park college auditorium, Foster and Kedzie avs. William Eugene Myricks is director.

Members of the committee of arrangements are Varian M. Shea, principal; Roland O. Marsh, assistant principal, Theodora Idtse, Margaret Cummings, Marguerite Rudd, Emily Warkenstein, Thomas, and Knopinski.

Among the antique treasures found by Capt. Stoller are these poreclain plates inscribed "To the King of Rome, 1811." The plates were found in Naples, and the platter on ornate stand in Taormina, Sicily. All three are of the same pattern with dancing figures in semi-relief on the rim.

"It will be the largest group ever to be taken in at one time," he said. The 8th division, the largest in Illinois, is composed of 17 posts.

LOVE FOR ART FOUND IN WAR BY A 'PUNK KID'

BY JANE GARDNER

A punk kid went away to the wars and came back an humble devotee of the world of art.

In those words, Capt. Russell Stoller, 25, 2725 Mango av., now on terminal leave from the army air forces, sums up what happened to him in the 15 months he spent in Europe as pilot of a C-47. His distinguished flying cross with cluster and air medal with six clusters bear testimony to the part he played.

When service men looked about for a bit of fun and relaxation, Capt. Stoller found his pleasure in building an art collection and shipping it home to his wife, Bertha, and infant daughter, Roberta.

Capo Porcelains His Interest

He became a specialist in art appreciation. With the determination of the most rabid connoisseur he sought for porcelains of Capo di Monte. These porcelains were created from 1743 to 1759 by commission of Charles III., king of Naples. The technique was lost soon after.

Stoller's collection of Capos began with a gift of a grateful art dealer, Ernosto Sodo of Naples. The pilot had been able to arrange for the transport of the dealer's daughter and family from Rome to the safety of Naples. With a sweeping gesture of enthusiasm, Sodo offered Stoller "anything in the house." The two Capo beggars Stoller selected thus became the nucleus of his collection.

Buys from Collectors

A story dwells behind almost every item collected thereafter. A fortune teller, peering from her cards, was the gift of another art dealer of Naples, one Giovanni Donadio. That, too, was a gift of gratitude since Stoller had shown him a way to get a travel priority.

The other Capos—the beggars, the ballerinas, and lovely figurines—were purchased from private collections or shops after long searches. In Italy, Sicily, and France he went first to art dealers. In they had Capos the search was ended, but only too frequently they had none. Then Stoller would begin his questioning.

He Becomes a Patron

Stoller brought local fame to an artist and enhanced his collection while in Catania, Sicily. He had noticed a painting in the window of a small florist's shop and upon inquiries was introduced to Emanuel, a bearded painter of 67 years and almost completely deaf.

Emanuel needed a patron and Stoller wanted painting, so Emanuel hired out to the captain for six months. Anything Stoller fancied, Emanuel achieved in oils. Foreign currency is oftentimes of beautiful artistry, so Stoller ordered paintings of a few bills. A portrait of Stoller was painted and a miniature from snapshots of his daughter, Roberta.

Gets Old Man Into Plane

Stoller's patronage meant quite a lot to the aged artist as a means of livelihood, but the prestige gained meant even more. Capt. Stoller once convinced the old man to go with him for an airplane ride. The artist's fame was sealed. Townspeople bowed to him in the streets after that and spoke in awe of Emanuel's ride.

With the help of a maintenance man at his air field, Stoller was able to pack and ship home all of his items with a minor amount of breakage. In fact, they are in greater danger now in a sideboard in his home, Stoller ruefully admitted, adding his plaint to the great American cry: "Do you know where we can get a home?"

3 Young Women Groups Plan Temple Programs

OPEN CATHOLIC CAMPAIGN FOR CANNED GOODS

A campaign for canned goods gifts to be distributed to needy families in Europe and the Philippines will be launched today in Northwest side Catholic churches. The nation's Catholics will seek to collect 20 million cans of food by next Sunday.

The Rev. William A. O'Connor has been named chairman of the Chicago campaign by Archbishop Stritch. Headquarters are at 126 N. Des Plaines st. The city-wide goal is 2 million cans.

Gifts should be contributed in the Christmas spirit and should not be cash, Father O'Connor explained. The food will be distributed to war victims without regard to nationality, creed, color, or political belief.

Father O'Connor said there is need for evaporated, condensed, and powdered milk, milk formula for infants, and chopped fruits and vegetables. The Catholic Salvage bureau will pick up, label, and package for shipping donations received in Chicago.

The campaign differs from previous ones for clothing and food conducted by war relief services of the welfare conference, Father O'Connor explained, since it will be exclusively the work of the Catholic church. Distribution abroad will be thru church channels.

LEADING SINGERS JOIN IN TRIBUTE TO JEROME KERN

Hour's Memorial Program Starts at 330 P. M.

BY LARRY WOLTERS

A group o fthe leading popular singers of America will pay tribute to the late Jerome Kern who wrote much of the most tuneful music of the century. A few years ago Kern visited W-G-N and gave his advice to young composers who were then participating in a contest for a typically American operetta. The competition was sponsored by the station.

Jerome Kern

"Your writing must be sincere, honest, unaffected, and genuine," Kern said. "It must come from the honest, unaffected, and genuine," heart." That was a good description of Kern's own music. He had a great gift for song. He wrote more than 100 musical productions, 31 for the stage alone, and hundreds of songs. Today it seems that such Kern melodies as "Ol' Man River," from "Show Boat," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" from "Roberta," and a score of others will be everlasting.

Many Stars to Be Heard

On today's memorial program will be heard Bing Crosby, Nelson Eddy, Judy Garland, Hildegarde, Patrice Munsel, Dinah Shore, Frank Sinatra, and Earl Wrightson. Several of them have been associated with the introduction of Kern songs, others have popularized them. They will be supported by the orchestras of Robert Armbruster and Al Goodman. The program will be aired over WBBM-CBS from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m., replacing the regular Nelson Eddy show and the Family hour for today.

Oscar Hammerstein II., with whom Kern collaborated on "Show Boat" is in charge of production and the entire script. Irving Berlin, Richard Rodgers, and Deems Taylor, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, all close personal friends of Kern, are assisting in the production.

Medley Opens Program

The hour will open with a medley by the full company. Eddy will sing "All the Things You Are," in Hollywood, and then will join Miss Munsel in a duet of "Make Believe." Miss Munsel will be in New York.

Miss Munsel then will sing "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," Wrightson, "The Night Was Made for Love," and Jack Smith, "Who."

Sinatra will sing "The Song Is You," Crosby, "I've Told Every Little Star," and Hildegarde, "The Last Time I Saw Paris," which has come to be identified with her name.

Miss Garland's solo will be "Look for the Silver Lining." Miss Shore will sing "Just My Bill," which Helen Morgan made famous. Goodman will feature "Waltz in Swingtime," and Armbruster's orchestra and chorus another medley. Eddy, Miss Munsel, and the entire company will join in the finale singing and playing of "Ol' Man River."

CHOIR OF 1,200 TO BROADCAST SONGS OF YULE

Citizens Show Will Honor Holiday

[Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast next Saturday will honor Lemont Township High school. Details on page 2.]

Rev. John Hubbard

The reverent strains of "Silent Night" instead of shrill school cheers will open the Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast at 9:30 a. m. Dec. 22 over W-G-N. Christmas carols sung by the choruses of 14 suburban high schools will replace the customary salute to a Chicagoland school. The songs will be recorded following the Theater of the Air show in Medinah temple, Saturday night.

A choir of 1,200 will sing the following selections: "The First Noel," "Joy to the World," "O, Come All Ye Faithful," "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," and "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing."

Select Special Choir

A choir of 135 voices, chosen from the best vocalists in each school and under the direction of Walter Armbruster of Thornton Township High school and Junior college, will sing "Break Forth, O Beauteous Heavenly Light," "Beautiful Saviour," and "A Merry Christmas."

"Anticipating Christmas" will be the title of a message to be delivered by the Rev. John B. Hubbard, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal church, Park Ridge. Father Hubbard will speak on the significance of this first American peace time Christmas in five years, emphasizing the unselfish nature of the holiday.

Schools Sending Singers

Schools to be represented in the choir and their directors are: Argo Community, Arthur Seith; Blue Island Community, Sheldon Westman; East Aurora, Margaret F. Pouk; Lew Wallace and Horace Mann of Gary, Ind., Helen Eggers and Eula Winters; Glenbard, Raymond Carr; Lyons Township, Clarence Dissinger; Maine Township, Alexander Harley; Niles Township, Clara Klaus; Oak Park-River Forest, Ruth Edna Wood; Proviso Township, R. Lee Osburn; Thornton Township, Armbruster; Wheaton, Margaret Dirks, and Hinsdale, Ina Mae Sanders, who will be general director.

A carry-over from the regular Citizens broadcasts will be the reading of the air edition of interscholastic news by William Charles Wingo, Argo Township senior. A quiz on Yuletide traditions and customs will offer six wise students a chance to win $5 in victory stamps. Contestants will be chosen the night of the show from among the students of East Aurora, Lyons Township, Oak Park-River Forest, Maine Township, Niles Township, and Wallace High schools.

Group Plans Broadcast

Plans for the broadcast were made by the In-and-About Chicago Music Educators club, Helen G. Cravener, president. Other officers are: Arthur W. Seith, vice president; Maude B. Purdum, secretary, and Helen Egger, secretary.

Directors are: Armbruster, Jessie Carter, Margaret Dirks, Eileen Mannion, Mary McKay, R. Lee Osburn, Margaret F. Pouk, Carr, Lillian L. Schaeffer, Ann Trimingham, Sheldon C. Westman, and Beulah I. Zander.

Prior to the recording, the high school singers will witness a performance of "Hansel and Gretel" by the Theater of the Air cast. Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE will fill his usual role as master of ceremonies.

Handicapped Workers Help to Make It a Merrier Christmas Than Ever for Many

Fluffy, glitter balls and wheels made by Alan McFee are among the Christmas decorations and gift suggestions manufactured by home bound persons and sold in Santa's attic in quarters of the Illinois Association for the Crippled, 116 S. Michigan av. Alan (left) and his mother, Mrs. Alice McFee, decorate an early Christmas tree in their home at 3643 S. Leavitt st. with some of the 300 ornaments Alan has made.

The ornaments and gifts are made from material furnished the home bound by the association. Alan worked out his own design for ornaments (left), using tulle and glitter. The tulle is cut in long strips, gathered in the center, and the edges fluffed. With enough thread hanging to provide a hand hold, he dips the ball into a platter of glue, rolling it around until the edges are covered. After the glitter is poured over it several times, the ornament is ready for Christmas. It takes about 15 minutes to make an ornament.

Among articles to be sold for benefit of handicapped persons are dolls and pin cushions made by Mrs. Katherine Kacena. In the improvised workshop in the kitchen of her home in Evergreen Park, Mrs. Kacena transforms blue cotton socks into hardy boy dolls, and bits of silk, an odd button, and satin ribbon into a hat-shaped pin cushion.

[TRIBUNE PHOTOS by John Oswald]

Mrs. Kacena keeps busy with handicraft work thruout the year. Before starting on the Christmas work, she made tassels for graduation caps and pounded staples into the tiny battle stars for service men's campaign ribbons. For the latter operation, a hollow punch to hold the staple steady, a die, an anvil, and two taps from the hammer were necessary. She estimated she can turn out 300 an hour.

Lusty Rodeo Sets Germans to Wondering

Winnifred Hutchings

The first rodeo staged by Yanks in the European theater of operations sent the Germans away with a new idea of American courage, Winnifred Hutchings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Hutchings, 8942 Parnell av., said. Miss Hutchings was a member of the Red Cross clubmobile sponsoring the rodeo. She recently returned after 17 months overseas.

As the stock for the show assembled, and the Yanks started riding the bucking horses, Miss Hutchings said the faces of the stray civilian bystanders became more amazed. Among the 15,000 attracted to the show, civilian stowaways were plentiful, she said. They went away shaking their heads muttering what she interpreted to be "Those crazy Yankees."

Miss Hutchings joined the Red Cross in April, 1944, from her school teaching job in Seattle, Wash. She was sent overseas the next month and was attached to the 12th tactical air command, serving in Naples, Rome, Corsica in Italy, and up to France. Later she was sent into Germany.

Besides serving doughnuts and coffee to men returning from flights, Miss Hutchings traveled with the clubmobile to isolated units, serving refreshments and running the record player. While returning from one of these trips she was caught in her first air raid. She and 10 others crowded into a de luxe foxhole, lined with board paneling and pin-up girls.

Knocking Just Her Knees

Most of the soldiers were Anzio vets who pacified the rest of the party with cheerful remarks to the effect that "this isn't anything. You should have seen what they did to us at Anzio." Miss Hutchings says she doesn't think she was scared, but she couldn't stand up after the raid because her knees were shaking.

Altho she admits Parisian women are always smartly dressed, she has no desire to see too many of the be-ribboned hats here which she saw displayed at a style show in Paris. With the shortage of gas in France, it is nothing to see a French woman, chic in her afternoon dress and tremendous hat, pedaling down the avenue.

Gets Home for Yule

Miss Hutchings requests to come home so that she could be with her parents on the holidays.

Her brother, Lt. Walter S. Hutchings, whom she saw in England, was killed in the crash of a transport in France after the war's end. He went into service in 1941 and had been wounded three times in action. His parents recently received the bronze star, awarded him posthumously for heroism.

Fifteen cooties were dragged, shoved, and thrown into the middle of the room on the second floor of the building at 6533 Cottage Grove av., recently. There they officially were initiated as shavetails [officers] of GI Pup Tent 11, Military Order of the Cootie, fun organization of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The order is an honorary group within the V. F. W. Membership is by invitation only, candidates being selected on the basis of the work they have done for the senior organization. Their special projects are the collection of funds to be used for entertainment of service men in hospitals and promoting the enlistment of eligible men into the ranks of the V. F. W.

Do Everything Backwards

Members of the Cootie pride themselves on the way they do everything backward. At meetings members back into the room when entering. New business is introduced by seconding a motion. The next speaker begins in the customary manner, saying, "I move . . . so and so." On a vote, the noes pass a motion while the ayes defeat it. Booing, rather than applause, is the sign of approval.

None of the usual names are given the leaders. Instead of a president the seam squirrel holds highest office; keeper of the lousey record is the historian, hungry nit the secretary. Three degrees of membership are nit, grey back, and cootie. Only full fledged cooties are permitted to wear the official uniform consisting of white shoes, white trousers with a red stripe down the side, white shirt with as many cooties embroidered on it as possible, red vest with a 15 inch cootie on the back, and red tie and hat with two yellow tassels.

Group Picks Shavetails

Men who were initiated and their offices are: James W. Luke, 3657 Ingleside av., seam squirrel; Henry O. Strey, 3057 Cheltenham pl., blanket bum; Charles F. George, 2244 Bell av., hide gimlet; Bruce Sigler, 713 W. 50th st., custodian of the crummy duffie bag; Ralph G. Mangold, 1416 E. 75th st., sky pilot; Edward C. Jeans, 4615 Emerald av., keeper of the lousey record; Frank Morrissey, 6846 South Park av., pill pusher; Cappelle H. Damrell, 7439 Yates, shyster, and Robert L. Wenestón, 6347 Ingleside av., jimmy legs. Arthur M. Stanley, 6958 Dorchester av., provost marshal; John J. Martin, 600 E. 75th st., Theodore Behr, 9640 Carpenter st., and William Bell, 6415 Le Claire av., tightwads; Frank O'Leath, 1624 E. 56th st., shirt reader; Alexander Johnston, 7111 Eberhart av., National V. F. W. home chairman, and Richard Butler, 738 W. 87th st., booster chairman.

Men from 11 Posts

Membership of Pup Tent 11 is made up of 70 men from the following south and southwest side V. F. W. posts: James Hamilton Lewis, John McShane, Tractor, Victory, Hyde Park-Kenwood, South Town, Progress, Luzon, Your Buddies, Schuman-Heink, and Ray W. Nelson. An organization for wives of the cooties, patterned along similar lines, is known as The Ladybugs.

As a special Christmas project the unit will participate in the V. F. W. campaign to send 500 service men in army and navy hospitals gifts for Christmas, thru the Tribune's Friend of the Yank program. Pup Ten 11 has pledged to take care of a minimum of 10 men, providing them with gifts amounting to $2.50 or more.

Keeps Youth's Blush in Spite of 50 Years

(Picture on page 8)

A tattered little doll, its blonde hair bright and the blush of youth still on its face despite its age, sits in the corner of Mrs. Albert Meyer's attic in Lemont, the dean of a doll collection that once numbered more than 700.

The blonde was presented to Mrs. Meyer as her first doll more than 50 years ago. It was wax, with a sheer dress over hand made cotton lingerie—and it squeaked. Altho what is regarded as the mama type doll in America is really only about 45 years old, the first talking dolls, Mrs. Meyer said, were made in Europe about 1825. The conversation was limited to the size of the music box inside.

On Every Birthday

The collection grew in spite of Mrs. Meyer. Every birthday and Christmas she was presented with another doll. Her love of dolls was of the admire-at-a-distance kind, and her childhood dolls formed the substantial basis for the hobby she has pursued ever since.

Many of her dolls are adorned in the dresses they wore when they were presented to her, including the 2 feet high English doll, dressed in flowered calico and ruffled panties. She has the papier maché head and black wavy hair parted in the middle, the kind of doll grandma let you fondle as a child when you remembered your manners in front of company. Those old dolls from Europe of the latter part of the 19th century, Mrs. Meyer said, were stuffed mainly with grain.

Another hobby—collecting music boxes—the kind that used to sit on the marble topped table in the parlor—caused Mrs. Meyer to gather music box dolls. Prize doll of this family tree was a French doll that breathed and raised its arms in rhythm with the tunes from the music box on which it was mounted.

Dolls of Silk Stockings

Among her other interesting dolls are a French peasant couple, made of silk stockings, leaning on crooked canes, and a bisque baby doll with kid arms and legs made in Germany.

Mrs. Meyer's collection of 24 music boxes, most of which she has sold, came to her from relatives. They ranged from the little 10 inch mahogany boxes to the 2 feet decorated ones.

STUDENTS SEE ANOTHER WAR NOT FAR AWAY

High School Survey Lacks Optimism

According to a survey conducted recently in two southwest side schools, the United Nations organization has slightly less than an even chance to prevent another war. The survey, sponsored by Scholastic magazine's Institute of Student Opinion, was conducted in Lindblom Technical and Bloom Township High schools.

Forty-three per cent of the students at Lindblom answered "no" to the question, "Do you believe the United Nations organization will prevent another World war during your lifetime?" Bloom Township was even more pessimistic with a negative response of 44.6 per cent. About 16 per cent of the students questioned had no opinion.

Boys Show Little Optimism

At Lindblom 104 boys and 143 girls were polled. Bloom's poll was conducted among 120 boys and 119 girls. The boys were more pessimistic, voting 53.3 per cent in the negative, and the girls 35.8 per cent.

Two other questions were included in the survey: "What is your ultimate in life?" and "What do you consider the greatest obstacle to be overcome in reaching your aim?"

Forty-three boys and 80 girls at Lindblom listed living a simple life as their aim; four boys and only one girl voted for making money; 24 boys and eight girls want respect, and 20 boys and 31 girls long for fame. Seven other Lindblom students haven't made up their minds.

Simple Life Leads

At Bloom 45 per cent want to live a simple life. Ranking second as the ultimate goal was a desire for fame, with a vote of 26 per cent. About 13 per cent want to be respected by members of their community, and less than 10 per cent intend to devote their lives to making money. About 3 per cent are undecided.

Unwillingness to make necessary sacrifices ranked high on the list of obstacles to be overcome by students at Lindblom, with 18 boys and 26 girls listing it as the bar to achieving their goal. The same number of girls also voted lack of money as their greatest obstacle, while only 15 boys listed it. Lack of training and health also were given frequently.

At Bloom topping the list of obstacles to be overcome was lack of money, polling 10 per cent of the girls' votes and 21 per cent of the boys. Lack of talent and unwillingness to make sacrifices also were high on the Bloom list.

Morton Also Has Doubts

At Morton High school in Cicero the poll revealed a little more optimism with only 41.5 per cent expressing doubt in the organization's success. The negative vote was boys, 50 per cent; girls, 33 per cent.

The ultimate aim at Morton among 44 per cent of the boys and 46 per cent of the girls was to lead a simple, secure life. Lack of "pull" and money was voted the greatest obstacle in achieving their aim.

CITIZENS SHOW TO HONOR A BIG LITTLE SCHOOL

Lemont High to Be Heard Next Saturday

"The biggest little school in Cook county," that's the way Virgil P. Puzzo, principal, describes Lemont Township High school. Next Saturday he and a group of his students will have half an hour to tell more about their school on the Citizens of Tomorrow program at 9:30 a. m. on W-G-N.

In telling the advantages of attending a small school [199 students are enrolled], Puzzo stressed the fact that personnel problems and guidance are easier because the teachers get to know the student's background and family. The boy or girl never loses his or her individuality.

Easy to Make Friends

"From the student point of view," he said, "it seems easier to make friends." Then he added, "The community takes a genuine interest in what goes on in the school and there seems to be a closer tie-up between the two."

As an example of the tie-up, the principal cited the fact that this afternoon at 2 p. m., the basketball team will play against an alumni team in the gymnasium. Proceeds will be used to erect a town plaque honoring men and women who entered the services. Of the names on this honor roll, 347 will be alumni of the high school, and 13 of the stars for alumni will be gold.

One lone apple tree, growing along the east wall, is all that remains of the orchard that was uprooted to make way for erection of the original building in 1890.

Plan Shop Classroom

The present structure was built in 1924. Two stories, it is of brick construction. Plans are under way for making a general shop classroom in a portable on the campus.

A teaching staff of 12 is in charge. Three of the faculty members, Mrs. Helen Sloan, Miss Catherine Gerharz, and Miss Louise Brandt, are graduates.

Daily, the school bus covers 59 miles. About one fourth of the enrollment comes from farms in Cook county or adjacent Du Page county.

Two students have been selected as the outstanding entertainers and will be heard on the radio program. They are May Ann Lynch, pianist, and Dolores Migonis, piano accordionist, who will play "Tico-Tico."

Names for Honor Roll

Edward Forzley, Lemont senior, and Verna Jean Adair of Wendell L. Willkie High school, Elwood, Ind., will be added to the program's honor roll by Philip Maxwell, "principal of the air." Both are honor students. Forzley is a member of both the football and basketball teams and a delegate to the Chicago Youth conference.

Students who will take part in the history-music quiz are: Forzley, James Lind, Doris Hoster, Mary Lou Jeffery, Carol Strand, and Rita Rowley. School cheers will be led by Eileen Doolin, Geraldine Diaz, Betty Schultz, Lorraine Coakley, and Lois Grant. The colors will be posted by James Lind, Martin Mitchell, Erwin Domagalski, and William Swearingen.

Members of the mixed chorus, directed by Miss Josephine Johnson, will sing the school song, "Star Dust," and "Make Believe." Guests who have been invited to witness the recording of the broadcast in the school auditorium on Wednesday afternoon are Walter L. Bush, village president; James J. Lynch, president of the board of education; Daniel L. O'Sullivan, superintendent of elementary schools; Emanuel J. Shafranski, postmaster, and Gilbert J. Helbig and Earl W. Cauldwell, Lemont bankers.

Town of Lake's C. of C. Plans Vet Yule Greetings

Beginning 10 days prior to Christmas a sound truck will patrol the streets daily broadcasting a welcome home message to veterans and playing traditional carols.

Officers of the chamber are Edward E. Ronkowski, president; Sidney Dipper, Frank M. Covert, and Dr. Paul O. Peemueller, vice presidents; Alfred E. Vicek, treasurer, and Arthur Jacobs, secretary. Directors are Jack V. Finn, Frank Stern, Anthony Rash, William Fuka, Dale Yeazel, Aaron Hurwitz, Richard B. Fairbairn, and Kenneth W. Lyddon.

Cootie More Than Memory with Vets

To Mrs. Charles George, 2244 Bell av., her husband is just plain Charley, but in the V. F. W. honorary organization, the Military Order of the Cootie, he is a hide gimlet. This title is equivalent to vice commander. During meetings members don brilliant red and white uniforms, but at other times they identify themselves by wearing a silver reproduction of a cootie on their coat collars. Mrs. George usually has to pin the cootie on her husband's coat.

BUSY WORKERS HELP TO STOCK SANTA'S ATTIC

Among the hundreds of handicraft articles on sale in Santa's Attic in the quarters of the Illinois Association for the Crippled, 116 S. Michigan av., are the products of two southwest siders, Mrs. Joseph Kacena and Alan McFee, son of Mrs. Alice McFee.

Mrs. Kacena, handicapped by a leg injury several years ago, has set up a workshop in the kitchen of her neat, white cottage in Evergreen Park.

With blue cotton socks, wool and cotton batting, bits of silk, colored thread, and a few buttons as her material, she turns out dolls at the rate of one an hour, pin cushions at three an hour, and attractive woolen knitting bags when she has a collection of spare moments.

Fancies Dolls Most

The dolls are Mrs. Kacena's pride. About a foot high, they are completely hand sewn. The sock is turned upside down and the white corded top split to become the legs of the doll. The heel is its face, and the toe is folded into a perky cap. Its costume accessories are fashioned from tufts of gay yarn.

The pin cushions are made in the form of a hat with a pastel satin ribbon trim.

The volunteers making Christmas articles for the sale in Santa's Attic are furnished the material by the association and are paid monthly for their products. Proceeds of the sale are used by the association to assist handicapped persons.

In addition to making the articles for the Christmas sale, Mrs. Kacena kept busy during most of this year making tassels for graduation caps and impressing the staple into battle stars by which service men stick them on their campaign ribbons. The tedious work of preparing the tiny battle stars requires a punch, a die, and two quick taps of a hammer. She can turn out about 300 in an hour, she said.

Studies at Spalding

McFee, a student at Spalding High school, has made about 300 fluffy, tinseled Christmas balls which will hang from numerous Chicago trees this year. Hospitalized from February to May and suffering for several years from fragile bones, Alan asked the association to send him material to keep his hands busy.

McFee has turned out the delicately colored ornaments in the dining room of his home at 3643 S. Leavitt st. Made of strips of tulle, they are gathered tightly in the center and fluffed out, dipped lightly in glue and sprinkled with glitter.

A member of the National Honor society at Spalding, Alan is interested in interior decorating.

GI WHO HELPED YANKS IN CHINA IS GIVEN MEDAL

Jacob was a member of a team which penetrated deep into North China last August to locate and repatriate allied personnel interned in Jap prisons.

"At this time," said the citation, "there was no assurance that American personnel would not receive hostile treatment from the Japs, yet the team readily accepted these dangers to bring aid to the many allied prisoners and assist in their early repatriation."

Martha Circle

The Martha circle of the Brainard Community church will give a Christmas party for the women's society at 2 p. m. Thursday in the church, 8815 Throop St.

LET'S RESTRICT NOISE OF PLAY TO BASEMENT

Insulate Game Room, Builder Advised

BY LOUISE BARGELT

We are going to see a definite trend toward soft pedaling the basement gameroom. That is, as far as noise goes. None disputes that it performs its main function in life beautifully. It provides infinite opportunity for pleasure and fun. But if, in performing its natural duties it gives family members upstairs mild or severe case of nerves or jitters it fails to be an entirely satisfactory household asset.

There are many things that can be done to lessen noises, to absorb them, and to relegate them to areas where they are less disturbing.

Put It Under Kitchen

In houses of tomorrow more basement gamerooms will be placed under the kitchen, rather than under the living room where one usually finds them. The kitchen can be quite a little noise maker itself unless built and equipped with noise absorption in mind. Thus, those working in it are less likely to be disturbed by underneath hilarity than those who may be talking together in the living room, reading in the library, or sleeping in the bedrooms.

Many games of all kinds for indoor sports, and for all ages from 5 to 75, are to be found in the stores. There are old favorites such as darts, table tennis, and shuffle board, as well as new favorites including the game petec, an invigorating sport which its makers claim develops muscular coördination. It is a national game of Brazil.

Draperies Will Help

There are sound absorbent ceilings that will help immensely to lessen clatter, and coverings for air ducts that will imprison noises. There are also sound absorbent plasters you can apply on walls and ceilings. Heavy wall draperies will help. In a gameroom there is not fabric in proportion to the room area. This is one reason its noise problems are greater than those of the living room.

Then too, a basement room that has hard walls, floors, and ceilings will have its sounds reflected rather than absorbed. Another aid is to cover the walls with stiff insulating sheets. We are approaching an era when noises are going to be controled in homes and there is no better place to start on this problem than in the basement game room.

Devotes Her Lifetime to Collecting Dolls

A doll every birthday and Christmas since she was 4 years old formed the basis for the doll collecting hobby of Mrs. Albert Meyer of Lemont. She holds one of her earliest dolls, given her by a relative. It wears the handmade flowered calico dress it had on when it was given. The French doll (center) breathes and raises its arms in rhythym to the melodies from the music box on which it is mounted. Third of the trio is rosy cheeked Apple Mary with the bobbing head.

This Week in the Garden

Now that resting time for outdoor plants is here the home gardener must, of necessity, grow his plants in the house. About all the selection he can make is from plants he finds in flower stores or retail greenhouses. Frequently, he grows plants with which he is unfamiliar, those that look good to him or are seasonable.

Conditions in the average room are said to be 5 per cent drier than the desert which makes it practically impossible to grow difficult kinds successfully.

Atmospheric conditions for best results should be maintained at 70 degrees in the day time and 60 at night. Keep atmosphere moist by placing humidifiers on the radiators.

Steam Aided Grandma's Plants

Grandmother could grow fine plants because of the steam rising from cooking utensils. By using jardiniers, pot plants, such as the Boston fern, palm, rubber plant, screw pine, philodendron, and others will not dry out nearly as quickly. Surplus water should be removed for if the pot is permitted to stand in water it will be seriously injured.

When a fresh air gardener has learned the art of watering he will have learned an important garden practice. Pot plants should be watered when the soil is dry and the plants need water.

The best way to water is to place the pot in a container of water and allow it to remain until the soil is wet thru. The pot is then removed, allowed to drain and replaced in the window.

Syringing Removes Dust

Too much water or too little is injurious, for the soil should be reasonably moist at all times, unless it is at rest. Some plants may need water every day. These include plants in flower and with fibrous roots, such as the primrose or the azalea. Plants like the small pink-flowering begonia semperflorens may suffer from a daily watering.

Syringing differs from watering in that the foliage of a plant is sprayed with clear water. Dust will accumulate on the leaves but syringing removes it and enables the stomata [pores] to function properly. On sunny days water in the morning to permit the foliage to enter the cool of the night in a dry condition.

'HANSEL-GRETEL' TO BE BROADCAST ON AIR THEATER

Radio programs on page 10

Saluting the holiday season the Chicago Theater of the Air will present Hemperdinck's operatic fantasy, "Hansel and Gretel," at 9 p. m. next Saturday over W-G-N and the Mutual network. Marion Claire will sing Gretel and Ruth Slater, contralto, will sing Hansel, her brother who shares her adventures in the dark forest. Bruce Foote, baritone, will sing the part of the father.

Col Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak.

In response to many requests this season's performance will be a repetition of last year's special rhymed version written by Jack La Frandre, director of the series. The musical setting, including the famous prayer of the two bewildered children, will be provided by the Theater of the Air orchestra and chorus, directed by Henry Weber.

LEADING SINGERS JOIN IN TRIBUTE TO JEROME KERN

Hour's Memorial Program Starts at 330 P. M.

BY LARRY WOLTERS

A group o fthe leading popular singers of America will pay tribute to the late Jerome Kern who wrote much of the most tuneful music of the century. A few years ago Kern visited W-G-N and gave his advice to young composers who were then participating in a contest for a typically American operetta. The competition was sponsored by the station.

Jerome Kern

"Your writing must be sincere, honest, unaffected, and genuine," Kern said. "It must come from the honest, unaffected, and genuine heart." That was a good description of Kern's own music. He had a great gift for song. He wrote more than 100 musical productions, 31 for the stage alone, and hundreds of songs. Today it seems that such Kern melodies as "Ol' Man River," from "Show Boat," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" from "Roberta," and a score of others will be everlasting.

Many Stars to Be Heard

On today's memorial program will be heard Bing Crosby, Nelson Eddy, Judy Garland, Hildegarde, Patrice Munsel, Dinah Shore, Frank Sinatra, and Earl Wrightson. Several of them have been associated with the introduction of Kern songs, others have popularized them. They will be supported by the orchestras of Robert Armbruster and Al Goodman. The program will be aired over WBBM-CBS from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m., replacing the regular Nelson Eddy show and the Family hour for today.

Oscar Hammerstein II., with whom Kern collaborated on "Show Boat" is in charge of production and the entire script. Irving Berlin, Richard Rodgers, and Deems Taylor, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, all close personal friends of Kern, are assisting in the production.

Medley Opens Program

The hour will open with a medley by the full company. Eddy will sing "All the Things You Are," in Hollywood, and then will join Miss Munsel in a duet of "Make Believe." Miss Munsel will be in New York.

Miss Munsel then will sing "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," Wrightson, "The Night Was Made for Love," and Jack Smith, "Who."

Sinatra will sing "The Song Is You." Crosby, "I've Told Every Little Star," and Hildegarde, "The Last Time I Saw Paris," which has come to be identified with her name.

Miss Garland's solo will be "Look for the Silver Lining." Miss Shore will sing "Just My Bill," which Helen Morgan made famous. Goodman will feature "Waltz in Swingtime," and Armbruster's orchestra and chorus another medley. Eddy, Miss Munsel, and the entire company will join in the finale singing and playing of "Ol' Man River."

Cancer to Be Subject on Round Table Today

"Cancer—What the Public Should Know" will be the subject on the University of Chicago Round Table over WMAQ-NBC at 12:30 p. m. today. Speakers will be Reuben G. Gustavson, vice president of the University of Chicago; Dr. R. R. Spencer, director of the National Cancer institute, and Dr. Alexander Bruschwig, professor of surgery at the University of Chicago.

Dorothy Maynor Will Be Harvest of Stars Guest

Dorothy Maynor, Negro soprano, will be a soloist on the Harvest of Stars program over WMAQ-NBC at 1 p. m. today. Raymond Massey will be narrator in a dramatization about America's trail blazers. Howard Barlow is director of the program's orchestra.

City's Theatrical Bookings in Crystal Ball Stage

Milton Berle, Willie Howard Swap Theaters

By Claudia Cassidy

If by any chance you are wondering what to give a theatrical reporter for Christmas, let me suggest a crystal ball infallibly luminous on such subjects as who will play what, when, and where. For that squint your friend probably has developed is solely due to years of peering into the murk that passes for theatrical information, a fog thickened by undue optimism, or pessimism, by the unpredictable nature of a business completely dependent on public reaction, by the continuous juggling act put on by the booking office with plays and theaters as flying baubles, or by any other confusion it may occur to any one to contribute.

Naturally, all this makes it a little tough to answer people who want to know what shows are on our immediate horizon, and as for the letter requesting such information for the middle of April, I have no crystal ball, and no possible way of knowing if the above hint will have any results on Christmas morning. However, I can tell you this. Anything in the nature of a guess will certainly be wrong. Take the case of Milton Berle and Willie Howard. Originally Mr. Howard was to bring "The Passing Show" into the Great Northern Christmas night, while Mr. Berle and "Spring in Brazil" followed "Carmen Jones" at the Erlanger Jan. 7. First Mr. Berle canceled; now he is coming to the Great Northern Christmas week, probably Dec. 27, and Mr. Howard, with Ethel Waters as newly acquired co-star, comes to the Erlanger Jan. 7 on the heels of "Carmen Jones."

Another booking confusion seems to have been settled by Elisabeth Bergner's decision to close "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" Saturday night, altho holiday playgoers had hoped she would extend her engagement another week or two. It would have been gay to have Tallulah Bankhead around, too, but "Foolish Notion," like "The Desert Song," is disinclined to take a chance on the week before Christmas, often notoriously skimpy at the boxoffice. Miss Bankhead departs the Studebaker Saturday night, when "The Desert Song" winds up at the Civic Opera house. The operetta reopens Christmas night in Boston, with New York on the calendar for Jan. 8.

Dennie Moore

Nancy Holland

A little more information has crept in about "A Joy Forever," due at the Blackstone Tuesday night with Guy Kibbee, Dorothy Sands, Nicholas Joy, Dennie Moore, and Loring Smith. It seems Mr. Kibbee plays an artist who can't get the public to respect his desire for privacy, and the word after the Buffalo tryout was "Maybe we've got something." Producers never know until they see it on the stage, and even then they can't tell until the public says thumbs up or thumbs down. At any rate, Chicago gets a quick look at this one, and we may later catch Kay Francis, now touring in a piece called "Windy Hill."

Nothing has changed at "Dear Ruth" except that tomorrow night the Harris and San Francisco troupes light festive candles in sympathetic celebration of the New York company's first birthday party. But there will be a change at the Selwyn this week where Nancy Holland takes over the role of Sally in "The Voice of the Turtle" because Louisa Horton has to get along to the Boston company and K. T. Stevens' return has been postponed until Dec. 17. All this seems no more than just, for Miss Holland is the understudy who skipped vainly between Chicago and New York when leading ladies of both troupes were in disposed, and by sheer bad luck never was in the right town at the right time. Tomorrow night will mark her bow as Sally, and if that doesn't make Hugh Marlowe's understudy sigh, he is a man of character, rock ribbed.

"Dark of the Moon," as you must know by now, is booked into the Blackstone Jan. 21, and perhaps you remember that its predecessor, "The Hasty Heart," due Dec. 24, has for John Dall's leading lady a girl with a lovely Scottish name, Mary-Stuart Macdonald. On the word of her father, Malcolm R. Macdonald, Mary-Stuart is a Chicago girl who went to Roycemore and New Trier High school before heading east. She attended the Barnum school of theater here and appeared in "Seven Girls" on the west coast.

As for Gratien Gelinas, co-starred with Miriam Hopkins in Eddie Dowling's production of "St. Lazare's Pharmacy," the Studebaker opening Dec. 23 will mark his first appearance on the American stage. Mr. Gelinas is called the idol of French Canadian theater, on the strength of his Fridolin revues, and he is well known in radio there as "The Priest of the Village" and as the clown of "The Carousel and the Gaiety." Born in Champlain and taken to Montreal as a child, he first acted at the University of Montreal as in "Dramatic Circle of the Ancients." He later became a monologist and it was in that capacity that he made his bow in revue. Before long he was presenting his own shows, the revues called "Fridolinons."

Gratien Gelinas
[Karsh Photo]

Last week, I seem to remember, Mr. Dowling was going to fly out for the Studebaker opening of the show on which he has lavished most of the money poured in his hands by "The Glass Menagerie." Then he wired that he can't come because if he should be grounded and unable to get back to New York for the Monday night "Menagerie," Laurette Taylor refuses to go on in the play. The solution of that one seems to be to bring Miss Taylor along—think what a fine time we all had here last Christmas when "Menagerie" was opening. And bring along Tony Ross and Julie Haydon, too. Miss Haydon can autograph brand new copies of her book, "Every Dog Has Its Day."

"St. Lazare's Pharmacy" got a delayed Montreal start because of Miriam Hopkins' illness, which probably gave Mr. Dowling new gray hairs, but producers are used to such things. Otherwise, the Dowling future never looked brighter. Next summer he will work with Serge Koussevitzky and Herbert Graf on "Peter Grimes" and next fall he will direct and act in Eugene O'Neill's "The Iceman Cometh," for the Theater Guild. Speaking of "Peter Grimes," I asked Mr. Graf how he got along with Koussevitzky, and Dowling and he said, smiling, "Well, between the Russian tears and the Irish tears I decide that for a Viennese I am a very calm citizen."

U. of C. Composers Concert to Honor Roy Harris on the Aisle

by Claudia Cassidy

CONSIDERING that it was S. Hurok who presented me to Pavlowa in my first reviewing assignment you can hardly blame the man when he encounters me nowadays for declaring stoutly, "You haven't changed a bit." I return the compliment and, mutually reassured, we get down to business, usually over superior steaks and wine, as Hurok has vintage tastes in food as well as in artists. So super-colossal, in fact, are the names that spill gold into his managerial coffers that Hollywood is in a downright tizzy over the filming of his memoirs. Even Darryl Zanuck, with nothing short of epics permitted to reach the pencil stage on his gargantuan agenda, considers this one BIG.

Hollywood In a Tizzy Over Filming Hurok Memoirs

It will have, for example, Ezio Pinza as Chaliapin and Alicia Markova as Pavlowa, with Anton Dolin as dance consort. It will have Marian Anderson and Artur Rubinstein and maybe Alexis Smith, who is Hurok's choice to play Isadora Duncan. Carmen Amaya will be along, and the Don Cossacks, Serge Jaroff brand, and Patrice Munsel will represent the Hurok swing to American talent when Europe folded up. Gregory Ratoff will direct unless he collapses under the strain of being understood by fellow Russians. Hurok may be played by Eddie Robinson, tho Oscar Karlweis is coming around the bend, if you can imagine the redoubtable Sol with a Viennese accent.

But not even all this will solve the producer's problems. Take just one Hurok story, which happens to be true, and try casting it. It started back in 1907 when Fyodor Chaliapin made his American début with something less than complete success. One of his most profound admirers was Hurok, himself new in this country, and temporarily engaged in the hardware business, tho he had put on a concert or two with such famous folk as Ysaye and Melba. Hurok haunted every Chaliapin performance, at frugal standing room distance, and he bombarded his idol with letters. When Chaliapin returned to Russia he kept sending letters and cables, imploring him to make an American tour under Hurok management.

Here's One for the Book

Several years later he got his first reply. Chaliapin cabled "Meet me in Paris." Now this might have given pause to a less robust character, but Hurok stripped his tiny savings account to the bone and hurried to Paris. While waiting to see Chaliapin he talked to Ysaye and Melba, who invited him to dinner. Then he went into the presence. Clutching grimly at self control, he spread out the papers he had brought for Chaliapin to sign, papers that would make him a Hurok artist. But Chaliapin pushed them aside. "I'm not going back to America," he said, "the press doesn't like me, the public doesn't want me, I'll never go back to that place." "Then why," croaked Hurok when he got a part of his voice back, "why did you cable me to meet you in Paris?" "O," said Chaliapin, "I just wanted to see what the crazy so and so who has been sending me all those cables looked like."

So Hurok gathered up his papers and the wreckage of his dream and was about to get out when Chaliapin, smitten with a sympathetic twinge, invited him to dinner. Hurok said he was having dinner with Ysaye and Melba. Amused that his mad admirer knew some other artists, too, Chaliapin suggested a merger and they all spent the evening with Massenet, then composing "Don Quichotte," which Chaliapin was to make famous in opera and on the screen. Hurok went home broke and without a contract, and it was years before he snared Chaliapin on the dotted line. But he had been at Massenet's house and heard his music performed by the composer with Chaliapin, Melba and Ysaye, and he considered it not a bad bargain. "That's one for the book," he says of the episode, meaning "Impresario," his memoirs, and it's one for the movie, too. It will drive Zanuck crazy.

Orchids and Acting

"What do you know about orchids?" asked Harry Wagstaff Gribble, and when I told him Nero Wolfe was my authority, he said the delicate tawny ones I was unwrapping were cymbidiums chosen as my floral portrait on the description of what must be my best friend.

Mr. Gribble's twin passions are orchids and acting, which he handles with loving discretion, and he learned about orchids as a boy at Sevenoaks, Kent, when he was "put to graze" with relatives who grew them. Perhaps he took up the stage at Cambridge, I forgot to ask, but at any rate he soon was up to his ears in plays, and one of them was that tear jerker beloved of the movies, "Stella Dallas." He is co-author, but you have to look it up to find out. He also, they tell me, is co-author of "Anna Lucasta," on payday if not in billing, and after directing that solid success he fell in love with Frederick O'Neal's idea of doing "Romeo and Juliet" with the Capulets as Moors, a notion he reproachfully accuses me of calling the outstanding case of miscegenation as yet on theatrical record.

Just now it's more than an idea, but not necessarily piebald. It has plenty of backing for next fall production, but it may turn into a completely Negro production, which would permit Earle Hyman to play Romeo opposite Hilda Simms, rather than Paris. Elisabeth Bergner is a rooter for that version. Alice Childress, the original Blanche of "Anna Lucasta," will be the bawdy nurse, and Frederick O'Neal will play a Capulet after Gribble's heart, for Gribble is sick and tired of Shakespeare mouthed by bleating old men. By the time people reach senility, he insists, they don't care what any one does. It's your vigirous middle-aged people who try to run and ruin their children's lives. He intends to put on a feud that not only smolders, but erupts.

"Romeo" at the Drop of a Curtain

Perhaps one reason "Anna Lucasta" is so good after all these months is that the cast is too busy with Shakespeare to go stale on Yordan. They read "Romeo" at the drop of a curtain, and they are planning the way the production will look, all glowing primitives in the manner of Giotto, designed by Frederick Fox, chosen by Gribble as a flexible co-worker.

I must say Mr. Gribble makes all this sound not only persuasive, but exciting, and I don't wonder he has more offers of backing than he can handle. I haven't heard anything more stageworthy since Guthrie McClintic's armchair version of "Othello," one of the most stirring productions yet unstaged. It's true, to be sure, that many a bemused director talks a better show than he can create, but if Mr. Gribble can capture this "Romeo and Juliet" as vividly in theater as in conversation, he won't have to visit relatives or florists to indulge that taste for orchids. He can afford to put even Nero Wolfe's collection to shame.

New Music by Composer to Be Featured

By Albert Goldberg

The first University of Chicago Composers concert of the season will be given in Mandel hall on Friday night and for the first time since the inception of the series an American composer will be accorded the honor of a one-man show. Roy Harris is the indigenous artist selected by Remi Gassmann, director of the series, for this distinction, and coöperating with him in this program of mostly new music will be his wife, Johana Harris, pianist, who has devoted the major part of her career to the promotion of her husband's music; the Chicago Symphony quartet: Anita Braude, soprano; Dorothy Walters, pianist, and a chorus of 18 voices, prepared by Austin Garrels, conductor of the University College chorus.

Roy Harris, in a comparatively brief career, has attained a fairly unique reputation as the most characteristic of present day American composers. This, however, may be ascribed less to the intrinsic qualities of Mr. Harris' music than to its avowed inspiration. Walt Whitman frequently has served to excite the Harris muse, and typical titles of his work are "American Creed," "Farewell to Pioneers," and "Folksong Symphony." Virgil Thomson, who otherwise has gone on record as admiring Mr. Harris' music, has objected rather pointedly to this propensity of the composer to Americanize his music with labels. Reviewing Mr. Harris' "American Creed," which was the composer's contribution to the golden jubilee season of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Mr. Thomson wrote: "No composer in the world, not even in Germany or Italy, makes such shameless use of patriotic feelings to advertise his product. One would think, to read his prefaces, that he had been awarded by God, or at least by popular vote, a monopolistic privilege of expressing our nation's deepest ideals and highest aspirations."

However that may be, Mr. Harris' roots strike deep into sturdy American soil. He was born in a log cabin in Lincoln county, Oklahoma, on the Great Emancipator's birthday, Feb. 12, 1898, to Scotch-Irish parents who had traveled by oxcart to stake out a claim in the nation's last frontier land rush. And it is not untypical of the time and the surroundings in which he found himself—his parents moved to California when he was five—that until he was 25 his musical education consisted only of elementary lessons on the piano and clarinet. During that period he was occupied with farming, served as a private in World War I., and after the war drove a truck for a butter and egg firm, distributing 3,000 pounds of butter and 300 dozen eggs each day.

Mr. Harris' reasons for his final dedication to music as recorded by himself in David Ewen's "Book of Modern Composers" explain a good deal of the man: "I finally decided to choose music as a lifework because it was the only language I found to be constant. I made my choice late in life. I was 28 years old. Prior to this I had studied a good deal of philosophy and sociology and economics. I also had studied a good deal of literature and read all the plays I could acquire. Always I came to the same deadend conclusion: That the word language was so relative and depended so utterly on the experience of those to whom it was addressed that I found no basic a priori values upon which to build. . . . Meanwhile I became more and more absorbed in music. I discovered to my satisfaction and delight that music had some a priori

Concert Will Pay Tribute to Roy Harris

values, that week after week a certain given melody retained its same values, that a certain progression of chords always aroused in me the same reaction. And so music became for me a sort of vessel in which to gather permanent values of life upon which I could depend and with which I could build my own world around me."

Having finally made his fateful decision, Mr. Harris' progress was phenomenal. Within three years after beginning serious study with Arthur Farwell, his first orchestral composition was selected from a mass of manuscripts and performed by the New York Philharmonic at Lewisohn stadium. A Guggenheim fellowship followed, permitting the composer to enjoy several years' study in Paris with Nadia Boulanger. On his return to America he served at various times on several college faculties—he presently is at Colorado college, College Springs—and has produced a steady stream of compositions which, it is safe to say, have been more widely performed than the work of any other contemporary American composer.

Mr. Harris believes that "music has been steadily running downhill since Beethoven, because orchestral color has been exploited at the expense of all the other elements of music." He detests romanticism in music. "It really is an attitude of supreme egoism wherein the individual assumes a summum bonum of all wisdom and beneficence in his own self." He casts his faith in a new classicism. "With the instruments which we have, and with our present musical system, we are destined to have one more flowering of music before we are compelled to change our scale systems and our music."

Friday night's program of Harris music will open with the Quintet for piano, written in 1937, to be performed by Johana Harris and the Chicago Symphony quartet. The work has been heard here before. One of the striking features of the piece is that each of its main themes contains al lthe 12 notes of the chromatic scale. The remainder of the program will consist of first Chicago performances. Mrs. Harris will play a set of "Improvisations on American Folk Materials," written last summer. A wordless "Lamentation" [1944] will be performed by Milton Preves, viola, and Anita Braude, soprano, with Mrs. Harris at the piano. The concluding number will be a "Whitman Suite," for chorus, string quartet, and piano duet. This is a revision of earlier a cappella settings of the same Whitman texts: "To Thee, Old Cause," "Beat! Beat! Drums" and "Year that Trembled." Mr. Harris will direct the chorus, and the accompaniment will be furnished by the Chicago Symphony quartet, with Mrs. Harris and Dorothy Walters playing the piano duo.

The Woman's Symphony orchestra will give the final program of its season at Orchestra hall on Friday at 8:15 under the direction of Jerzy Bojanowski. The soloist will be the Russian soprano, Maria Kurenko, who will sing Mozart's motet, "Exultate, Jubilate," Zabava's aria from Gretchaninoff's "Dobrynia," Lullaby from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Sadko," and the Gavotte from Massenet's "Manon." Orchestral numbers will consist of the overture to Mozart's "The Magic Flute," a symphonic poem, "Eternal Songs," by the Polish composer, Mieczyslaw Karlowicz, and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Russian Easter" overture.

The Pro Arte Quartet will make its first appearance at Northwestern university in a concert sponsored by the School of Music in Cahn auditorium of Scott hall, Evanston, this afternoon at 4. Louis Crowder, associate professor of piano, will assist in the performance of Cesar Franck's Quintette in F minor. The Pro Arte will play Beethoven's Quartet in F major, Opus 18, No. 3, and Schumann's Quartet in F major, Opus 41, No. 1.

Award First Knapp Fund Scholarships

By The Rev. John Evans

Awards of the first scholarships from the Kemper K. Knapp fund at the University of Wisconsin have been announced by President Edwin B. Fred. Ranging from $200 to $500, 118 scholarships have been granted to undergraduate and law students by the university faculty committee in charge of the awards.

The Kemper K. Knapp fund was established this year. Mr. Knapp, a Chicago attorney, stated in his will the money was to be used to "help needful and deserving students gain their education, and to cultivate in the student body the ideals of honesty, sincerity, earnestness, tolerance, and social and political obligations."

Mr. Knapp received his bachelor of arts and bachelor of laws degrees at the University of Wisconsin in 1879 and 1882. He expressed in his will that the fund be used for purposes outside the regular curriculum of the university. His bequest of $2,500,000 is the largest "living memorial" fund ever received by the university.

Holiday Cafe Fare Pleasing and Plentiful

By Will Davidson

If it is holiday fare you are wondering about, there'll be plenty to select from, so you had better start making plans. The Rio Cabana, despite earlier reports, will have a new show for New Year's, bringing in the tremendously popular Lenny Kent on Dec. 28, to head a show that will mark the return of Cross and Dunn as a comedy singing team. The boys broke up the act a while ago, but have reunited. And while we are on the subject of the Rio, its future plans are big—with Buddy Lester, Frances Faye, and Jackie Miles scheduled to follow in that order. Don't bet any money on that schedule, however, as the entertainment business today is too, too uncertain.

Ted Weems [Seymour Photo]

The Chez Paree is happily hanging onto its great star, Danny Thomas, who with the help of Cabot and Dresden, Gail Meredith, and Lynn Shirley is packing them in. Of the supporting cast Cabot and Dresden, at least, are being held over thru Jan. 6. There may be some new faces by Christmas time, however, as Joe Jacobson now is hunting talent in New York—a task similar to hunting needles in hey-hey stacks.

The Palmer House also is happily set for the holidays, with one of its liveliest and best routined shows in history. The Borrah Minnevitch Harmonica Rascals, Estelle Sloan, the Three Swifts, Bill Baird, and Merriell Abbott's dancing dozen, are doing a wonderful business, and deservedly.

The Hotel Sherman brings in Jess Stacy's band Friday and will keep it during the holidays. Lee Wiley is the famous and featured singer. On New Year's eve Cab Calloway hid-de-hoves into view for his annual visit and will be featured in one of the Sherman's big parties, while Stacy holds the College Inn fort.

On Friday Gus Van takes over the holiday chores at the Vine Gardens; on the 19th Chuck Foster comes back to the Blackhawk and the Tune Toppers open in the Congress hotel's Glass Hat. Then on the 21st, Talia, Paul Rossini, and Benny Strong's orchestra come into the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel.

Already established, as of recent date, in their holiday programs are the 5100 club and the Blackstone hotel—the latter with Burl Ives and the former with Sid Tomack, Marylin Day, and Christine Forsythe. The Stevens also is set and is reviewed next. The Trianon ballroom brings in Carleton Hayes and his orchestra with Martha Tanner as vocalist Tuesday for a two week engagement, with Art Kassel coming in on the 23d.

I can't give you a very accurate account of the new Stevens show in the Boulevard room, for my table out in deep right field had a better view of the side stage dressing rooms and an attractive brunet with a monumental hair-do than it did of the floor.

However, I do know that Ted Weems' music sounded strong and invigorating as ever, and he played a nice foil for the inebriated antics of Le Roy, the new member of that unusual dance trio, Hibbert, Bird, and Le Roy [formerly La Rue]. Ted favors a substantial beat and good, understandable arrangements, and turns out music that is very popular in the Stevens. He has some fine entertainers in the singing McKinney sisters, Larry Noble, Paul Steel, and Tiny Martin, and he plays a very good show.

The one act I could see well was the aerialist team known as the Herzog sisters. They are amazing, and superb. Trapeze work is trapeze work, and there isn't much you can say about it, but the Herzogs give it a daring and exciting twist. Their comedy touch, with the "invited" guest from the audience, is a bit forced, but it turns out to be the most breathtaking part of the act.

The Six Willys I know from way back, and their juggling is colorful, fast, and wonderful to watch. The dance trio, Hibbert, Bird, and Le Roy, are amusing. I can't pass judgment on Dorothy Dorben's line numbers, but even from the end of the floor they looked promising. Box seat holders tell me the current numbers are among the best Dorothy has produced in the Boulevard room, and that is very good indeed.

Bill Richards and Evelyn McKinney are featured in singing roles.

Boswelling the bistros:

Paul Eduard Miller, authority and prolific writer on jazz, is presenting on Dec. 17 a jazz concert that promises to give patrons of classical music something they can understand and enjoy. Max Miller, a remarkable young pianist and vibraphonist, is the featured artist. Guest soloists will include the famous Sidney Bechet, Tony Parenti, and Bill Funkey. More detail on this next Sunday.

Carl Schreiber has won himself a practically permanent job at the new Byrd ballroom. . . . The Tune Toppers once entertained in a submerged submarine. They were aboard when an alert was sounded and down they went. . . . Mischa Novy's fine orchestra, which formerly played relief in the Boulevard room, now is featured for dancing and dinner in the Park Row room of the Stevens. Margaret English, pianist, is the intermission entertainer in the Boulevard room, and a good one.

Winnie Hoveler, Chicago's talented dancer and director, is doing so well with her two Florida lines and her New York engagement that she has purchased a home on Long Island. . . . Vi and Jerry Wagner, organ-piano duo, are going into their sixth month at the Graemere hotel. . . . Florian ZaBach'sa back at the American room of the La Salle hotel after an appendectomy.

The Brown Derby show, which despite the inference in one of their recent ads, I haven't seen as yet, features B. S. Pulley, Barbara Long, and a lot of girls. It is the mecca, they tell me, for visiting movie stars. In other words, Pulley's rugged comedy evidently has them hanging on the George Rafters.

IN MAYFAIR ROOM

Burl Ives, the "wayfaring stranger," has landed in the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel, where he is singing his famous ballads and folk songs to the accompaniment of his own "gitter."

'YOLANDA AND THE THIEF'

Fred Astaire and Lucille Bremer are all set for wedding bells in "Yolanda and the Thief." At the United Artists.

Notes of Music and Musicians

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Désiré Defauw directing, will play concerts in both the Tuesday and the Thursday-Friday series this week. Erica Morini again will appear as violin soloist at the Tuesday concert, with the Tschaikowsky concerto as her vehicle. On the orchestral portion of this program Mr. Defauw will make an unusual grouping of all three of Debussy's orchestral "Images"—"Gigues," "Iberia," and "Ronde de Printemps." "Gigues" and "Ronde de Printemps" both have been played only once previously on Chicago Symphony programs. Other numbers on this program will be Bizet's "Patrie!" overture and Rabaud's symphonic poem, "La Procession Nocturne."

Gregor Piatigorsky, favorite Russian cellist, will be soloist at the Thursday-Friday concerts, playing the Boccherini concerto in B flat, and sharing the solo roles of Strauss' "Don Quixote" with Milton Preves' viola. Mr. Defauw will open the program with the work of a fellow Belgian, "Allegro Symphonique" by Marcel Poot, a composition introduced here by Frederick Stock in 1938. The program also includes the revised version of John Alden Carpenter's "Sea Drift," first performed here twice during the orchestra's 43d season.

Paul Hindemith, eminent modernist composer, will conduct a chamber orchestra in a program of his symphonic works as the third event of the Zelzer concert series at Orchestra hall on Saturday at 8:30. Three of the four works to be performed are concert versions of ballet scores: Theme and Variations According to the Four Temperaments; "Herodiade de Stephane Mallarme," Recitation Orchestrale, and the suite, "Noblissima Visione," from the ballet, "Saint Francis." The other work on the program will be the song cycle on six poems by Georg Trakl, "Die Junge Magd," sung by Margery Mayer of the Chicago Opera company. The piano solo in "The Four Temperaments" will be played by Jane Carlson.

The Boston Symphony orchestra, Serge Koussevitzky conducting, will make its second appearance at Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30. The program includes Mozart's Symphony in E flat major, Beethoven's "Leonore" No. 3 overture, and Brahms' Fourth symphony. All seats are sold.

Schaeffer's oratorio, "Tzwei Brider," folk songs, Palestinian, and other compositions. Soloists will be Selma Kaye, soprano,, of the Chicago Opera company, and Moyshe Oysher, cantor.

George Randol, who has played the role of the father in "Anna Lucasta" for two seasons in both the Broadway and Chicago productions, will appear in his other capacity as a vocalist in a recital at the Eighth Street theater on Friday at 8:30. His program will include African songs based on native melodies, arranged by Theophilus Wendt, an aria from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," old Italian airs, and a group of Negro spirituals.

The recital by Alexander Kipnis, which was to have opened the Musical Arts Song cycle at Orchestra hall Monday night, has been postponed until April 8. Mr. Kipnis is suffering from an attack of laryngitis.

Vladimir Horowitz eagerly awaited first recital of the season will take place at Orchestra hall on Monday evening, Jan. 21. Seats by mail order only.

The Paulist choristers under the direction of Father Eugene O'Malley will give a concert for the benefit of the Victory loan bond drive at Orchestra hall on Sunday, Dec. 30, at 3:30. The concert was originally announced for Dec. 17.

'Strange Fruit' a Sincere Play on Racial Issue

By John Chapman

NEW YORK—[Special]—The unhappy status of the Negro in the south is now the subject of two Broadway dramas—"Strange Fruit" and "Deep Are the Roots." I did not indorse "Deep Are the Roots" [which is a smashing hit] because it struck me as rather inept in construction and somewhat arbitrary, or forced, in its attitude and its conclusions. I felt that the authors, James Gow and Arnaud D'Usseau, had no burning convictions or any deep experience concerning the subject they had taken up. I felt, instead, that they were just a pair of playwrights who had decided they'd do a problem play and had picked the race question.

Another pair of playwrights, Lillian and Esther Smith, have come up with a dramatization of sister Lillian's best seller novel, "Strange Fruit," and Jose Ferrer, the actor, has lavished upon their work a $100,000 production. This play I do indorse, even tho it is not by far a successful translation of a book job into terms of the stage. It is played in a low key—and played very well; and, while any one of its dozen scenes can be said to be effective, they add up to less than they should. Their effect is not cumulative, and the tragic climax they promise is not properly led up to, nor is it theatrically satisfying when it comes.

Yet I do indorse "Strange Fruit," for thruout the play I had the satisfying feeling of believing in the authors, the director [Ferrer], and the players. There is about the drama a sincerity, an integrity, which makes it important. It does not solve the white-black question, any more than does "Deep Are the Roots"; but it does urge that, despite such setbacks as lynchings, the honest friends of the Negro keep on trying.

As it stands at the Royale theater, "Strange Fruit" is in no way cheaply sensational or censurable. It is a quietly, reasonably told story of the love between a mixed-up, unhappy young son of a small town Georgia druggist and a gentle, well educated Negro woman. It tells how the irresistible force of white society forces the young man to give up his love and marry a girl of his own race. He is murdered by the Negro woman's brother, and it is his own dumb, affectionate, sadly funny house boy, a companion from childhood days, who is mistakenly lynched for the crime.

Ferrer has made his large company into an uncommonly real group of human beings. It is common to say of their style of acting that they underplay; but Eddie Dowling, an expert in these matters, says he hates the word underplaying. Naturalness is what he would call it, and so shall I.

Melchor Ferrer [no relation to Jose] is excellent as the unhappy young white man, and so is Jane White as the Negro woman. Their scenes together are instinct with a tragic, hopeless tenderness. Ralph Theadore is exactly right as an enlightened southerner who is genuinely disturbed over race problems, and Earl Jones, as the house boy, contributes an outstanding minor characterization.

George Jenkin's settings for the play are more numerous and elaborate than for many a musical. They are a remarkable example of the designer's craft. Perhaps a shade too remarkable for a drama whose effect is restrained rather than Charles Laughton portrays the title role in the new film, "Captain Kidd." At the Oriental.

The best verbal acrobat and word-juggler in the current theater is John Van Druten. His three-charac-

Drama Notes

Ruth Draper makes three appearances at the Eighth Street theater today and tomorrow, in the following programs: Today at 2:30. "Three Women and Mr. Clifford." "The Return" [new], "On the Porch in a Maine Coast Village," "A Debutante at a Dance," "Vive la France, 1940"; Tonight at 8:30, "Italian Lesson," "The Return," "Doctors and Diets," "A Debutante at a Dance," "In a Church in Italy"; Monday at 8:30, "Three Women and Mr. Clifford," "In County Kerry," "Glasses," "A Class in Greek Poise," "Vive la France, 1940."

"Blithe Spirit" is in its final week at the Goodman theater, where it will play nightly except Monday, with a Thursday matinee. Shaw's "Heartbreak House" is the next production, opening Jan. 3.

ter comedy, "The Voice of the Turtle," is an outstanding tour de force, making an entire enjoyable evening out of one sin.

In his new sex comedy, "The Mermaids Singing," Van Druten writes a good-humored defense of himself—or that part of himself which writes sex comedies and stages them with extraordinary skill. His hero is a playwright who specializes in urbane indiscretions and who is blandly unmoved by accusations that, in an important and problem-ridden world, his work confines itself to the ancient little problem of seeking and perhaps finding company for one's nightly repose.

"The Voice of the Turtle" is immoral. Having written an immoral trifle, Van Druten has now set himself the job of writing a moral trifle. His playwright, middle aged but venturesome, has become the object of the fierce and delightful affections of a 20 year old girl he encounters in a tryout town where his newest play is having its first performances. In the end he sends the young lady out of his life and back into her own very nice one, without anything but talk having happened.

It is adroit talk, nine-tenths sex. It has wit, grace, and good manners. But it is a trifle—a too-slight trifle to make an entire play, since, indeed, nothing much happens after all that talk.

In "The Mermaids Singing," however, is the season's most engaging performance—that of Beatrice Pearson as the young girl who wants to keep house, part-time if necessary, with the married playwright. She is fresh, lovely, honest, and altogether enchanting. Walter Abel is all right as the playwright,—but, after nine years in Hollywood, he still uses his hands too much. Jack Manning contributes an amusing caricature of a serious-minded young man, and thru him Van Druten takes a few sharp pokes at some of the overburdened aspects of the drama which attempts to make people think they are thinking.

Oriental theater. "Music in the Morgan Manner" will occupy the stage for two weeks with Russ Morgan and his orchestra taking over tuneful duties. Sylvia Grey is the featured girl vocalist, and Walter Link and Pee-Wee Lewis are billed prominently in the list of instrumentalists. Also on the bill are Comedian Al Stone, assisted by Nina Kaye; Bob Du Pont, the juggling gentleman, and Jean Blanche, tap dance stylist.

Chicago theater. Cab Calloway, "His Royal Highness of Hi-De-Ho," brings his orchestra and Jumpin' Five Jubilee to head the stage show. Besides the featured instrumentalists, Cab focuses the spotlight on the new Harlem singing star, Pearl Bailey. Also in the forefront of entertainment are Dotty Saulters, Moke and Doke, the Three Poms and Jones, and Glenn and Hilton.

A Drunk Who Persistently Used Money as a Pick-up

"THE GLASS CRUTCH: The Biographical Novel of William Wynne Wister," by Jim Bishop. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil

William Wynne Wister was the scion of an old Philadelphia family, a spoiled brat in his childhood, whose doting mother wheedled his affluent father into giving the boy more of everything than was good for him. He starting drinking before his downy face needed shaving, and by the time he was a man he was a confirmed alcoholic.

Marriage and fatherhood failed to redeem him, altho it is curious that the author seems to think that they should have helped his regeneration. He came to know the inside of jails, hospitals, and sanitariums better than most men know hotels. In spite of several fairly long rides on the water wagon, Wister dropped lower and lower, until he had run the full course of acoholism.

But ever in the background was his mother—or rather his father and his mother—with a check to rescue him when he was broke or in trouble with drinking, and he had an amazing capacity to earn money when he was able to work.

Altho the title implies that the alcoholic uses drink as a crutch, Wister's case seems to have been that he used money as a crutch to help him over the rough spots. It is curiously true that a great many alcoholics [among the exceptions are the bums who are reduced to experimenting with canned heat and varnish] are men of means, persons of large earnings and bank accounts, or with well heeled families to provide the means.

Jim Bishop

Of course, after they hit bottom, if there is no one to throw them a cash life saver, nothing is left for them but the skid row and the flophouses. But Wister, every time he went down, got money from mother.

It's pretty dreary and rather monotonous, reading again and again of his repeated falls and pickups, his insistence that he was impelled by some inner force to return to drink. Dreary, and more than somewhat infantile, if you ask me.

But the most astounding point in the Wister exposition [I almost said exhibition], is that William Wister was an alcoholic because [a] he developed a "fixation" for his nurse in infancy, and [b] he couldn't live up to his mother's ideal of him. In fact, Wister himself advances the theory that alcoholics are made before they are six years old.

Probably Wister and his biographer have read more psychology than I have, but it isn't true that the seeds of alcoholism are found chiefly in weak childhood training. That helps, but there are other important factors.

The question of the truth of the psychology in this story would not need to be raised if the book were not offered as a help to those who have a problem of alcoholism. Wister was cured, we are told, by psychotherapy; he then turned psychotherapist himself and has cured others. But the book is not documented nor well dated; we are given to understand that Wister's cure is now permanent, altho I am troubled by a terrific relapse he suffered after a rather longish career as a psychotherapist in the east and on the west coast. The fictional form is no excuse for this unscientific approach, and makes it appear that the book was written more for sensation value than for its avowed purpose of helpfulness.

Guild Choice Delayed

Manufacturing difficulties caused by its extreme length [339,000 words] have held up Gladys Schmitt's novel, "David the King," which was to have been the Literary Guild's February selection. The guild now hopes to offer the novel in March.

A Flavorsome Gumbo from Louisiana

"GUMBO YA-YA," by Lyle Saxon, Robert Tallant, and Edward Dreyer [Houghton Mifflin, $5].

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

"Gumbo Ya-Ya" is subtitled "A Collection of Louisiana Folk Tales," which does not explain the origin of its haunting and enchanting title—the most alluring of years. "'Gumbo Ya-Ya'—everybody talks at once—is a phrase often heard in the bayou country of Louisiana," the first line of the preface reads, but only when one is well entrapped in the book's charms does the real origin of the title become plain.

"Creole Ladies" in "Gumbo Ya-Ya"

The elderly Creole ladies of New Orleans and the great plantations thereabouts liked nothing better than spending the day together having a good gossip about everybody and everything. Such a gathering of women was known scornfully as gumbo ya-ya, one finds. If that title doesn't become a part of American contemporary slang I shall be surprised, because it so perfectly expresses inconsequential, but amusing and gossipy chit-chat.

As in the gossiping of the old ladies, there is no subject left untouched in "Gumbo Ya-Ya." And like the rich gumbos of New Orleans, every individual ingredient is a morsel cooked up by the authors into a delectable tid-bit. Some of it is very highly seasoned—like the first chapter on "Kings, Baby Dolls, Zulus, and Queens," which describes the part which is taken by the Negroes of New Orleans in the Mardi Gras and Mi-Careme hilarities. The part the white people of New Orleans play in the Mardi Gras is not gone into, since the authors apparently feel that there is more color in color.

Opposed to the violent material and manner of telling of the first chapter is, for instance, the chapter on the old Creole life which I feel sure was the work of Lyle Saxon. It is written with the same tender nostalgic charm that gave his "Fabulous New Orleans" and "Old Louisiana" their rare quality.

That chapter is as characteristic as the fabulously beautiful camellia, the loveliest flower in the world, I think, when one sees it growing out of doors on its naturally formalized tree-bush, which looks as unreal as a Botticelli canvas garden. No true Creole had colored blood, Mr. Saxon [I am sure it is] tells us. They were pure French and until the Civil war preserved their French culture almost intact. The customs of those fabulous days, the day by day lives

Monroe Biography Gives Us History of Early Period

"THE LAST OF THE COCKED HATS: JAMES MONROE AND THE VIRGINIA DYNASTY," by Arthur Styron. [University of Oklahoma Press, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Avery Craven

Arthur Styron has chosen to write of James Monroe because he was "simple and commonplace" and because "democracy can not tolerate leaders, but only representatives." And for the same reason he has, in fact, written the biography of a period and of a set of values, and not that of a man. It is the period of the Virginia dynasty, stretching from Washington to Monroe, the period in which the United States was establishing itself firmly at home and among the nations.

The choice of James Monroe as the vehicle to carry this story is a happy one. He was related to the best of Virginia families; he fought in the revolution, studied law with Jefferson, sat in the continental congress, and served both his state and the national government in their formative years. Then he went to France, and then to England to have a hand in the long, bitter fight for freedom of trade and the due recognition of American rights on the seas. He had early opposed ratification of the Constitution, but became the political colleague of Jefferson and Madison in the building of the Democratic party and followed them into the Presidential chair.

Monroe was never a leader. He only reflected public attitudes. He seems at times to have been swept along by the current of events without even comprehending them. But he was honest and worked hard. He avoided extremes. He made friends and kept them in spite of his failures. He was, in fact, a rather good representative of Jefferson's aristocratic Democrat and a rather firm upholder of the Jeffersonian principles of strict construction and local rule.

Mr. Styron makes nothing more than this out of him and uses it as an excuse for somewhat slighting the man and stressing events and personalities with which Monroe was connected. He glides back and forth across the Atlantic until he has created a rather full picture of the whole western world and its problems. He manages, however, usually to get Monroe into the picture and to make him a symbol of the evolving democratic order which held federalism in check but which, in turn, fell before the onrush of a cruder, more native type of self-rule called Jacksonian democracy.

How Perry Brothers Made U. S. History

"SQUARE SAILS AND SPICE ISLANDS," by Laura Long. [Longmans, $2.50.]

A fictionized biography of two noted brothers—Oliver Hazard Perry, who won fame as American commander in the battle of Lake Erie during the war of 1812, and Matthew, who achieved permanent national acclaim by opening up Japanese ports to American ships in the early 19th century. The story of his voyage to the orient is one of the most intriguing in sea literature. The reader is given a salty and entertaining glimpse into Yankee maritime history.

Botkin Bares Injustices of Another Day

"LAY MY BURDEN DOWN," by B. A. Botkin. [University of Chicago Press, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Horace R. Cayton
[Co-author of "Black Metropolis"]

"Lay my burden down" is a good companion piece to the dispatches which we are getting from the Nuernberg trials for it shows how a nation can rationalize man's injustice to man. It shows how the practice of reducing man to the status of beasts of burden can be institutionalized and accepted in the moral code of a nation. It shows how a premium can be put on crushing and defiling all the noble aspects of a people for economic gain and to satisfy destructive, sadistic impulses. It is impossible to read this book and retain the myth of the flowering southern culture of the plantation-slave period.

B. A. Botkin

The book is a sprawling study of slavery as told thru the life histories, stories, and the anecdotes of living slaves. B. A. Botkin, the editor, chose his material from more than 10,000 manuscripts gathered by the federal writers project and now accessible in the library of congress. The richness of the material is perhaps unequalled in our extensive literature on slavery.

The book has no sharp focus, little organization, and certainly no point of view. A sociologist with his tools would have organized the material in a different fashion—would have classified and catalogued it in some conceptual frame of reference similar, perhaps, to the method employed by Charles Sumner in his monumental volume "Folkways." Mr. Botkin gives an impressionistic picture rather than a definite statement of the period. But the basic material is available and scholars with sharper instruments can work and rework it until it has yielded all the insight and knowledge it contains of this period of our national history. In the meantime Mr. Botkin has rendered us an excellent service by letting us see portions of it in all of its freshness and richness without waiting for the cool detachment and precise instruments of the scientist.

One is almost afraid to start to quote from the book itself for every page contains a gem of understated emotion or a flashing insight of what the slave system did to corrupt the dignity of both Negro and white men. An old Negro woman reminisced, "I was worth a heap to Marse George 'cause I had so many children." Another woman stated, "I been drug about and put thru the shackles so bad I done forgot some of my children's names." A complete rejection of the slave system is summed up by an old man, "Even the best masters in slavery couldn't be as good as the worst persons in freedom."

Even with the end of chattel slavery many of the slaves quoted in this book knew that they were not free.

Some of the language—the piquant expressions and phrases—is beautiful; in speaking about the Civil war, "It was a wonderful, distressing time"; in describing emancipation, "It was a wonderful consideration to bring up in memory."

The importance of the book is that it illuminates the tissues and texture, not only of the plantation-slave system, but of our cultural heritage of today.

"Every author, in some degree, portrays himself in his works."

Tales of Sane Americans by Miss West Win Favor

By Harry Hansen

New York

JESSAMYN WEST, who wrote that entertaining book about a Quaker family in Indiana, "The Friendly Persuasion," made friends easily during her week in New York. She is a Pacific coast author, who lived originally in Los Angeles and now lives about 60 miles from San Francisco.

She won the hearts of her publishers at once when she expressed her concern over the risk they were taking and hoped they would not lose money on her book. But it is now in its fourth printing, for her stories had built up a following and the booksellers appreciated a book about Americans who were neither degenerate nor in a state of idiocy. Her publishers, Harcourt, Brace & Co., gave a party for her at the Coffee House club, where she met the reviewers—after they had reviewed her book. They had been uniformly enthusiastic.

Books on Restaurants

One of the specialized publishing ventures of the east that is panning out is that of the Dahls of Stamford, Conn. That's their business shingle, but actually they are J. O. Dahl and Mrs. Crete Dahl, who have made the preparation of books on restaurant and hotel management their major occupation. Mrs. Dahl is probably the leader in this enterprise, for she has written 19 books and manuals on hotel and housekeeping management, lectured on hotel housekeeping at Cornell university, and helped start the National Executive Housekeepers association, which goes in for housekeeping on a grand scale.

Mr. Dahl has been editor of Restaurant Management magazine. While they have written many books and booklets, they also publish books by others, for example "Salads and Sandwiches" by Emory Hawcock. Mrs. Dahl's latest is "How to Get and Keep Restaurant Employes," which, you must acknowledge, is a most timely subject. A glance at their booklist shows the ramifications of the soda, luncheonette, cafe, and hotel business. Here are writings on breakfast profits, the selection of coffee for quantity cookery, how to cook with rum, profits in tea rooms, and even a "Handbook of Hot Breads," yum, yum.

Many of the books have the word "profitable" in the title, and that proves to you that the publishers are trying to catch the eye of the restaurant owner. If they were angling for us they would probably stress the word "tasty." There is even a book on profitable garnishes in the list, which shows ways "to add zest and taste appeal to menus." The Dahls travel all over the United States getting ideas on what restaurant owners want to know. This shows you how concentration on one subject may lead to a unique—and profitable—publishing business.

Randall's Lincoln Book

The other day I told Raymond T. Bond of the house of Dodd, Mead & Co. that my report on James C. Randall's "Lincoln the President" had said that the book had sold 50 copies on publication, when 500 was meant. [The advance was over 8,000.] Mr. Bond replied: "I've always delighted in understatement as a literary force. Moreover, I've just lost a bottle of something or other on a bet in the office. My estimate of November sales was way under, too." All publishers expect the biggest December in many years.

Charles S. Carlson, muralist, has just written "The Essentials of Pictorial Decoration" for the house of Little Books, 80 East 11th st. A teacher of anatomy and figure construction for artists, Mr. Carlson began his studies at the Art Institute of Chicago before going to New York, Munich, and Antwerp, and also put in three years as student of anatomy under Charles Schroeder of Chicago. He has written many books on technique.

Maurine Whipple, author of "The Giant Joshua," a successful novel about settlers in Utah, published several seasons ago, came to New York for the publication of her new book, "This Is the Place: Utah," by the house of Knopf, and went back to Utah with a fine contract for a novel for Simon & Schuster in her handbag. Her new book is a most attractive volume, with some of those glowing Orange mountains among the pictures and was the especial care of Bernard Smith of the Knopf staff. Miss Whipple says the book is getting a warm welcome among Utahns—that's the way they spell it out there—"even better than Joshua did. The new novel will be a sequel to Joshua. I didn't know publishers ever backed so nebulous a thing as a mere idea." Ah, but they do, especially if the nebula shows signs of turning into a dollar sign.

When John Mason Brown was in the navy as an aide to Adm. Kirk, John Brown Mason was associated with the historical branch of the war department general staff. The latter is on the faculty of Stanford university. Some day the two ought to meet on a radio program.

A Blunt Instrument

Franklin Frazier, formerly lieutenant colonel of the army in charge of public relations in Washington, will take charge of book promotion for E. P. Dutton & Co. Before the war he was similarly occupied with J. B. Lippincott company and was known for the original devices he employed to make booksellers and editors aware of forthcoming books. In one case, when a detective story told how the victim was killed with a sculptor's tool, he sent around a "blunt instrument" that looked like a small crowbar and effectively made his point.

Rushing the season is not solely a trait of merchants. It also is being adopted by literary editors who annually summarize the books of the year. Such comments used to appear on Jan. 1 of the following year. But now they appear as early as Thanksgiving and the first week in December. Looking over a number of lists by eastern critics I find a wide variety of choice for the "best" titles of the year.

Among the novels are William Maxwell's "The Folded Leaf," Glenway Westcott's "Apartment in Athens," James B. Ullman's "The White Tower," and Sinclair Lewis' "Cass Timberlane." In nonfiction "Up Front," by Bill Mauldin, and "Black Boy," by Richard Wright, appear most often. But critics were not in general agreement on their relative positions. It is worth noting that some of the books with the biggest sales were not favored.

Long, Rich Tale Set in Deep South

"THE RIVER ROAD," by Frances Parkinson Keyes. [Messner, $3.00.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan

Frances P. Keyes

That simple life, so deeply colored by medieval survivals which is the traditional south, is imprisoned in this long rich story. Here is a social order in which the landed gentry is the only important ingredient and overlordship a traditional necessity. The time is from the first to the second World war, and in manners, customs, education and religion the Louisianians are like English squires.

So, altho this story is modern, it still is hung with Louisiana moss. It describes with beauty and accuracy the great houses along the river's bank, the enormous sugar plantations, the thousands of colored servants who are like serfs. Thus entrenched in property, privilege and custom, the first families live according to an ornate social code, made up of a good deal more ancestry than economic order.

Into this rich and profligate setup there enters a commoner in the person of the heroine, Merry, a girl from the other side of the tracks who marries an aristocrat, and proceeds to fight the social system. She is straight, where her companions are devious, and she earns her position as chatelaine of the great house on the River road by unraveling the tangled web they have made of their luxurious lives. And before she is done she is sick of the whole business, for her children are sacrificed to a code in which she does not believe.

Thus the woman who is free of traditions brings into high contrast the paradox of a people who will willingly die for their country but cling to customs that ruin its welfare. Mrs. Keyes has written a good story, in the grand manner, with hundreds of minor characters around the central group. Merry's struggle to bring her children, her husband, his mother, and his sister into a saner, fairer world ends, of course, in temporary defeat, but she has made a lasting impression on that code where ladies and gentlemen regard themselves as children of an indulgent father, inheriting not only fortune but privilege.

Rich in scenery with southern moss, antique treasures, garden views, and handsome men and women, the Louisiana of this book is lush and lovely. Here is the deep south, over 700 pages of it, with its flora and fauna, its people and its homes, its magnificence and a little of its squalor, all serving as background for a love story that is modern and important. Mrs. Keyes does not pretend. She knows her settings before she writes about them. She has lived in Louisiana in recent years.

The Unusual Tale of Susie Cucumber

"SUSIE CUCUMBER," by Cynthia B. Richardson. [Sam'l Gabriel Sons. Book and 28 weekly letters, $5].

Susie Cucumber is a real fox terrier, living at Alexandria, Va., who thru the literary ingenuity of her mistress, writes 28 weekly letters to small boys and girls whose friends or relatives put their names on the mailing list. The letters contain accounts of Susie Cucumber's experiences with her friends and they enclose such surprises as flower seeds and play stamps. A 64 page story book tells how Susie got her name and launched her correspondence. The book can be obtained separately as can each of the four series of letters. This novel plan has in it three elements that appeal to children: imagination, surprise, and getting mail like grownups.

How Wisdom Was Sought and Attained

"PURSUIT OF UNDERSTANDING," by Esther Cloudman Dunn. [Macmillan, $2.50.]

Reviewed by John Abbot Clark

This "autobiography of an education," this quest for wisdom and understanding, by one of America's outstanding teachers and scholars, richly deserves a place beside Bliss Perry's "And Gladly Teach," Mary Ellen Chase's "A Goodly Heritage," and Margaret Emerson Bailey's "Good-Bye, Proud World." The author's respect for literature began, she tells us, when, as a little girl in the Indian summer of the Victorian world, she recited a poem of Tennyson's one Sunday afternoon for callers, tho "just what it was one was getting thru was not clear, nor why it was recited and listened to." The volumes in her father's library, altho she opened very few of them, made a lasting impression, and were probably more formative and educational than many of the books she later read.

Esther Cloudman Dunn

She saw that to her father those shelves of books were vitally important. "As he sat silent and absorbed, cross-legged . . . before the fire . . . some electric excitement went on within him. I felt it tho there was no sound in the room but the creak of the chair, the rattle in the pipe bowl, and the muffled thud of a log end falling into the ashes. I saw how powerful a book could be." In other words, to vary somewhat an old but still not outmoded formula, a case of Mark Hopkins at one end of a book and a blazing log at the other.

Hundreds of things cry out for attention in this book. The New England grandmother of 80, for instance, who, Cato-like, was intent upon improving her mind to the last. The spirited high school teacher who cooked up an English course for those of his students who were not going on to college, based on Chaucer, Samuel Johnson, and Charles Lamb. [It's enough to cause one to consider seriously throwing everything overboard and going right back, Thurber fashion, to high school.] The author's memories of her undergraduate days at Cornell; her short lived but not exactly dull or uneventful trial heat as a high school teacher; her years at Bryn Mawr, and her studies in England. Her vignettes of Matthew Arnold's sister, the grandsons of Coleridge and Wordsworth, Sidney Colvin, and Mr. Leaf of the once famous team of Lang, Leaf, and Myers. The refusal of Oliver Wendell Holmes to visit Wellesley in company with Howells and Edmund Gosse, because he preferred to visit there "when he could have the young ladies quite to himself."

And Miss Dunn says many wise and fetching things about education in general that a great many people today sorely need to be informed or reminded of, especially educators.

A Book for Writers Serving Overseas

"THE WORLD IS THEIR BEAT," by J. C. Oestreicher. [Essential Books, $2.50.]

Want to be a foreign correspondent? The author, who is boss of foreign correspondents for International News Service, tells how, with supplementary notes on how writers bleed and suffer for the reader back home. There is a great deal about censorship, communications, and press association problems. Recent AP and UP blunders are played up and the impression is given that INS never makes mistakes. Mr. Oestreicher should have a good copyreader go over his next book for errors of grammar and spelling —especially of names.

WALTER SIMMONS

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

FAME is notoriously a difficult wench to woo, and nobody knows anything about the verdicts of posterity. It was no less a poet than Oliver Wendell Holmes who said, "I would rather risk for future fame upon one lyric than upon 10 volumes."

It is certainly true that many "one lyric" men have won fame, and even more significantly true that some of them were not seeking it. For example, Dr. Clement Clarke Moore, whose delightful Christmas ballad, "A Visit from St. Nicholas," was not written for publication but solely for the delectation of his own children. The story is too well known to need retelling: the poem got into print without the author's knowledge, and is today America's most famous contribution to the Christmas legend.

Less well known is the contention that Dr. Moore did not write the old ballad so long associated with his name. A quarter of a century or so ago, the late Dr. William Sturgis Thomas stirred the Christmas historians with his claim that it was actually the work of his ancestor, Maj. Henry Livingston Jr., of Poughkeepsie. He produced documents purporting to substantiate the claim; but in the end everything boiled down to his strong belief in certain family traditions.

At his death Dr. Thomas bequeathed the controversy to his son, Lt. William Stephen Thomas, U. S. N. R., who has revived it with considerable vigor but without, I think, any more actual evidence. Last Christmas he opened his campaign with a display of documents in the Harvard Club library in New York, and there have been echoes of the dispute ever since.

Without entering into the merits of the case too deeply, it may be said that Dr. Moore did not formally acknowledge the ballad until 1844, 21 years after its anonymous publication in a Troy, N. Y., newspaper, when he gathered it up with other specimens of his verse in his collected "Poems," and Maj. Livingston apparently never publicly claimed it at all. An "original manuscript" is lacking in both camps; but it is asserted that a manuscript believed to be Livingston's original was destroyed in a fire at Waukesha, Wis., in 1843. Several transcriptions of the ballad exist in Dr. Moore's hand.

Much is made by the Livingston partisans of such internal evidence as that the poem is unlike anything else Dr. Moore ever wrote. They see him as a serious old pedant, a professor, a classical scholar, altogether a no-nonsense sort of man, not given to trivia; whereas Maj. Livingston was a jovial old gentleman of rollicking humor, quite the lad to have written such a ballad, and author of at least one other piece of genial nonsense a bit on the order of the "Visit."

It is said that James Thurber, after studying the Livingston case, wrote Dr. Thomas that he would "always be inclined to believe" Maj. Livingston wrote the poem. This department, which takes sides just as recklessly as Mr. Thurber, will always be inclined to believe the ballad was written by Dr. Moore, who claimed it, and whose claim was not disputed in his lifetime.

I have neglected mystery novels shamefully in my recent reports on new books. Among those I have particularly enjoyed during the last few months are Ellery Queen's "The Murderer Is a Fox" [Little, Brown], a return to the scenes of this detective's best exploit in "Calamity Town;" Matthew Head's "The Devil in the Bush" [Simon & Schuster]; H. C. Branson's "The Fearful Passage" [Simon & Schuster]; and Guy Endore's "Methinks the Lady . . ." [Duell, Sloan, and Pearce]. Endore's story is a brilliant psychiatric study of a Jekyll and Hyde female, apparently a kleptomaniac, and perhaps a nymphomaniac, that may leave you as bewildered as it did me. I still have no idea whether the events of the tale are supposed to have occurred in fact or only in the young woman's mind. Either way, and even if you don't like anything about the creature, the book is resistlessly readable.

The African background of Mr. Head's story is principally what gives it distinction, but its other merits are not negligible. Best of all recent books in the detective story field, I think, is Mr. Branson's literate, almost peaceful performance, in which we meet again the quiet, civilized, believable John Bent—an American Dr. Thorndyke—and a group of believable people in a believable story.

Notable recent reprints are the volumes of Knopf's "Black Widow" series, including the best novels of Dashiell Hammett, Raymond Chandler, and Eric Ambler, and Little, Brown & Co.'s new "European Espionage" series, which begins with four popular titles: "No Surrender," by Martha Albrand; "Rogue Male," by Geoffrey Household; "Above Suspicion," by Helen MacInnes; "Escape," by Ethel Vance.

There are many pleasant paragraphs, many beautiful paragraphs, in "Selections from the Note Books of Gerard Manley Hopkins," edited by T. Weiss [New Directions]; but the book is so slight—it contains only 23 pages of text, plus the four-page introduction—that it is interesting chiefly as a handsome piece of printing by Carl P. Rollins of Yale University Press. The little volume is the latest addition to the publisher's series of pamphlets, "The Poets of the Year," and is possibly a useful introduction to Father Hopkins' poetic prose, the raw material of his poems. The following paragraph is quotable:

"It is a happy thing that there is no royal road to poetry. The world should know by this time that one cannot reach Parnassus except by flying thither. Yet from time to time more men go up and either perish in its gullies fluttering excelsior flags or else come down again with full folios and blank countenances. Yet the old fallacy keeps its ground. Every age has its false alarms."

Too true. True, too!

So many persons have asked me who the American novelist is whose husband was shipped home to her in a barrel of rum [Oct. 28], that I may as well tell all I know about it. According to Ambrose Bierce, than whom often there could have been no less truthful authority, George H. Bowen Atherton, the husband of Gertrude Atherton, died—this was all many years ago—on a vessel en route to his native Chile, and was shipped back to his astonished widow in the manner described. The story was also told to me, myself, personal, some years ago, by the late W. C. Morrow, a California writer of note, and it appeared recently in an interview with Mrs. Atherton in a San Francisco newspaper—altho not from the lips of Mrs. Atherton; it was the interviewer's contribution, quoting Bierce.

A Farm Story with Savor of Vinegar Pie

Reviewed by Marguerite Lyon

So the farmer, one John Gould, took a wife, and his Great-Uncle Tim soberly reflected:

"None of the Goulds ever amounted to anything himself, but they manage to find themselves some awful smart women."

After her marriage in Boston, young Mrs. Gould proved her smartness. She went straight to the farm that had been in her husband's family for four generations and began to make pie for her menfolks. She made pie out of everything handy, and when nothing was handy she made vinegar pie, which brought Uncle Tim's gratitude and admiration to the boiling point.

She also made hot biscuits which Uncle Tim and her husband ate with wild honey, beef stew and dumplings, and so many other digestion wrecking foods masculine readers will undoubtedly drool over the pages while the girl with the crush on a farmer will begin to think twice about leaving her city job.

The space which Mr. Gould devotes to food in his book is proof that Maine farmers, like hayshakers in Iowa and Arkansas, are always mighty interested in what Maw is whacking up for dinner.

Few farmers, however, have been able to whip up so smooth a tale of life on the farm. Mr. Gould writes of the past and present, and hints of the future [when great-uncle will become great-great-uncle] with typical Yankee humor, dry and sharp as Maine snowflakes when the weather is, in Gould words, on the offensive.

Delightful persons of the past come to life in this Yankee chronicle, the taciturn Samoset who came to the Gould farmhouse for each Thanksgiving in Grandfather Gould's time, and Great-Grandmother Gould who went to her first Maine Christmas in a swing-dingle.

But the liveliest, chuckle provoking topics are of the present; the year 'round farm duties, the neighbor, Satchel Eye Dyer, who had the front of his house put on hinges so he could keep the manure spreader in the parlor, and such Maine phenomena as the wind which loosened a clapboard on the barn and then vibrated it over a knothole until the barn whistled "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Tuck this meaty, easy-to-handle book into the basket of fruit you take to your hospitalized friend.

Hairy-Chested and Hilarious Story of War

"FROM OMAHA TO OKINAWA," by William Bradford Huie. [Dutton, $2.75.]

"MORE LIVES THAN ONE," by Hobert Douglas Skidmore. [Houghton Mifflin, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

Bill Huie wrote "Can Do!", a hairy-chested, hilarious story of the Seabees—and it was pretty successful. Now he takes the Seabees from Omaha beach in Normandy to Okinawa in an even more vigorous book, packed so full of belly laughs that it is tremendous fun to read.

Huie is precisely the right man to tell about the Seabees, for temperamentally he is one of them himself; he is profane, hard working, humorous, and knows how to do a good job well without racing his motor.

Any one writing a monograph on jungle juice in the Pacific will find his handbook invaluable. Now that the war's over, he names the originator of Eniwetok's famous "Kickapoo juice," which was made from potato peelings, coconut shoots, and brake fluid. He also goes into the matter of such beverages as torpedo juice, "screech," cane squeezin's, and tells of the Seabee on Guadalcanal who, brigged for moonshining, nevertheless ran a still in his jail foxhole.

Here is an ideal Christmas present for all past or present Seabees. Every battalion is listed and credited with work done in far-flung places.

"More Lives than One," by the author of the widely praised "Valley in the Sky," is a factual story of the air support men in the Pacific, told with a technique resembling fiction. It captures, perhaps better than any other books, the quiet comradeship of men in danger. The two chapters on Honolulu will shock some people, but they needed to be written. Somebody should write a whole book about war time Honolulu.

"BILL'S DIARY," by Dwig. [Stanton & Lee, $2.]

If you buy "Bill's Diary" for your family, and if you wish to avoid rancorous disputes, be sure to get as many copies as you have youngsters from 9 years old to the early teens. Dwig, whose name on documents is Clare Victor Dwiggins, has done 287 full page cartoons to illustrate the mythical Bill's very brief entries in his diary. August Derleth, the Sauk City sage, contributes an essay dealing with Dwig and with famous American boys of literature and of the cartoon. Pop and Mom will like this introduction. The youngsters will wade at once into Dwig's most human yet whimsical panels.

Up-to-Minute Book by Eddy on Television

"TELEVISION: The Eyes of Tomorrow," by Capt. William C. Eddy. [Prentice-Hall, Inc., $3.75.]

Reviewed by Larry Wolters

That gadgeteer extraordinary, radio-radar and television genius, flying enthusiast, mathematics wizard, Indiana "farmer," cartoonist, and raconteur—that human dynamo known thruout the world of electronics simply as Bill Eddy has found time, despite his preoccupation as commanding officer of the navy's huge radio and radar training program in Chicago, to turn out a comprehensive, up to the minute volume on the post-war era's most exciting new industry.

"Television is, in truth, a melting pot of the sciences, the arts, and the populace," writes Mr. Eddy. [He's out of the navy now and back running Balaban and Katz's television station WBKB.] "No field of endeavor ever proposed by man offers more or demands more from its patrons than does the creation and transmission of electronic pictures." Then he tells you why.

He sketches the highlights of its development, outlines its problems and potentialities in plain, mostly non-technical language. The Eddy humor weaves in and out of the story, especially in a chapter titled "Tall Tales"; and it leaps out at you thru his own Disneyesque illustrations.

The volume is dedicated to his wife "who has listened to the rereading of this story so many times that she now refuses to own a copy." But if you have any curiosity about the import of the word "video" in the world of tomorrow better get a copy.

North, East, South, West—All Scrambled

"NORTH, EAST, SOUTH, WEST: A Regional Anthology of American Writing." Edited by Charles Lee, Sarah Cleghorn, Edwin Seaver, Struthers Burt, A. C. Spectorsky, and Joseph Henry Jackson. [Howell, Soskin, $3.75.]

Reviewed by August Derleth

If you can conceive of a compilation of writings about atomic energy put together by a group of landscape gardeners, you can readily accept a "regional anthology" edited by people who know as little about regional writing as landscape gardeners might be expected to know about atomic energy. "North, East, South, West" is such an anthology.

Most of the editors for this anthology are literary critics—and good literary critics, too, as critics go—but certainly not even amateur authorities on regional writing in America. I suppose that I must reluctantly admit, as I lectured repeatedly on the subject some years ago, that regional boundaries were certain to be broken down, and that that breaking-down must of necessity be accompanied by the wilful misinterpretations of people not at all qualified to speak on the subject.

Charles Lee of Philadelphia is the general editor of this anthology; he has no writing or critical background in regional writing. Edwin Seaver, Philadelphia-born writer of proletarian fiction, likewise. A. C. Spectorsky, for the middle west, an easterner, literary editor, similarly. Struthers Burt, Philadelphia-born, author of the western "Powder River," again likewise. Indeed, only Sarah Cleghorn for New England, and New Jersey-born Joseph Henry Jackson for the far west, might conceivably be acceptable, tho neither is conspicuously associated with regional writing in America. Of them all, Jackson perhaps is the best qualified.

Most conspicuous by their absence are the men who have done the most to sponsor an awareness of regional writing in the United States—Prof. John T. Frederick, Prof. Howard W. Odum, and Prof. B. A. Botkin.

Even the regions selected for representations in this presumably inclusive anthology are arbitrarily chosen, conforming not at all to the accepted literary regions. Yet this might be expected, and it can hardly be attributed to the editors who are woefully inadequate in the field. The fact is, of course, that this book is not a regional anthology at all, and the attempt to make it appear so is a kind of literary fraud.

It is a book of good enough prose and poetry which has been written by writers in various parts of the country—but that does not make it a "regional" anthology as "regional" has been understood for the last three decades in American literature. Neither the publishers nor his editors should have lent themselves to that claim.

Imagine, for instance, if you can, how in the world Edgar Allan Poe's "The Cask of Amontillado" and "Israfel" are regional. I find it beyond me, but the editors of this collection find nothing inappropriate in it.

Perhaps the middle west section can be viewed as typical, tho, apart from its omissions, it ranks with Jackson's section among the better portions of the volume. Except for the piece by Richard Wright [southern regional, not middle western], Mr. Spectorsky's selections are at least truly regional. His omissions betray him.

Of the formative influences, however, he has included three out of four—Lewis, Masters, Anderson, omitting Dreiser. For every inclusion there are at least a dozen omissions. No Willa Cather, for instance; no Floyd Dell, Glenway Wescott, Zona Gale, Hamlin Garland, E. W. Howe, Edward Eggleston, Louis Bromfield, Edna Ferber, Ring Lardner, MacKinlay Kantor—and so on ad infinitum. Moreover, the selections chosen do not always seem to be among the best. But at least Mr. Spectorsky has consciously tried to keep to the regional theme, which cannot be said for his co-editors.

SPUNKY THE DONKEY

and

LEANDER THE GANDER

by

David and Sharon Stearns

$1.00

64 Pages. Four Colors. Spiral Binding. Ages 3-7.

SPUNKY, THE DONKEY, was quite proud of his great, long ears—at first. But one day, in the market place, a man (who himself had big ears) laughed at SPUNKY'S ears. And there was Mr. Snitchkin, too, who made life unhappy for SPUNKY.

LEANDER, THE GANDER, was a most unhappy goose. And all because of his long, rubbery neck. He wished one day that Sneaker, the black cat, might have his long neck while he, in turn, might have Sneaker's short one. And that's exactly what happened!

are lived again in this book.

There also lives and pulsates the sense of mystery, the unsolved crimes, the dealings with the spirits, the power of graveyards, the religious fervor, the power of dreams, the passion for playing numbers and other gambling games, and the innate gayety of the native Negroes. Some of the most amusing and weird chapters in the book deal with such people as "Crazeh," who is "a personification of colored people's love for buryin's"; Mother Shannon, who declares "I is married to Jesus" and is head of a religious cult and dresses in gold brocade.

The chapter on slaves is not a pretty one, but it points out that the census in 1838 showed that 3,777 free Negroes owned slaves and tells at least one ironic tale of prosperous freed slaves who when they died willed considerable property to members of the impoverished family which had formerly owned them.

There are fascinating chapters on the Italiana, with their fetes of St. Joseph and St. Rosalia; on the Irish, doughty early residents of the "Irish Channel"; on the Germans who belonged to the "Sockserhause gang." And one chapter, complete with charts, deals with the treasure already unearthed and still undug which was supposed to have been buried by the pirate Lafitte and his crew.

THE Murder Chart BY DREXEL DRAKE

ENTRY	PERFORMANCE	PAY-OFF
"THE FEARFUL PASSAGE," by H. C. Branson. [Simon & Schuster, $2.]	Desperate need of money, hatred, and false alibi combined with incriminating circumstances to point to young Tom Sherman as murderer of his stepfather, Detective John Bent had to deal with evasive and involved neighbors to uncover unusual complication of dramatic elements and solve a stubborn puzzle.	Strong circumstantial murder case convincingly set up, and detective loquaciously does otherwise interesting job, turning up a solution that is surprising, but not quite on a par with the buildup. Bright characters.
"WOMAN AT BAY," by George Harmon Coxe. [Knopf, $2.]	Sent by Washington to Havana to purloin diary of dead Vichy collaborationist, being brought there by latter's widow presumably for deal with Americans implicated in its incriminating disclosures, Paul MacKinnon bungled thru intrigue and murders, but suave Cuban police lieutenant gave him competent help.	Plot clicks smartly, capturing increased exciting interest, but there is abrupt drop into fantastic melodrama, and a wishy washy finale.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery

THIS column's boyscoutish Urge To Be Helpful is as a rule what the biologists call vestigial, "a small, degenerate, or imperfectly developed part or organ." It's more fun to mutter curses and smash things.

But today, perhaps because peace and Christmas are in the air and everybody loves everybody and all the nations [except a half hundred or so] are cooing fondly to each other, we feel like doing something noble for Coward-McCann, Inc., publishers, and also for the G. & C. Merriam company, makers of Webster's Dictionary.

Our theme for the day then is: How To Make Good Books Better.

Let us begin by bettering the almost unbetterable "What Cheer," David McCord's anthology of funny poems. To advertise it the publishers bought a page in The Saturday Review of Literature [Nov. 17] and proudly stated that the book contained, among other treasures, Bert Leston Taylor's "The Dinosaur."

Well, what do you think! "The Dinosaur" is printed in full in the advertisment, but there isn't a line of it in the book itself! We searched in the index of authors and titles; we searched in the index of first lines; and we went thru the book page by page, thinking it must be there even tho the indexers had slipped. We even searched the appendix—in vain.

So, believing as we do that "The Dinosaur" is the funniest poem that ever came out of the inkwell of B. L. T. [founder of THE TRIBUNE'S Line o' Type or Two] we print it here. Clip it out and paste it inside the cover of your "What Cheer," and your anthology will be perfect instead of almost. And will Coward-McCann kindly let us know what happened?

THE DINOSAUR

Behold the mighty Dinosaur,
Famous in prehistoric lore,
Not only for his weight and strength
But for his intellectual length.
You will observe by these remains
The creature has two sets of brains—
One in his head [the usual place],
The other at his spinal base.
Thus he could reason a priori
As well as a posteriori.
No problem bothered him a bit:
He made both head and tail of it.
So wise he was, so wise and solemn,
Each thought filled just a final column.
If one brain found the pressure strong
It passed a few ideas along;
If something slipped his forward mind
'Twas rescued by the one behind:
And if in error he was caught
He had a saving after-thought.
As he thought twice before he spoke
He had no judgments to revoke;
For he could think, without congestion,
Upon both sides of every question.
O, gaze upon this model beast,
Defunct ten million years at least.
—Bert Leston Taylor

"Look—it's a clerihew!" exclaimed Mr. Leon Stolz, our technical advisor on matters pertaining to light verse. "And here's another!"

He indicated the following quatrains:

John Stuart Mill,
By a mighty effort of will,
Overcame his natural bonhomie
And wrote "Principles of Political Economy."

Sir Christopher Wren
Said, "I am going to dine with some men.
If anybody calls
Say I'm designing St. Paul's."

Mr. Stolz insisted that "clerihew" was a good word, but could not find it in his 1945 edition of Webster's unabridged, nor even in the Oxford, which is bigger than the Encyclopaedia Britannica. But he was right just the same, and Marcia Winn proved it for him wth her Jarrolds' Dictionary of Difficult Words, which says:

clerihew [klerihu], n., short nonsensical poem, gen. of four lines of varying length, and espec. biographical, invented by E. Clerihew Bentley.

So if you have just bought a Merriam-Webster unabridged [$37.50] you may bring it up to date by clipping and pasting this, noting that the verses quoted were written by eclerihewbentley himself.

• • •

P. S.—Cyanide Sally, who rushes in where better poets fear to tread, has just contributed the following:

clerihew, my clerihew
mr. e. clerihew bentley was a pretty smart man evi*dently*; spelled his name with a lower case c
but couldn't persuade messrs. webster and oxford to agree.

It is six in the morning and the assault boats are nearing the beach of a Pacific island...

YOU ARE LANDING with your company on Beach Red. You follow the sergeant into the surf, onto the beach, and up into the dense jungle. You see one of your friends fall, shoot your first Jap, toss grenades at an underground enemy position, and finally reach the assembly point and dig in.

With the sergeant and two other men, you are sent out to scout ahead. About sixty yards away you find a Jap sentry, attempt an ambush, and the sergeant is bayoneted. While one of your men carries him back, you take over command and continue the patrol. You find a fortified area and see Japs preparing for an attack. You warn the company commander by portable radio.

The Japs discover and wound you. You try to cover your companion's escape, but he gets killed. In grim fury you empty your machine gun and throw your last grenade. You don't hear the Americans begin their attack, or the answer to the lieutenant's question when they find you.

THAT, IN BRIEF, is the action of Beach Red. It is the remarkable story of a single tense hour in the life of a soldier invading an enemy island . . . the record of sixty inexorable minutes of a little war, ten feet square.

It is a simple story of simple happenings and simple emotions . . . but its impact is terrific. No other book has ever told, as this does, just how war looks from a field no larger than a man can see . . . and just what happens in the timeless moment when a bullet strikes and some of the past, and part of the future, unrolls into the empty present.

➡ JOHN MARQUAND: "These are the materials that a soldier's thoughts are made of while he waits . . . Read in this light it is a remarkable piece of work, a sensitive and thrilling interpretation of the mind of a civilian who has become a soldier, and whose hopes and apprehensions have not been blurred by battle . . . It is a book that may set a new fashion in the future literature of the war."

"TWENTY-FOUR HUNTING AND FISHING PRINTS," by Honore Daumier. [Pantheon, $5.50.]

"FEMMES PARISIENNES, TWENTY-FOUR PRINTS," by Constantin Guys. [Pantheon, $12.]

"TWELVE COLORED DRAWINGS," by Toulouse-Lautrec. [Pantheon, $18.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle

If you are looking for the most distinctive possible present for a friend of taste, one of these superb portfolios should be the answer. The Daumier prints would amuse and astonish any sport-minded man, but they would also please any one with the smallest capacity for enjoying cartoons drawn with complete skill. There is a brilliant altercation between a hunter who has shot down a duck and the farmer on whose garden the duck has fallen. A wall separates the two, and while the hunter's dog howls, the farmer calmly and grimly thumbs his nose, while holding the duck in his hand.

As in all of Daumier, the faces of the people in the drawings are shrewdly, satirically, and exactly done. The drawing of a chinless man standing in a river fishing, with the rain pouring over his head and the river sloshing around his legs, while his pole dips like a shaft of rain and his face has all the cast of a religious fanatic whose faith has been given not to a church but to fishing is an example.

There is another drawing of two hunters, one on each side of a bush, both sneaking carefully closer to the bush with rifles ready, each obviously having heard the rustle of the other. If these characters were not obviously Frenchmen, any of the drawings could be located in this country, for the feelings of sportsmen toward their game [no pun intended] seems to be the same anywhere in the world.

The prints by Guys are all of Parisian women, with a few men incidentally within reach. They are women of all sorts—large and small and fat and lean and blank and bright. With some, they are not people, but the dresses they wear. The elaborate clothes they have put on to conceal their bodies have also concealed their personalities. But the truth may be that they had no personality to begin with, so that there was nothing at all to hide.

The reproductions from Lautrec are the finest I have ever seen in color. They have that marvelous power of expressing movement in the fewest lines. There may be only a half dozen hurriedly sketched lines, and yet there is the leaning figure of a woman, poised at an alert angle. The subjects are the cafe people of Paris, the habitual customers of the better places, dressed handsomely and with faces handsome in pleasure. The women, of course, are the ones you will look at time and time again, for their faces have a quickness of expression and an easily modeled mobility that make them attractive even when the features are harsh.

The prints are separate, and mounted, and would enrich any room in which they were hung. For they are not merely a record of Lautrec's observations among the gay men and women of Paris. They are splendid and exciting examples of drawing and of color, sad and savage, graceful and gay.

A book of magnificent photographs by Andreas Feininger—with an introduction in the inimitable prose of John Erskine. This is NEW YORK in all its brilliance—by day and by night—its people, its buildings, its streets, its foreign sections. A breath-takingly beautiful book, it provides a memorable panorama of the world's most famous city. A remarkable gift. $5.00

TITLE	SUBJECT	VERDICT
"THE CHRISTMAS WHALE," by Roger Duvoisin. [Knopf, $1.]	When the flu struck down Santa's reindeer things looked pretty bad for Christmas until the animals of his homeland got together and talked things over. They chose the whale to take the jolly little man and his important cargo around the world, and not a stocking was missed.	A humorous Santa story with gay pictures for the littlest ones.
"MR. NOSEY," by Arah Hooks. Illustrations by Esther Goetz. [Appleton-Century, $2.]	Mr. Nosey was a genial little gentleman with a smile that made everybody feel good, and a disposition that exactly matched the smile. When he lost it one day there was trouble indeed, until three good friends helped him find it again.	A joyous little tale with a lilt to it, and a lesson hidden under the laughs. Pictures by Esther Goetz are just exactly right for small readers.
"WHAT BIRD IS IT?" by Anna Pistorius. [Wilcox & Follett, $1.]	A colorful picture book containing pictures of some 23 common birds with a descriptive paragraph on each.	Attractive little book for use in a "guessing birds" game with bird names listed at end of book.

A Novelist Writes Some Short Tales

"STORIES FROM FAR AND NEAR," by Lion Feuchtwanger. [Viking Press, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

In a brief introductory note to this collection of his short stories, Feuchtwanger states that the various pieces here reprinted are not short stories at all "in the Anglo-Saxon sense, for none aims primarily at relating an anecdote." Rather, all are animated by a common purpose: to seize on that particular aspect of a subject—be it a personality or the tendency of a period—which permits of an over-all survey; to observe it at . . . the instant of fruition."

Lion Feuchtwanger

Now that is a noble purpose, whatever one may think about Anglo-Saxons and anecdotes; and it is a purpose more or less adequately, tho never remarkably, achieved in all these stories.

The subjects are mainly political. Some of the pieces are almost deliberately colorless, strangely dispassionate little fables; some are slightly warmer, personal accounts. But thruout the collection the dominant concern is obviously not "personality" but "the tendency of a period"; and the period is our own.

There are, however, a pair of historical narratives, one on Nero and one on Warren Hastings. There is a sharp, dry satire on American real estate promotion in the early years of this century. There is a fine little sketch of a bull fight.

The writing is always sly, understated, completely competent. It is impossible to read any story in the book without respect for both insight and craft. Yet respect is practically the limit of the response one can give. For despite genuine merit these stories seem pretty definitely minor work. They do not reveal Feuchtwanger's full strength. Their main importance may lie, indeed, in their indication of the range of an accomplished novelist when he makes his brief, occasional, always distinguished but faintly inconsequential excursions into the side roads of short fiction.

Biography of Dickens

A new biography of Charles Dickens by the British writer, Dame Una Pope-Hennessy, is on the Howell, Soskin spring list. It contains material on the novelist's relations with his wife and family which is suppressed or glossed over in John Forster's standard biography of Dickens.

"She wore a WAC uniform for three years. Imagine keeping all that a military secret." From "Mom, I'm Home" by Syd Hoff (published by Doubleday, Doran).

Two Sisters Grow Old in Frustration

"THE CHAPIN SISTERS," by Fynette Rowe. [Current Books, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

"The Chapin Sisters" might well be called the definitive study in frustration. This novel, winner of an Avery Hopwood award, gives a painfully clear portrait of two orphaned sisters who, forced by convention and economic necessity to live together, dragged out their spinster lives in a small town in upper New York state during the last century.

Fynette Rowe

Penelope at 19 was self-righteous and prim. The kiss the clerk at Apothecary's hall gave her against her will filled her with revulsion and she knew that "she would never marry now. She did not want to."

Charlotte, however, the younger by four years, as a young thing was flighty, full of fun, seeking to dazzle her academy beaux by secretly curling her hair with the poker from the furnace.

Her efforts at snaring a husband were unhappily fruitless and the years passed slowly for the uncongenial sisters in the musty old house inherited from an aunt.

Their activities seem unutterably drab and dull to a modern reader, impatient with their inability to wrest something from life. But the trivial concerns of their every day which took on vast importance and the increasing friction and final mutual hatred which the long years bred in them are described so skilfully, with such crystal clarity, that one reads with fascinated interest from the quiet start to the surprisingly melodramatic ending.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

ONE of the season's most amusing literary visitors was Dr. Oliver St. John Gogarty. . . . He was in town for a few days unofficially, but made an informal public appearance at a luncheon arranged by Marion Strobel Mitchell, co-editor of Poetry magazine, and Mrs. Augustine Bowe, who heads the committee which sponsors the series of brilliant talks on the fine arts which annually make the Poetry magazine lecture series one of the most popular of the year.

Dr. Gogarty was one of last season's speakers and sent his audience home filled with Gaelic glee. . . . The other day he was at his caustic best, calling Dublin, the city about which he wrote so amusingly in "As I Was Going Down Sackville Street," "a bitter, sweet city" where "groups of people enjoyed the fact that they had nothing to do but talk." . . . He said that the "second religion of Ireland is the worship of the horse," and in telling a story about one of the most vocal adherents of that religion he characterized a horsey gentleman, having a booster at the Dolphin, as one who "implements his chin by a fly collar which allows his neck to help."

The only word of Gaelic which is generally known in Ireland, Dr. Gogarty said ironically, is the word "and." . . . "It is hard to conversate in conjunctives," he wryly suggested. . . . He spoke of the Irish literary renaissance saying, "There are 500 small dramatic societies and choirs in Ireland. . . . The whole country breaks into song and the drama. . . . Yeats and Synge would be happy to see done what they had tried to do."

Dr. Gogarty's new book "Mr. Petunia" was promised for early November publication by Creative Age press, but thus far your Spotlighter has not seen it. . . . It's a novel about Virginia in the 1820s [Virginia, U. S. A.]. Dr. Gogarty has been in this country for six years. . . . Bookies, jockeys, fortune hunters, wealthy plantation owners people the book, I hear, and it sparkles with the characteristic Gogarty wit.

Dr. Gogarty is immortalized in modern literature as Buck Mulligan in James Joyce's "Ulysses" . . . he and Joyce were fellow students at the National university . . . about his presence thus in "Ulysses" Dr. Gogarty once wrote "I am the only figure in 'Ulysses' who swims, shaves, washes his neck and brushes his teeth." . . . Dr. Gogarty's last address in Dublin was in Ely place, the little cul de sac street where George Moore lived when he wrote "Hail and Farewell" which shocked his countrymen but he had already given them a terrible jolt by painting his front door green.

My nomination for the world's most hilarious and in many ways most tender tribute to a parent is Elisabeth Cobb's book about her father, the late Irvin S. Cobb. . . . "Buff," or "Buffy," as her friends all call her, is herself as irrepressibly funny as was her father, "my wayward parent."

Irvin Cobb was the sort of person to whom everything happened and nobody ever forgot, and Buffy is the same magnet of interest. . . . I remember the first time I ever saw her, at a fabulous party given by Messmore Kendall in his apartment on top of a midtown New York theater. . . . I was feeling like a little girl from the country taken to the party by the publisher, Stanley Rinehart, who in those days was one of New York's most glamorous semi-bachelors. He had been divorced from Mary Doran, the daughter of the great publisher, George Doran, and had not yet married the charming English girl, Faye Yeatman, whose brother, R. J. Yeatman, incidentally, was co-author of the funniest of all razzing books about English history, "1066 and All That," a literary sensation. . . . I was standing beside Stanley Rinehart and talking to Tommy Hitchcock, the famous polo player, when Buffy Cobb came up, dazzlingly gowned and talking exactly as if F. Scott Fitzgerald had written her lines. . . . I had no idea who she was and in the fashion of such parties no one took the trouble to say more than "You know Buffy." . . . She completely fascinated me, but it wasn't until the evening was almost over that I realized why she seemed vaguely familiar to me. . . . She was a chic, slender feminine carbon copy of her irresistible father.

BAD MEN OF DELIGHT

By FREDERICK R. BECHDOLT

(Copyright: 1945: Frederick R. Bechdolt)

INSTALMENT IX.

WHEN William Wash departed from the Antelope Mesa stage station in the manager's roadster with Barbara on the seat beside him, the constable of Delight acted promptly. He ran out thru the front door and he fired seven shots at the receding tail light. This done, he reloaded his weapon from his cartridge studded belt and returned to the lounge. After the entire affair was over there were critical souls who called attention to the fact that, at the moment, his own car had been ready for pursuit. It was their contention that he hadn't taken it because that was the logical thing to do, and when it came to dealing with emergencies, his habit was to use logic as a point of departure.

His name was Ira T. Strunk and, if it hadn't been for the national lawn mowing competition, it probably would have remained thus. But when the back east editor had gotten hold of him, he had signed himself I. Thomas Strunk and the fatal lure of publicity had sidetracked him from the ways of common sense. Ever since the company which controled the civic affairs of Delight had procured his appointment as a peace officer, he had assiduously devoted his energies to the study of famous criminal cases. And on this, his first opportunity to regain a place in the spotlight, it simply hadn't occurred to him to set forth alone after the man who had held him up, because he had thought of a more spectacular procedure.

While the tail light of the manager's car was fading out of sight at the rate of 50-odd miles an hour, the spectators in the lounge witnessed another wild west act which gave them something to talk about for weeks afterward, and the manager of the Antelope Mesa stage station saw his last hopes of hushing up this affair depart as I. Thomas Strunk took the floor and sounded off.

Excepting for several women whose voices hadn't risen above a whisper not a soul in the lounge was saying a word when the fat man in the blue uniform, with the big star on his chest and the big revolver tucked back in its holster by his thigh, confronted them. The youngest of the men was well along in his middle age. Most of them wore glasses and false teeth, and all of them were prudent souls. The thing which they had seen was swift and it was bewildering, but they were hard headed men who abided by the law, and the law had been outraged before their eyes. In accordance with their various natures, anger was taking hold of them.

The voice of I. Thomas Strunk was resonant. He said:

"Men, there has been a murder committed here this evening, and the woman who is suspected of the crime is escaping in that car. I dunno how many are in this plot to get her away, but I am going after her and I need help. In the name of the law, I'm calling for a posse." He raised him arm and he pointed a plump index finger: "I want you—and you, and you——"

He numbered five of them and there was a brief interval while the only sound in the room was a low groan. It came from the manager, and his eyes had the haunted look which a man's eyes have when he is struggling to awaken from a nightmare.

Then the silence was further broken by the voices of women, voices raised in protestation, in adjuration, in advice, and every one of them addressed to a husband.

"You can't go away and leave me here——" "Run up to the cabin and get your hat——" "Now, Will, remember what I told you——"

The five selectees advanced to the front of the long room and, when they came to a halt one of them spoke. He was a bald headed man, the same retired farmer whom Barbara had overheard when he pointed out Bill Pope to his wife. He said,

"Now, officer, seems to me we would look kind of foolish—if we was to catch up with them, and you the only man with a weapon bigger'n a jackknife."

A murmur of assent greeted his proposition. I. Thomas Strunk looked blank for a bare moment. Then his face cleared. He turned to the manager. He said,

"There's the stand of rifles that the company left here when the mines shut down. Get five of 'em, Harry, and cartridges." The manager departed with the same amount of enthusiasm as a whipped dog. Several more minutes passed before he returned, laden with the rifles.

"How," a voice demanded, "are we going to catch up with 'em now they're out of sight?"

The stillness which followed was shattered when a woman spoke to her neighbor:

"And this," she said, "is what we pay our taxes for!"

There is something uninspiring about a fat man. And there is something in the appearance of a fat man, decked out in uniform and lethal hardware, which invites mirth. In the role of a leader, he has, as the saying goes, two strikes on him from the start, a handicap which only the true qualities of leadership can overcome. Fortunately for his own prestige, I. Thomas Strunk had acquired a thick skin, and, at the moment while laughter was imminent, he was the only person in the room who wasn't aware of the fact. He went on about his business with the calmness of one who is sure that he has the situation in hand. He said:

"Give each man a rifle, Harry, and if there's any who don't know how to load it, show him."

Of the five there were two who had handled repeating firearms of late model. With them, as with the other three, the weight of deadly metal wrought a change as soon as they felt it in their hands, and the emotion which possessed them then grew stronger while they were slipping the cartridges into the magazines. When the last bungler had finished without shooting his neighbor, every man of them had lost his sense of humor. The idea of a leader who looked as if he had come out of a comic strip had been erased by a universal itch which assailed five trigger fingers. And there wasn't a soul among them who perceived any semblance to a joke in the spectacle of six heavily armed citizens preparing to pursue one Apache and a girl.

There is no telling how long this substitute for team work might have endured if it hadn't been for an interruption. As might have been expected, it came from the so-called frailer sex, whose tendency to disillusion their menfolk is as old as history. The possemen were trooping toward the entrance of the lounge with I. Thomas Strunk in the lead, and the women were gathered before the desk to see them off, when the elderly wife of a retired veterinary surgeon spoke up:

"Now, Charley Biddle, you be careful." It would have gotten by without provoking more than a smile or two if she hadn't added, in an audible aside, "He don't know one end of that gun from the other." And, as might have been expected, the ladies led the laughter which broke the spell.

The town marshal marched straight on. The others straggled after him. Two of them were guying the former horse doctor, and as they approached the waiting car he turned on them in wrath. The remaining pair lingered to the bickering. I. Thomas Strunk inserted his large body beneath the steering wheel and became aware that the enthusiasm of his manhunters was ebbing.

"Snap into it, men," he bade them. "This ain't a joke. We are——"

The voice of the original dissenter drowned his.

"I am asking you, constable, how do you figure on catching that car when you don't know where it went?"

For the next few minutes suggestions and counter-suggestions were mingling like a half dozen radio stations contending on overlapping wave lengths.

"He was headed for town——" "There's three side roads——" "Okay. Which one——" "What I want to know——" "You said it, brother——" "Where do we go from here?"

They had leaped upon the heckler's question with the avidity of a pack of bewildered hounds seeking a faint scent. I. Thomas Strunk was the only silent one among them. He was sitting with both plump hands upon the steering wheel, looking mildly dazed, when the glare of headlamps swept around the corner of the building.

Bill Pope's roadster came to a stop with its bumper inches from the bumper of the town marshal's sedan. In the sudden hush that followed, the driver let the door swing open and stepped out. Of those present, he was the only one who looked undisturbed. As he stood there, stroking one side of his drooping white mustache, a murmur of admiration arose from the women who were watching thru the open doorway of the lounge. It was audible above the idling of the motors.

Bill Pope's eyes lingered briefly on the town marshal's sedan. They passed over the five men in the road with rifles in their hands. In those few moments while the meaning of the situation dawned on him, he was thinking of Vilas, he was wishing that he had taken advantage of the opportunity which had come—and gone—when he had entered the inner room of the big house. He was thinking that, if he had done that, he would be on his way at this moment with several hundred thousand dollars in his possession. He did not miss the meaning of those rifles. He was cursing himself for having allowed Vilas to talk him into this, but he had never looked less disturbed than he did when he spoke up.

"What's going on here?" Several voices started to inform him and he raised a hand to silence them. "Easy men. One at a time." He nodded to the fat man. "Whar's your prisoner, Tom?"

His appearance of placidity remained unmarred while he listened to the story.

"William Wash," he repeated the name thoughtfully. "And he did it with yo'r sawed-off shotgun." His slow thoughts were exploring for some reason which would tie up the Apache with Barbara. Like all the other inhabitants of Delight, he was familiar with the old affair of the tequila smugglers, but he probably would not have recalled it if he hadn't remembered how he had followed Harvey and Barbara thru town during the afternoon. It looked as if he might have a good bet here and he needed one badly now. He said:

"The hoss ranch, Tom. That's where they're heading for. Harvey Furlcng's place. The first dirt road that turns off to the left. You boys go on ahead. I'll follow."

He backed his car aside to let the sedan pass and he allowed a long start before he set forth. The byroad of which he had spoken was at the other end of town, and at this hour, excepting for the Antelope Mesa stage station, there were not half a dozen lighted windows in Delight. It happened that Harvey Furlong was standing at one of these. He heard the two cars passing and he watched their rapidly receding tail lights without the slightest curiosity.

And at the moment while his eyes followed the little speck of red light on the rear of the roadster, Bill Pope was handling its steering wheel automatically, his eyes were on the road but his mind was not with them. For it had come to him during the last few minutes, that if the men in the car ahead of him laid hold of Barbara, it wasn't going to be as if he had the manager and the town marshal to deal with. These hard headed farmers had their own ideas about the law and he wouldn't stand a chance of talking them into turning her over to him.

It was up to him to find her before they did. He had tried to produce a fatal "accident" twice during the afternoon. Maybe it would work the next time.

William Wash and Barbara didn't make the horse ranch. But old Jim Curry was on hand to meet them where mischance stopped them within a few miles of their refuge. He was waiting at the Agua Fria without the remotest suspicion that they were going to join him here.

In the clean dry air of the Arizona border you could see a pair of headlights 30 miles away. The pool which the white men had called Agua Fria ever since the first venturesome Spaniards had ridden up out of Old Mexico in search of cities with gold paved streets, was enfolded in the lower foothills with the wide reaches of the valley spread out beneath it like an enormous map, blurred in the half light of the moon. The lamps of the car which William Wash was driving were visible a long time before it arrived, but Jim Curry's back was turned upon the lowlands and he was not aware of their approach.

Agua Fria means "cold water," and, in this land where living water used to be more precious than food, the pool had been a meeting place of men during the old days. Red men and white, bad men and peaceable citizens. Some had crawled here on their hands and knees, and some had come with weapons in their hands.

The beat of footfalls on city pavements is a long roll which lasts around the clock, and few of the thousands remember any of the faces which they have passed on a street corner. In this spot every meeting had left a memory. It had been a landmark in the lives of many men. The clumps of sacaton which whispered to the night wind had witnessed beginnings and renewals of friendships. They had been stained with fresh blood.

But in these latter days the dirt road which twined up from the flats to Harvey Furlong's horse ranch was traveled by modern cars, and many of the drivers who sped past weren't even aware of the waterhole. If it had not been for some trick of the ever-shifting air where the freckled hills reached down toward the level valley floor, its memory might not have lingered with Jim Curry tonight. He had gone straight to bed after Harvey had left him at the ranch house. He had been lying there for a long time, and the cool, fresh smell of water and damp earth which had drifted down to the speeding car had stayed with him in the silent room. Until at last he had thrown the covers from him, for the memory which that whiff of air had brought was as real as if the years had slipped away and he was young again.

The two Mexican vaqueros were sound asleep in the bunkhouse when he went to the corral. There was no traveler abroad to see him as he came down the winding road, a little old man in a tailored suit and a Panama hat, riding a young horse, with his knees bent slightly to the heavy wooden stirrups, sitting deep in the big stock saddle, and his heart in tune with every quiver of the horse, leaping with every lawless cat hop in as perfect unison as if age had not gentled him, as if his own reckless rebellion against restraint had never been broken.

Now the gelding was tied to a scrub oak a little way down the draw, and Jim Curry was standing between the tawny hills which enfolded the Agua Fria. He was standing behind a pin oak. It was an old tree and it had grown slowly, so its trunk was not much larger than it had been on that other evening when he had stood behind it. Its bark was checked with cracks, and by looking closely he discovered the furrows which two leaden slugs had ploughed. As he passed his fingertips over them caressingly, in a surge of affection for the boy he had been when they were made, the smell of the water came again from the pool, the present went away and he became that boy once more. The pool was as large as a small room, and it was deep. The water had seeped down thru fissures of the granite and it was so nearly transparent that even in the moonlight he could see the irregularities of the naked rock on the bottom. He was on the downhill side and on the other side, above the pool, the hills drew closer to each other. Two pinnacles of granite stood in the narrow space between them.

Jim Curry walked to the pool. He dropped on his hands and knees and he lowered his lips to the cool water. It was in this manner that he had been drinking on that long ago evening when the shooting had begun. So now he drank again, but briefly, and sprang to his feet. Then he walked back to the oak tree. He did it as an actor does when he is going thru the business of his part for the first time, doing it slowly in order to fix all its details in his mind. But this was not a rehearsal. The act had been finished for many years and it had been the turning point of his life.

The headlights of the car which was bringing Barbara to him were two pin-points midway across the flat. They were growing brighter every moment. Jim Curry did not turn toward them. The spot where he was standing was as the fork of a road, and his life was the road. He never gave a thought to what might have come to him during the intervening years if chance had steered him into the other fork. He was living over the past as it had been.

In those years before the fences, when the harsh code of man to man combat still endured in many places, luck had played a large part in deciding things. Good men went bad sometimes, and it sometimes happened that bad men were endowed with the respectability which comes with power. As far as morals were concerned, most of them were alike, rowdies who lived roughly, stuck by their friends and faced the issues without flinching. Jim Curry knew little of the origin of the neighborhood feud and less about its ethical aspects—if there had been any such. It happened that he was on the side which had lost the last county election, and, for that reason, he was, as the saying went, "short" in this part of Arizona.

The slug which had been meant for him splashed water in his face. He never did know just how he got behind this pin oak or how many other shots were fired at him before he reached its shelter. It wasn't a big tree and twice the particles of flying bark stung his face. The hot reek of black powder fumes was in his nostrils.

There was a man behind each of the rocks above the spring, and they were taking turn about. He waited until a revolver flashed. He swung the muzzle of his six shooter to the other rock in time to pull the trigger when the blur of a head and shoulder and an arm appeared beside it in the moonlight. He heard the scrape of feet among the rubble and he knew that he had got one man. The other fled and Jim caught sight of him for an instant skylined upon the nearest ridge, but missed. And that was all there was to it—excepting consequences.

For the man whom he had killed was wearing a star. Jim Curry had been "short" before. Now there was a reward out for him.

While Jim Curry was reliving in memory the critical time of his life two more pairs of headlights had appeared down on the flat. They were so far away that there were intervals when they did not seem to move. The lamps of the car which had first appeared were growing larger and every swerve they took with the windings of the road was visible from the waterhole. It was a rough road and William Wash was handling the steering wheel with the apparent recklessness of old desert drivers. Occasionally he straightened out one of the curves by cutting across the untracked segment, and the car tossed like a small craft in a heavy sea. Neither he nor the girl beside him had said a word since they had left Delight.

What Has Gone Before

Barbara Curry is herding sheep in the Utah uplands, struggling to prevent foreclosure of the ranch her father left her. A stranger, a soldier on leave, brings news that she has a benefactor who arranged with him to open an account for her at the local bank. She is to visit Delight to meet her benefactor. About to board a stage for Delight, she is thrilled to have pointed out to her a famous western character, Bill Pope. Bill is sitting in a chauffeur-driven sedan beside a man in a wheel chair. The man recognizes a woman wearing blue slacks and about to enter the stage and orders Pope to follow her and get rid of her. A flash flood engulfs the stage. Pope mistakes Barbara for the woman and attempts to drown her. Harvey Furlong, the stranger, rescues her. As he shows her the town a bullet barely misses her. Pope explains the bullet as a Mexican's careless shot. Harvey arranges for Barbara to stay at the stage station and meet Jim Curry, Barbara's grandfather, formerly known as Brazos. Pope reports to Vilas at the big house on the ridge. An invalid only in public, Vilas follows Martin, his chauffeur. He overhears Leola Burke tell Martin that she and other victims of Vilas are going to seize his fortune. Vilas kills Martin and, believing he is implicating Leola, puts the body in Barbara's cabin. Terrified at finding the body, Barbara, remembering Pope's offer of aid, rushes off toward the house on the ridge. Falling, she cuts her head. William Wash, Harvey's loyal friend, carries her off in a stolen car. Vilas and Pope plan to double-cross each other. Vilas orders Pope to bring the girl to his house.

IS THERE a dyed-in-the-wool mystery fan anywhere who would not leap at the opportunity to get four great new, selected mystery novels each month? And on a four-for-one basis?

How much time, trouble, and money have you wasted on mystery novels that were not worth the reading? Haven't you always wished you could employ a staff of experts to read them all, and pick out only the very finest for you?

Well, here is your chance of a lifetime. The new Unicorn Mystery Book Club brings you four new, top-notch mystery novels each month—bound in one, big, handsome volume—guaranteed to cost you at least $8.00 if bought separately—at only $2.00 in all to club members.

And, best of all, you join on a trial basis! YOU ARE PERMITTED TO RESIGN FROM THE CLUB AT ANY TIME!

HERE IS THE WAY THE CLUB OPERATES

Every working day of the month our reading staff—composed of mystery fans just like you—sits down with stacks of mystery novels submitted to us by publishers all over the country. They read all day long, and they classify, grade, select and reject. Every single mystery novel recommended by the critics and by a reputable publisher is actually read. The only rule we enforce, in order to protect our members, is that no novel is considered which has previously been sold at less than $2.00.

The novel need not be brand-new so long as it is comparatively recent, nor do we bar an exceptional novel that has been serialized in a magazine. But one thing we absolutely insist on—the genuine eight-dollar monthly value to our club members. We assure you that the novels selected are really choice, and we guarantee that you cannot buy them for less than two dollars apiece, or eight dollars in all—except through the club.

FOUR BEST MYSTERIES EACH MONTH

Each month, after stacks of submitted novels have been read, we select the four best of the lot, bind them together, complete and unabridged, not a word omitted, in one big beautiful 900-page book that we send to you. Yes, a real book, specially printed from the original plates, handsomely cloth-bound, and fit for a permanent place in your library.

See what time, money, and trouble you save! You no longer buy blindly, merely hoping you will get your money's worth. Our trained staff weeds out all the second-raters, chooses among the best, selects only the finest. Each month your postman hands the resulting volume to you, without fuss or feathers—and you are ready for more weeks of reading enjoyment.

Look to the panels at the left, telling about the novels selected for this month. See for yourself the kind of mystery novel you can expect to receive, the titles, authors and the raves of the critics. Yes, just read what the critics have said about our selections, and then we dare you not to join. A real mystery fan would pay many times the club price and know he was getting a bargain.

NO OBLIGATION TO CONTINUE—YOU CAN RESIGN AT ANY TIME

If you join now we send you the four novels described at the left, complete, and bound in one handsome volume. With the volume you receive a bill for $2.00 plus 15¢ mailing cost, which you pay in five days. And each month thereafter you receive four new mystery novels in the same way, with the same guarantee, and at the same cost.

But note this! You can resign from the club at any time at all! You are under no obligation to buy four books a year, or eight books a year, or twelve books a year, or any books at all. Any time you want to resign from the club you drop us a line saying so and that is all. You are never under obligation to continue as a member.

DON'T WAIT OR HESITATE

Well, what more can we tell you—except of course to urge you to get in on a good thing now, while you can. If you delay at all, you may find your name only on a waiting list, because we are presently limiting membership to a comparative few—only 10,000 volumes a month, which is a mere drop in the bucket compared with the potential demand.

So we urge you—don't hesitate. If the four mystery novels in your first volume do not live up to expectations—then resign. You have that right at all times.

DELUXE EDITION IF YOU DESIRE

Some people insist on exceptionally rich bindings for their bookshelves, and to satisfy them we have designed a really handsome Deluxe Edition for which we charge 50¢ extra a volume.

Make no mistake. The $2.00 Regular Edition is very good-looking, and the contents of course are exactly the same as in the $2.50 Deluxe Edition.

If you wish, however, you may have the Deluxe Edition, which is bound in a fine, linen-weave cloth, stamped in genuine gold and two colors, with tinted page tops, head and tailbands, and decorative end-papers. The design is especially worked out to make a luxurious set for your library.

Suit yourself on your choice of editions, but be sure to indicate on the Application Form at the left the edition you wish. And do it now!

NEWS FOR HOMEMAKERS

Story Teller Will Entertain Literary Club

By Irene Steyskal

Already the town brims with the gayety of Christmas. Presaging the happiest holiday season in many a year, scores of clubs this week are holding parties and programs in halls festive with Yuletide music, bright with the glow of colored lights, fresh with the smell of pine and fir brought in from the north woods.

High in the gray shaft of the 333 N. Michigan av. building, in the Tavern club's Love Thru the Ages room, where wide windows command an Olympian view of sky touching towers to the north and horizon broad lake to the east, Caxton club members will gather at the noon hour Saturday about their traditional bowl of foaming eggnog bedded in a holly wreath. Bibliophiles, collectors of American folklore, to the Caxtonites their holiday gathering is a special occasion for the spinning of good yarns.

There will be a master story teller with them this year—Julian Lee Rayford, novelist and artist, who has been in the Southwest Pacific as a USO entertainer. Thousands of service men on strange islands half a world away have listened to his lusty tales of the homeland's heroes—Davey Crockett, Pecos Bill, and hosts of others, real and legendary.

"Judy" Rayford has combed the frontiers for native folklore and ballads. He is an authority on the Paul Bunyan legends. The Caxtonites will hear some tall tales of the fabulous woodsman newly collected by Mr. Rayford and presented for the first time.

Another program participant in the Caxton "revels" will be Wallace Bruce Amsbary, the poet, who delighted the group with readings at last year's party. His contribution Saturday will be an interpretation of "Three Outlaws," a "Pretty Pierre" story from Sir Gilbert Parker's "Pierre and His People."

Meetings of several other literary groups have special, if not holiday, interest this week. The Catholic Poetry society's Chicago branch is to have the noted Dominican, Father Thomas Gilby, as its guest speaker at an 8 o'clock meeting tomorrow night in the Alliance Francaise suite in the Fine Arts building. Father Gilby has been serving since 1939 as a chaplain in the British navy, first with the battle cruiser squadron in the North sea, later in the western Mediterranean with the force that included the Renown and Ark Royal, then with the home fleet destroyers in the Arctic, and finally with the marine landing group in the Levant, Sicily, and Italy.

A committee member of the Catholic Psychological society and of the Aquinas society, Father Gilby formerly was professor of speculative morals and lector of sacred theology at Blackfriars, the Dominican house at Oxford. He is

Chicago Takes Air of World Capital with Ease

By Thalia

Whether or not Chicago becomes the capital of the united nations organization as a result of Mayor Kelly's recent "Chicago" flight, our town takes on the air of a diplomatic capital with ease. When Henri Bonnet, the French ambassador, recently returned from a short visit to France his first public address was given in Chicago—at a dinner given jointly by the Chicago chapter of France Forever and the Chicago chapter of American Relief for France. Mrs. Walter Brewster, president of France Forever, said that the society was celebrating that evening almost exactly the fifth anniversary of its founding. American Relief for France, with Mrs. Walter Kirk and Louis H. G. Bouscaren as co-chairmen, was celebrating almost exactly its fifth month of good works.

That evening the Casino was so filled with tables and formally gowned diners that none but thin waiters could ply their trade. One ingenious guest suggested that every one be led, like the violin section of an orchestra, to eat and breathe in unison. In honor of the traditional gourmet sensibilities of the French, handsomely prepared pheasant was the piece de resistance with a still burgundy to give it zest. The burgundy, however, was from California, not from the valley of the Saone.

Mr. Bousacaren was master of ceremonies. He introduced Mrs. Brewster, who explained the function of France Forever, which during the five years of France's tragedy has had the double task of keeping America informed about the French and the French in contact with their American friends, no mean assignment during the years when all communication was perilous. Mrs. Brewster's organization is, she said, coöperating whole heartedly with the newly organized Chicago chapter of American Relief for France whose work was explained briefly by Mrs. Walter Kirk.

The Chicago chapter, already the second largest in America, is shipping thousands of tons of new and

Gala Season Under Way at Palm Springs

Out Palm Springs way the winter season has been officially opened and is in full swing for the many home owners who have come west to spend the entire season. The seasoned desert visitors will be happily surprised to find their gardens and parkways a mass of blooming desert verbena. The colorful blooms came early this year.

PALM SPRINGS, CAL.

Palm Springs once more is swinging into its long list of pre-war festivities, which have made the winter playground such an active spot. Highlight of the coming attractions is the scheduling of the nationally famous Circus week, which is set around Easter time.

Altho that event is in the future, a number of gala parties are taking place now. When the exclusive Tennis club opened last month, Mrs. Glen T. Hoffman was present to greet old friends. Mrs. Hoffman, who occupies her desert home thru the winter, arrived in Palm Springs in mid-November.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Armstrong, 1500 Lake Shore dr., have been packing lightweight clothes as they expect to arrive in Palm Springs this week to celebrate Christmas in their beautiful winter estate. They probably will be joined over the holiday by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Armstrong, and their children.

Ernest Alschuler arrived recently from Evanston, Ill., to join his wife who went west earlier to open their home. Mrs. Jane Arkin accompanied Mrs. Alschuler west.

Arriving with Mr. Alschuler was Graham Davis of the Kellogg Foundation, who will study plans for a community hospital in Palm Springs. This great civic project is one which owes much of its success to the untiring work of Mr. Alschuler.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Sachs arrived Nov. 29 at La Paz guest ranch to celebrate Christmas in the desert heat.

Making plans to travel westward early in January are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Adams, who will spend a three week holiday at La Paz.

Another Chicagoan who is becoming quite a favorite in Palm Springs is Mrs. Addison Hoof, who arrived here last week. She joined her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Zook, who spent most of the summer here.

Lt. Comdr. and Mrs. John P. Quinn were early season guests at the resort. J. R. Whitehead, who gives Chicago as his address, had a short stay out this way the end of October. Friends say Mrs. Perry R. Johnson is to arrive at the springs early this month.

Fresh from the Hills. . . . . Ozark Dolls

By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

WHEN winter ends and you come to the Ozarks to greet the most beautiful spring you have ever seen, be sure to bring along a good sized empty box. You will need it for those dolls you will buy in the Ozarks. Don't say you don't expect to buy any dolls, that you have always left that for those folks you meet at hobby shows. I still say, bring that box! Doll collecting will hit you like love at first sight, or measles, when you get to the Ozarks, because the little figures will actually look like the people you are seeing on every hand.

Of course there are slight exaggerations. In most instances, the dolls have bigger feet and funnier noses, but the clothes made by patient painstaking fingers are scraps of garments worn by the doll maker and her family. As I look over my Ozark dolls, acquired after I had vowed that doll collecting was the silliest of hobbies, it seems that I am looking over a group of people in almost any small town in the hills. Even hill people note the resemblance. Soon after I had bought my first carved dolls and set them proudly on the living room table, Aunt Lizzie came in. She looked them over and pointed to the one with the basket and the grim-lipped expression.

"I reckon that there un's me," she said.

At that moment, I became a collector of Ozark dolls, and it has been a joy to discover and study the ingenuity of the women who make them. Their ability to "make do" is a genuine inspiration. In doll making, as in sewing or cooking, one hears the time-worn explanation: "I used what I had." Then when you see what they have contrived from the meager supplies they possessed, your respect and admiration for Ozark women will probably grow right along with your doll collection.

For instance, you probably won't believe that a doll can be made of a six inch piece of corncob, a grain of popcorn, a slice of plywood and a scrap of pink calico. But you will believe it when you see the corncob dolls at the Grapevine shop at Branson, Mo. There they are, body of corncob, plywood feet, pink sunbonnet and dress, eyes and mouth inked on a circle of cob, and for a nose, that grain of popcorn!

At many places in the hills, you will find dolls with hickory nut heads, dressed like men and women in calico and woolens and with cotton or wool for hair. The late Marie Russell, of Winslow, who wrote Grandma's Thinkin' Book, was probably the first to commercialize the idea of making dolls with wooden bodies and hickory nut heads. Long ago, another Ozark mother who had to do with what she had, originated the hickory nut head idea. You can see the doll she made . . . a slim little old lady dressed in rusty black and threadbare apron. After 85 troubled years, the little doll has come to rest in the Albert Pike museum, near Winslow, Ark. The only difference is that the nut is attached to the soft little cloth body by a sort of hood arrangement, while the modern makers of hickory nut dolls attach the head to a wooden body.

In the hands of "Aunt Jo" Bambach, of Rogers, Ark., hickory nut dolls have reached a new high in artistry. Aunt Jo has concentrated on five characters, Grandpa and Grandma, Mammy and Uncle Joe, and Dixie Dan, the band leader. Once Dixie Dan had a girl friend.

"But," says Mrs. Bambach, "she looked so hard I quit making her." So you'll have to take a bachelor Dixie Dan, in orange tail coat, striped trousers, lavender shirt, red polka dot tie and a baton that was a tiny spirea branch last spring. His head, like the head of each Bambach doll, is a dark hickory nut, painted with wide red mouth and eyes with glowing whites.

The clothes of all Mrs. Bambach's dolls are meticulously tailored, with flawless fit. That isn't easy, when one is making sleeves 1½ inches long. Mrs. Bambach achieves such perfection by adhering to pattern. An outline for every doll body is drawn on the wood before it is put into the jig saw, and there are patterns for even the tiniest collar or shawl. In clothes so small, a variation of an eighth of an inch would cause the garment to fit badly. For years, Mrs. Bambach sewed real baby buttons on the tiny dresses and shirts, but after buttons became hard to get, she began using French knots.

Getting the hickory nut heads is no small job, even tho a great many hickory trees grow in the Ozark mountains. No two hickory nuts are alike. Therefore, to find a hundred nuts with pointed stem ends that will make perky little noses, the Bambachs must search thru thousands of nuts. Size, too, must be right, and different trees yield nuts of different size. Just when the Bambachs have found a tree with "head size" fruit, Mother Nature plays a trick. She rests that tree for a year, and there's nary a nut when the Bambachs come.

A few years ago, the searcher for character dolls could find choice carved dolls, with head and body all in one perfectly proportioned unit. Many boys of the hills found it both profitable and pleasant to take up their jackknives and whittle out straight noses and firm strong chins. When their sisters had dressed the little figures in calico dresses or baggy-knee woolen pants, there were Grandma and Grandpa come to the life. More recently, those boys have had serious business in all parts of the world, and the girls have been driving trucks and plowing fields instead of doing fancy sewing. Carved dolls may be more plentiful when the boys get home again and can sit in the sunshine whittling the hours away.

At the Grapevine shop at Branson, Mrs. Mariette Bate generously shares the credit for her unusual character dolls with her daughter, Orpha, but Orpha says her mother is the family genius. You won't care about credit. You will just realize that your last remnant of resistance to doll buying has melted away like the morning frost. Those Bate dolls have a charm all their own. And with good reason! As Mrs. Bate displays them, I often wonder if she isn't afraid some one will pick her up and carry her off along with some of her creations, for she is as characterful as any doll turned out by her artistic hands. And not much larger!

Here again, the ingenuity of the Ozark dollmaker is shown in every tiny figure. For one series of dolls she uses whole dried apples for the heads. The apples are dyed by a secret process, which takes about four months, and during that time the features are molded right into the brown wrinkled surface.

The way in which the bodies are made is another secret, which I might learn if I tore one of my dried apple dolls apart. But just buy one of your own and tear it apart if you are curious! I've had Grandma and Grandpa for several years, and I would sorely miss either one of them. The tiny white teeth showing in Grandma's brown wrinkled old face are white beads from a baby necklace, and her glistening eyes are shiny black beads. Grandpa has a felt hat, wool vest, brown corduroy trousers, and his brown face is wreathed with white wool whiskers and flowing white hair.

As Mrs. Bate claims, the apples are practically imperishable. They do not rot nor mould, but poor Grandpa was really blitzed when a mouse got into the farmhouse and nibbled off the old gentleman's dried apple cheek. Mrs. Bate is not limited to apples for her doll heads. She also makes hickory nut dolls, and bright little fellows with glistening black buckeyes for heads. Acorns, walnuts and English walnuts are also used when the mood strikes her. Her corncob dolls are primitive works of art, and just to prove that all is grist that comes to a dollmaker's mill, Mrs. Bate makes dolls with heads of dried turnips or lemons. The lemon, in her skilled fingers, takes on a rich mahogany shade that is just right for a Mexican Indian maiden. And altho neither Mrs. Bate nor I ever saw a Mexican Indian girl, we think the costume she made for the lemon doll is terrific.

Several dolls made by Mrs. Lucy Barrons, of Huntsville, Ark., are my pride and joy. According to the tag on the wrist of one doll, she is "Aunt Judy, a pleasant old lady who has worked very hard and now sits and smokes thru lonesome hours." Aunt Judy is entirely of cloth, with a seam running down the middle of her face to provide a beaklike nose and pointed chin that almost meet. Wrinkles are cunningly sewed into the face to give a look of toothless age, and the hands have wee fingers. The body is stuffed in a way that leaves freely moving hinges, so Aunt Judy can sit in barefoot comfort in a small string-bottom chair, clenching a pipe between her toothless gums. Her blue calico Mother Hubbard, the checked apron, black sunbonnet and flannel shawl are so true to life, I always feel a little guilty if the table beneath her bare cloth feet is a trifle dusty. In real life, Aunt Judy would have the sort of floor you "could eat off of," as we say in the hills.

From the same gifted hands came the Feudin' McCoys. One of these is a gal in a pink dress and sunbonnet, with a homemade broom in her hands. The other is a black mustached gent with the round tag of a miniature tobacco pouch dribbling from the breast pocket of his overalls. In his hand, Mr. McCoy carries a shiny knife, made of a sliver from a sardine can.

You will find these Ozark dolls in roadside eating places, local gift shops and cabin camps all thru the hills. They are not expensive. For real play dolls, which you can take home to your small girl, you may stop at the Art Gallery on route 71 below Winslow, Ark. There you can find soft cuddly stocking dolls, with sunbonnets and feed sack dresses. And you'll also find that ghastly freak, the reversible doll with Topsy as one end and Eva at the other. For other unique dolls, you must know where to look! For instance, Mrs. Clark of Eureka Springs sells her dolls at home. She makes beautiful platinum blonde dolls. The wigs come from an Angora goat which Mrs. Clark keeps, and believe me, one of those dolls, with her hair combed in a long silvery page boy bob, would rate whistles from any Little Boy Blue in the doll rack.

In Houston, Mo., my favorite dollmaker is the "Dentist's Wife"! She makes distinctive character dolls and can be persuaded now and then to restore beloved dolls, giving them wigs of real hair, gray, black, blonde or brown. Living back of the dentist's office, Ruth is "right handy" to the beauty parlor and the operator gives her a ring whenever anyone comes in to get particularly lovely hair snipped off. Just to prove that Ruth is an opportunist, there was a day when she saw a young woman with glorious red hair shopping in the grocery store. Ruth longed for some of that hair to make a wig for a doll that she was dressing in purple velvet and gold lace. She went up to the young woman and asked:

"Next time you get a haircut, will you please call me?"

So take those Ozark dolls home with you, long, short, lean and plump! For years to come they will remind you of the friendly folks you met on that Ozark trip.

Two Chicago French Groups Hold Meeting

reclaimed clothing, donated medicines and food to France.

Young Flight Officer David Prosser, author of "Journey Underground," who was rescued when he came down near Paris and helped out of France, made a heartfelt plea for help in the saving of the lives of those who had saved his own. Then Ambassador Bonnet spoke. He described the still perilous physical plight of the French who are living now on 1,800 calories a day. The only bitter words he spoke were, "My countrymen are not eager to see the Germans receiving 2,000 calories a day." Chicago society turned out to meet the ambassador en masse.

Mme. Bonnet, a delightful Greek woman with the chic of a born Parisienne, was expected for the round of social gayety which welcomed her husband, but she was kept in Washington by that infinitesimal little creature with the wallop of a Gen. Sherman tank, the flu bug. The gayety included a purely masculine luncheon given for the ambassador by Robert Hall McCormick at the Chicago club on the day of arrival, and a meeting of the Council on Foreign Relations which Ambassador Bonnet addressed with tremendous success.

Another well known Frenchman was in town at the same time, Darius Milhaud, one of the famous group of modern French composers called "The Six," said to have been organized to "war against conservatism and traditions." He has been living in California for some time where he has been teaching at Mills college. His Chicago visit had two objectives. He conducted the Chicago Symphony orchestra in two of his own works and he gave a lecture at the Arts club on "My Ballets." One of the two works which had a tremendous critical as well as popular success was his "Opus Americanum 2," which M. Milhaud said in his lecture was written originally as a ballet depicting the life of Moses. The other work on the Chicago Symphony program, "Suite Francaise," M. Milhaud said that he had originally written for high school bands so that the young might know more intimately the folk tunes of the parts of France where their fathers were fighting or had fought. Later he made a symphony version of it. M. Milhaud is now working on a ballet based on Edgar Allan Poe's poems, he said. He added the frosting to his rich cake of lecture by playing on the piano his charming suite called "Household Muse."

Chicago was again a cosmopolitan center with the round of events which welcomed the arrival of British Field Marshal Henry Maitland Wilson. He was a special guest at tea time of the English Speaking union, dined with the British consul general and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid H. Gallienne, and last Saturday night was the principal speaker at the 100th annual Feast of the Haggis of the Illinois St. Andrew society, a rite which your Thalia has never attended, but which she hopes that some of Chicago's loyal Scots will describe for her because Mr. Noah Webster's description of haggis makes it sound peculiarly unsuited to the word feast. The dictionary calls it "a pudding made of the heart, liver, lights, etc. of a sheep or a calf, minced with suet, onions, oatmeal, etc., seasoned and boiled in the stomach of the animal." It's those "etc.'s" that make her shudder.

Eating the haggis was in a fine cause, for the proceeds of the dinner went to the Scottish Old People's home in Riverside. James B. Forgan and R. Douglas Stuart are two of our town's staunchest haggis feasters.

This week's mail has been filled with appeals for contributions to worthy causes. The most amusing arrived on Monday morning from the Woman's Aid society of Passavant Memorial hospital, of which Mrs. Bryan S. Reid is president. She and her husband together designed the enchanting pink and blue and white folder titled "Good News." It is adorned with singing angels proclaiming "No Opera," skating angels promising "No Skating," a violin playing cherub inviting the recipient to "No Concert," and an angel dancing the hornpipe on a cloud labeled "No Ballet." "No top hat, no tails" was probably the contribution of Mr. Reid for men only. It concludes "But just a chance to be an angel" in the Passavant Charity Heaven which provides varying free care from one day in a hospital ward for $5 to a free ward bed for 12 months marked with a donor's plaque for a mere $1,800.

A great many of the fashionable Chicagoans who are offered "just a chance to be an angel" by the Passavant Hospital Woman's board certainly thought they were hearing angels at the wedding ceremony which united Nancy Cochran and Edward A. Cudahy Jr., for the music at the services in Old St. Mary's church was furnished by the famous Paulist choir. Their fresh young voices, kept from being purely ethereal by the less disembodied sounding tenors and basses, sang a wedding hymn written by J. Lewis Browne, organist for many years of the old St. Patrick's church as the pretty bridesmaids came down the aisle in hyacinth blue moire gowns and tiny half hats of pink roses, and carrying old fashioned bouquets of pink roses and violets with the two honor matrons, whose marital dignity was crowned by little pink ostrich tipped half hats (but otherwise unmarked) and the bride on the arm of her father, John L. Cochran.

The reception at the Casino, of which the bride's mother, Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy, is president, brought out the entire social register. The Fountain room, banked high with a screen of greens embellished with circlets of beautiful pink roses, took almost a half hour to reach after one joined the line in the foyer of the smart little club to wish the bride and groom joy.

Christmas windows are glittering all over town, but none more alluringly than the window of the Woman's exchange, which shelters one of the fabulous doll houses which were made by Mrs. James Ward Thorne for this year's Victory Christmas. Last week the Woman's exchange had three days of special Christmas sales. Early in the morning of the first day your Thalia tried to find a foothold in the beautiful little shop. Every one in town was there with her arms full of presents and more than one adult eye was cast covetously at the doll's houses which were furnished, incidentally, from Mrs. Thorne's collection of miniature objects from which she furnished her famous miniature rooms which are now permanently on exhibit at the Art institute and the Chicago Historical society.

A few blocks away at the White Elephant shop the Christmas sale was officially opened last Tuesday, with many of the beautiful things which were donated so that some sick child might be made well at the Children's Memorial hospital. The proceeds from the shop supported by the woman's board of the hospital are used to provide free care for sick children.

Week's Plans of Clubwomen in Chicagoland

That leisurely picture which James Whitcomb Riley painted of the old school house sitting by the road, "a ragged beggar sunning," is destined for enlivening if modern trends continue their advance. The move to make wider community use of school facilities is gaining headway, particularly in the urban centers where war restrictions on building have turned civic groups to careful inventory of the facilities on hand. In Chicago there is a city wide citizens' committee studying possibilities of school buildings beyond their present use. The group is headed by Miss Lea Taylor, head resident of Chicago Commons.

Tomorrow afternoon Miss Taylor will be presented at 1:30 o'clock at the Woman's City club by Mrs. Henry C. Dormitzer's public education committee. She will talk on the school building as a possible social center of its district. Sharing the program will be Glenn Bryant, a New York juvenile police officer on leave and at present with the "Carmen Jones" company, who will tell how his city is using its schools as cultural and recreational centers.

After the meeting, the committees of Mrs. William E. Duffell and Miss Martha C. Dameier will serve a festive tea in keeping with the holidays.

The club's foods and merchandise committee and the Chicago Housewives' league will meet at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday in the club rooms, with Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley in charge, to discuss consumer attitudes toward merchandising and distribution systems.

The annual card benefit and bazar of the Chicago and Cook county Federation of Women's Organizations is set for 1:30 o'clock Thursday in the Assembly room of the Republic building, 209 S. State st. Heading the management committee are Mrs. Spence A. Hutt Jr., and Mrs. William C. Byran, with Mrs. Edward E. O'Reilly, Mrs. Henry W. Hartough, Mrs. Harry Hoff, Mrs. Harvey Martling, Mrs. J. L. Lowenthal, and Mrs. Meyer Solomon assisting. Mrs. George J. Aste is president.

Mrs. Aste will be the Social Economics club's guest at its annual Christmas party at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday, also in the Republic building's assembly room. Santa Claus is scheduled to appear at the luncheon gathering of members and friends with a grab-bag of Christmas gifts.

The Chicago Y. W. C. A. will welcome Miss Agnes Kessler, advisory secretary to business and professional girls on the national board, here on Tuesday. Miss Kessler is coming from New York to consult with local leaders in setting up an effective program for employed girls during the post-war reconversion period. She is to remain here until Dec. 18.

The Braille Transcribers club of Illinois has invited John Boyle, who was an actor before he lost his sight, to attend its meeting at 1:30 o'clock Friday in Illinois Federation of Women's clubs headquarters, 30 W. Daughtrey is president of the club.

Matrix, club of professional women writers and publicists, will have a manuscript reading session at 8 o'clock Wednesday night in its rooms in the Fine Arts building, with Miss Margaret Sturgeon in charge. Both fiction and nonfiction writers will have an opportunity to read work for advice and criticism.

Drama day will be observed by The Renaissance at a 2 o'clock gathering tomorrow in the club room of the Art institute. Mrs. John Mangus, chairman of drama, has arranged for Maxine Stetson, reader, to give a dramatic interpretation in costume of "Mrs. Moonlight," the fanciful story of a young woman who was granted her wish that she might never grow old. The afternoon will close with a tea, arranged by Mrs. William J. Seguin. Mrs. William J. Holm will preside.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

December 11, 1897

Dr. Edgar Goodspeed

Dear Julia: Mr. and Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick gave a ball last evening in honor of Mrs. McCormick's sister, Miss Plummer of England, who is visiting them, and it was a lovely affair indeed. I have written you about this handsome house at the corner of Rush and Ontario sts., two blocks south of us, which adds prestige to our neighborhood. I don't enjoy balls much and Will ordinarily grumbles so I just dread to ask him to go, but he meekly put on his swallow-tailed coat and accompanied me, actually seeming to relish the idea. Mrs. Hamilton McCormick is so beloved and makes every one so welcome, her entertainments are always well attended.

The decorations about the house consisted of American beauty roses and white chrysanthemums. On the tables where supper was served, were dark red roses, and atop the library shelves stood silver loving-cups, trophies of horse show triumphs.

The ballroom on the fourth floor looked most attractive, palms and small plants being the decorations. The cotillion was danced, Frederick Lamport being leader. It made a gay scene, the men choosing partners and offering a flower which the lady accepted gracefully and then carried as she danced.

Mrs. McCormick herself looked like a rose, with her pink cheeks and her lovely dark eyes and happy smile. She wore a dress of white moiré silk with cream lace and dark red roses. Her sister's gown was of blue silk shot with pink. The skirt was accordion pleated and the bodice was of white liberty silk. With this costume she wore a pale blue sash. Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams [Emma Blair] wore a blue brocaded moiré silk, very effective with her gray hair and fine complexion. Mrs. Chauncey J. Blair [Mary Mitchell], who is a great beauty, was in white satin, trimmed with point lace. Black plumes adorned her hair, which was a pretty and striking touch.

Miss Anna Hamill Clark wore pale green organdie with a pale green sash. Lovely Mrs. Reginald de Koven, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Charles B. Farwell, was a vision in white satin, embroidered in silver. She was wearing many diamonds and I thought her one of the most elegantly dressed women there, and indeed, one of the most interesting. She has been a good deal in Washington with her parents and now that she is married and lives in New York, where her husband has had a great deal of success with his light operas, she has come in contact with the literary and musical set, so that she could not fail to have much of interest to talk about.

But I haven't mentioned Mrs. Potter Palmer, who is always queen of the ball to me. She was in black velvet, all embroidered in silver, and she wore her diamond tiara, which made her look particularly regal.

We came home early, pleading my recent cold as our reason, so we didn't feel tired at all. But not all balls are so pleasant to look back on.

O, I must tell you of a great piece of good fortune that the University of Chicago has had recently. Thru the efforts of Edgar J. Goodspeed, brilliant young son of our friend, Dr. Thomas W. Goodspeed, secretary of the university, what promises to be the most valuable collection of ancient manuscripts ever brought to America is now here in Chicago. Two or three hundred complete pieces of papyrus in a good state of preservation are included in the collection, beside many fragments. The manuscripts are supposed to be nearly 2,000 years old, written in Greek during or before the occupation of Egypt by the Romans. Months, perhaps years, will be required to translate them. Our university is making history! Love.

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Charles Willing of Philadelphia writes: "When Dr. Thomas Evans, dentist to Emperor Napoleon III. died, his estate was not settled for about 10 years on account of litigation. I believe he must have left at least six or seven millions, approximately evenly divided between his niece and the University of Pennsylvania Dental School and Museum. One of the interesting exhibits in the museum is the cab in which the Empress Eugenie made her escape on that memorable night in September, 1871."

Mrs. Chapman attended the General Federation meeting, held a week ago in Washington, D. C. On Wednesday the state board members will go to the Vaughan General hospital to dedicate a $26,000 greenhouse, gift of the federation to the veterans' hospital. Mrs. Walter M. Rennie, under whose presidency the greenhouse project was instituted, is expected to be present.

Tuesday noon the federation's garden department will hold its annual Christmas party and luncheon in the Georgian room of Carson Pirie Scott's. The program on that occasion will be a presentation of "Thru These Windows," a color film with poetry. Miss Grace Walker, dean of girls for the Morton Junior college, will be the reader. Each member will bring to the party fruit, to be distributed later in U. S. O. centers. Mrs. Frederick W. Wilmot, state garden chairman, will preside, and Mrs. Chapman will be a special guest.

Christmas Air Pervades New Art Exhibits

By Eleanor Jewett

A Christmas atmosphere is stealing into more and more of the galleries about town as their December exhibits open. One of the most pleasing of the Christmas shows is found at the Clubwoman's bureau, Mandel Brothers, where several one man shows opened last Monday. Perhaps the most unusual of these is the charming group of woodblock prints in color, by James D. Havens of Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Havens is being introduced to Chicago thru the good offices of James Swann, well known etcher and secretary of the Chicago Society of Etchers.

The woodblocks are exquisite in color. Mr. Havens uses soft tones, seductive shades that remind one of dusky illuminated vellum. His subjects are largely drawn from nature, little birds, butterflies, a bee, moths, inquisitive field mice, and a belated robin. One of the largest and most beautiful of the prints is the snowy landscape, "Hard Winter." The "Chickadee and Mullein" is enchanting. One of the latest prints is "Some Stars Are Fixed," a beautifully handled composition. Each print in the exhibit is worth studying. Smiles of appreciation tag each charming effort. This is definitely one of those sensitive and polished shows no one should miss.

From the low, sweet music played by the woodblocks it is only a step to the gayer tunes piped by the four other artists in the same gallery. Two of these painters are familiar to many of us, Mae B. Alshuler for her spirited and gay little landscapes, and Myrtle Frankovitz for her colorful and decorative water colors of Mexican subjects and of still life. The other two painters are Esther Edling Erickson, with a number of fascinating small landscapes done with a quick, live brush that trickles atmosphere and beauty, and Mary Bornarth, with delightful water colors.

Mrs. Alshuler has contrived again this winter to interject a larger canvas or two among her wealth of little pictures, and both types are welcome. Winter and autumn fields beckon us and summer tangles our affections in the treetops. Mrs. Alshuler plays with each season, and it is hard to say where she touches her favorite month. Perhaps, because of the unfailing finesse with which she portrays snowfields and tree patterns against cold, blue skies, January is nearest her heart. At all events there is magic in her wintry miniatures. An intriguing summer idyl of a canoe on a calm lake is another of the great delights in her one-man show.

Myrtle Frankovitz gives us a fascinating account of Mexico in picture after picture that is colorful, decorative, and fine. Her work carries a stimulus that penetrates the most careless indifference and, for the enthusiast, sends attention to extraordinary heights. Mexico rarely has had a more understanding or perceptive interpreter than Mrs. Frankovitz.

Esther Erickson, whom we remember for the first time last spring in an all-Illinois exhibit at the Drake hotel, has a stunning group of colorful and pleasing landscapes [priced amazingly low]. She paints with an ease and assurance that gives freshness to her work. It is spontaneous and generous. Her choice of subject is excellent and her quick, abrupt, definite technique is absorbing. A more Christmasy group of pictures than hers it would be hard to find.

Again there is only praise for and delight in the water colors of Mary Bornarth, who, by the way, paints for diversion and is an engineer by profession. Mrs. Bornarth did a magnificent job for the government during the war in radar. Her water colors are beautifully drawn, decorative, and colorful.

The All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts is opening an exhibit immediately at the Drake hotel of paintings by Chicago members. It is one of the finest shows the society has hung in those galleries. The exhibit is diversified and colorful. It is rich in unusually good paintings. This is another Christmas exhibit no one should miss.

Ruth Van Sickle Ford, director of the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, has a stunning exhibit of large water colors in the Tearoom galleries, Mandel Brothers.

The Chicago Galleries association, 215 N. Michigan av., opened last week a delightful Christmas exhibit of small and large paintings by members. Water colors, etchings, and woodblock prints also are on view. The exhibition will continue thru December and is fine enough to go on your calendar as a must, even in these busy days.

The Art institute has hung several new paintings recently. Four of them are from the Chester Dale collection of modern art and consist of J. C. Beckwith's "The Awakening," "The Restaurant," and "Restaurant No. 1," by Guy Pene du Bois, and "Nude," by Felix Vallotton, a Swiss painter. This "Nude," by the way, is hanging in Gallery 35, where admirers of Dali can enjoy his "Inventions of the Monster," a fabulous dream painting.

In Gallery 25, Art institute, are a fastidious Winslow Homer, an early painting, "Croquet Scene," and a portrait, "Richard Bill," by John Smibert, a Scottish born painter who came to America in 1728. He exerted a considerable influence upon American artists of that day.

Charles W. Dahlgreen, veteran Chicago artist [painter and etcher], has done an unusual thing. His eyes have been failing him with advancing age, and as there was no one in his family to carry on his work he has given his prints to the Smithsonian institution in Washington. Mr. Dahlgreen also has given 76 etched copper plates to the Smithsonian. No prints may be taken from them until after his death. After that "prints can be taken and sold, and the funds thus obtained to be known as the Charles W. Dahlgreen fund and to be used for the benefit of the Smithsonian collections of graphic arts." Mr. Dahlgreen is at present in Washington, where an exhibit of his etchings is on view at the Smithsonian and is proving immensely popular.

This novel idea of Mr. Dahlgreen's strikes us as being altogether admirable. It relieves the artist of worry about his work after he is gone and provides for the worthy use of his best talents for a future that he will not see, but may, in some little part, be instrumental to guide.

Business Clubs Plan Special Holiday Meets

Meetings of business women's groups this week are keyed in the merry mood of Christmas. Both the Alliance of Business and Professional Women and the Women's Advertising clubs are holding old fashioned parties, and special holiday programs are scheduled by the Credit Women's and the Soroptimist clubs, and the Business and Professional Women's club of the Second Presbyterian church.

Alliance members will gather at 6 o'clock tomorrow in the College club where a buffet will be spread, and after supper they will sing carols to Miss Nina Baker's mandolin accompaniments. It has been planned for each to bring a gift for later distribution thru the Red Cross at Vaughan General and Hines hospitals. Greeting cards may be inclosed, but the gifts will be wrapped by the Red Cross camp and hospital service. Miss Anna Doetsch is the social chairman.

Santa Claus will be on hand with a grab bag of 25 cent gifts at the Advertising women's party on Tuesday night in the Electric club, 20 N. Wacker dr., and the committee for the evening is offering a premium for the funniest and the most imaginative present. Members will sit down to a turkey dinner at 6:15 o'clock.

That night the Credit women will have a dinner at 6:45 o'clock, preceded by a reception at 6, in the Furniture club at 667 McClurg ct. Instead of the customary gift exchange between members, this year each of the group and their guests will bring gifts for patient nurses in the government hospitals of this area. The program planned for the evening is "The Christmas Window," a dramatic reading by Mary Girvin Conen, with piano accompaniment by Margaret Cashman.

The Soroptimists will gather tomorrow evening in the Cordon for a Christmas musical arranged by Dorothy Manor Steinback of the Chicago Civic Opera. Geraldine Archambault, coloratura soprano, will give the program, with Miss Nancy Haase at the piano. The group will have as guest speaker Miss Anita Blair of Houston, Tex., who is on a lecture tour with her Seeing Eye dog, Fawn.

Men guests will share a festive smorgasbord with the Business and Professional Women's club Wednesday evening at the Second Presbyterian church. After supper, Mrs. Russell Hobbs will be presented in a costume recital of Russian songs. As a special Christmas project, the club has "adopted" one of the families which it helped last year and members will bring clothing, toys, or money for gifts. There are nine children ranging from 1 to 15 years old in the family which the group is befriending.

Jewish Group to Conduct 9th Chanukah Rite

The 9th annual Chanukah breakfast of the Chicago Women's division of the American Jewish Congress, the most colorful of the society's programs for the year, will draw nearly 2,000 women to the Grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow.

Chanukah, which opened at sundown on Nov. 29 and continued thru Friday of last week, commemorates the dedication of the Jewish temple. The traditional candle lighting ceremony, which has given to the ancient Hebraic ceremonial the descriptive title, "Feast of Lights," will be conducted at the breakfast program by Mrs. Robert L. Aronson, past president of the division. Musical accompaniment for the rite is to be played by Peter Sher, pianist, and Mrs. Jack Spachner, violinist.

Henry Epstein, chairman of the commission on community interrelations of the American Jewish Congress, will address the assembly on "World Jewry and the C. C. I."

There also will be a dramatic program by Joel Ashley, who currently is appearing in "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" at the Great Northern theater. He will give an interpretation of Earl Robinson's "The House I Live In."

Among others at the speakers' table will be Mrs. Samuel Seltzer, chairman for the breakfast; Max Bressler, president of the American Jewish Congress, Chicago division; and Rabbi Samuel Blumenfeld, dean of the College of Jewish Studies, who will give the invocation. District presidents of the Women's division and members of the organization's fund raising committee have assisted Mrs. Seltzer with arrangements. Mrs. Milton J. Krensky is the Women's division president.

Children come in for a generous portion of the week's Christmas festivities planned by women's organizations. In the youngsters' wards of the University of Illinois Research and Educational hospitals, all the elaborate preparations of unpacking ornaments, putting up the Christmas trees, decorating the windows with reindeer cutouts, and stringing colore dbells and stars are under way to make ready for the visit of Santa Claus and the Chicago Illinae club on Saturday.

Since August, the Illinois alumnae have been packing red and green stockings and wrapping toys and 150 useful gifts for the Christmas party at the hospital. Victor Knight, versatile member of the hospital staff, has checked two pillows for fore and aft padding in his Santa Claus suit, he reports, his whiskers are brushed to a foamy froth, and the runners are trimmed on his huge red sled to insure smooth action in conveying the gift pack from room to room.

Santa's Illinae helpers will have a clown and other entertainers with them when they arrive for the festivities, and they also have arranged for the choir of Mount Olivet Lutheran church to come and sing. Every boy and girl will be remembered with several gifts, with fruit, nuts, and candy.

Mrs. Frederick W. Kraft, president of the club, and Mrs. Thomas Morrow, chairman of the hospital committee, are in charge of arrangements for the party. Other active members are Mrs. K. J. Ekblaw, Mrs. Wedard Harrigan, Mrs. A. R. Watkins, Miss Mary Bransfield, Miss Frances Wiseheart, Mrs. Sumner Sommerfield, Mrs. Lawrence Thompson, Miss Alice Hausler, Mrs. William MacFarland, Mrs. W. I. Brockson, and Mrs. William Collins.

The Crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel will be the setting for a large Santa Claus celebration Saturday afternoon. Youngsters from the Lydia, the Morgan Park, and the Illinois Protestant Children's homes, the Uhlich Orphanage, Child Haven, and the Dante school will be gathered there, with the Chicago Woman's Ideal club playing hostess. There will be gifts for each young guest, ice cream, cookies, and candy, and Santa will be reënforced with a troupe of entertainers to keep the afternoon humming. Mrs. Neil M. Gillies is chairman of the committee for the annual children's party.

Two hundred Girl Scout leaders will celebrate Wednesday evening in the Grand ballroom of the Midland hotel. Later their tree will be taken to St. Mary's Home for Children at 2822 W. Jackson blvd., where presents will be distributed.

Members of the Colonial Coverlet guild, gathered at Oak Park Arms hotel in Oak Park for luncheon Wednesday, will be given suggestions for Christmas decoration by Mrs. Henry W. Shedd, who is a recognized authority on both old and new adornments for table and home in the holiday season. Mrs. C. Glenn Whitlock has arranged the program and Mrs. L. L. Bomberger will preside.

Mrs. Luther C. Snyder will present a lecturer who will talk on "Christmas in Art" at a meeting of the "I Will" club Tuesday in the Republic building. The program will follow a business session at 11, presided over by Mrs. George J. Teague, and a 12:30 luncheon.

The Chicago Society of Ohio Women will bring a south of the border note to its Christmas meeting Wednesday afternoon in the Hotel Sherman. The guest artist, Marie Louisa Garibay, will sing traditional Mexican songs, accompanied by Edith H. Dodson. After the program, there will be a holiday tea, at which gifts will be exchanged.

Members Will Give Woman's Club Program

The Chicago Woman's club will turn the spotlight on members of its P. E. N. class Wednesday afternoon in Curtiss hall, presenting several of its talented artists, musicians, and writers in an "achievement day" program.

Dr. Adelaide D. Hoeffel

In the spirit of the holiday season, Mrs. Edna Whitcomb will read her "Kerosene Christmas Star," a story based on a Christmas episode from a pioneer chapter in her family's life on a Dakota homestead. Mrs. Edith Willis will contribute a poem, "Child of Peace," and Mrs. Carolyn Fanning will offer excerpts from a narrative poem in religious vein. Mrs. Lou Reed will play musical selections. Mrs. Payson Wild is scheduled for a story, entitled, "Cousin Cuckoo."

A special art exhibit of paintings by Mrs. John O'Connor will be on view. Mrs. O'Connor is a veteran member of the club's creative writing class, but only in recent years has she given serious study to art work. Her achievements in that field have been notable. Her work has been exhibited at the Art institute, where she was awarded a prize in one of the Chicago artists' shows.

Mrs. Harry A. Blossat's art and literature department is sponsor of the program, which has been arranged by Miss Louella Chapin, chairman of the P. E. N. class. Mrs. Albion L. Headburg, club president, will open the entertainment at 2 o'clock.

At 11:30 that morning Dr. Adelaide Hoeffel, chairman of the club's home and welfare department, has arranged a program in tribute to the late Mrs. Cora Brindle Cubbins, a Chicago Woman's club member, thru whose efforts the society gained much of its distinction in philanthropic and civic fields. Miss Thecla Doniat, who was closely associated with Mrs. Cubbins when the latter was principal of the Spalding School for Crippled Children, will be keynote speaker. Miss Doniat recently received a citation from the National Association for Crippled for her work on behalf of the handicapped.

One of the founders of the Illinois Association for Crippled Children, Mrs. Cubbins was a successful lobbyist at Springfield in securing legislation for handicapped youngsters. She served as chairman of the crippled children's committee of the Chicago Woman's club for many years.

Horse Racing Season Opens at Florida Spa

By Martha Lummus

Two events of last week-end kept Miamians and visitors busy. More than 20,000 persons journeyed to Hollywood, Fla., to attend the opening of Gulfstream Park on Dec. 1. Scarcely rested up from that occasion, one of the most brilliant openings in the history of Florida racing and one that heralds an important racing season, a goodly number went the following day by boat to the reopening of the Quarterdeck Yacht club, unique club erected on stilts in Biscayne bay.

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

Resumption of activities at the popular club, of which Harold A. Clark is president, will delight yachtsmen, who use its facilities during the winter. During gas rationing, and in the war years when the government needed many of the palatial yachts that are familiar sights in these waters, activities at the Quarterdeck club ceased.

Seen almost daily at the Bath club, and frequently on the tennis courts at this fashionable club, is Mrs. E. Battelle Offutt, who spends the summer months in Chicago, the winter months here. Mrs. Offutt and her mother, Mrs. A. C. Battelle, came to Miami Beach in late September this season and are occupying their new home, 3445 Alton rd., which they purchased last May. Mrs. Offutt, who has done much volunteer work for the Miami Junior League, devotes many hours to Red Cross work. She soon will resume service as a nurses' aid at the Biltmore hospital, one of the regional army air force hospitals in this area.

The opening of the Surf club on Friday was another event ushering in Florida's 1945-'46 season. First formal party scheduled at this popular ocean side rendezvous is the Victory ball next Saturday, when the entire club will be elaborately decorated in keeping with the theme of the ball.

Mrs. Eugene Clark, who has been spending the winters at the Surf club for several years, is expected Dec. 20, and she will have as her guest at the club, Mrs. Horatio B. Hackett, also of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. David J. Molloy of Golf, Ill., have had as their guests Rear Adm. and Mrs. W. R. Munroe, who only a few days ago returned to Puerto Rico, where the admiral is stationed. The Munroes lived here for many months while the admiral was commandant of the 7th naval district. They were honor guests at a party at the opening of the Bath club, and also attended social events at the Indian Creek Country club, of which Mr. Molloy is president.

Among the latest arrivals at Miami Beach from Chicago are Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Doerman, who have opened their home on Prairie av. Mr. Doerman is a member of the Committee of One Hundred, an exclusive men's organization which sponsors a series of meetings and lectures during the winter season.

Expected here for the holidays as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rove V. Wayne are Brig. Gen. Anton Frederick Lorenzen [USA] Ret. and Mrs. Lorenzen of Chicago. Their marriage was a recent event there, and they will spend some time here en route to Cuba. They will be honor guests at a party to be given on Dec. 23 by the Waynes.

Better Films Group Schedules All Day Program on Friday

A day long program for the Better Films Council of Chicagoland will open at 10:30 o'clock Friday with a talk by Donald Zabriskie of the American Baptist Publication society on "Audio Visual Aids in Religious Education." Mrs. Joseph R. Chesser, council president, will conduct the meeting in room 1906 of the Republic building. Present as a special guest will be Mrs. Teodore S. Chapman, president of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs.

During the afternoon session Miss Dorothy Dohrman, board member of the General Federation of Women's clubs, and program chairman of the council, will tell of attending a recent tea in the White House given by Mrs. Truman for members of the general federation's board. A Christmas "grab bag" also has been planned.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

Fingers nimble with needle and thread are an asset these days when leisurely shopping is a thing of the past and the perfect costume is hard to find. Mrs. Justin A. Stanley, who is working along with other members of the woman's board of the Travelers Aid society for a benefit "Paris Rendezvous" dinner-dance next Saturday night in the Drake hotel, wore a dress and hat as well of her own making to a recent committee meeting in the Arts club. The dress, of rich, royal blue wool, was simply cut and tailored, and the matching hat was a high, crownless fez. Sewn around the hat were rows of gilt sequins, and adding an amusing as well as sophisticated touch to the dress was another row of the sequins, simulating a bracelet, just above the edge of one sleeve. The handsome dress Mrs. Edwin W. Sims Jr. wore to the meeting had been knit to order for her out of cerise and blue ribbon. The skirt was of the blue, and the cardigan jacket was of the red, embellished with little crossed signal flags whose possible meaning had friends imagining all sorts of fanciful messages. A tiny Dutch cap of the knit cerise ribbon completed the costume. There was an aura of Parisian smartness in the beret and bag worn to the gathering by Mrs. Edward Benninghoven, who is in charge of devising the proper Parisian atmosphere for the benefit. Both were of American Beauty quilted velvet.

An international flavor was in the air when Eyvind Bratt, the Swedish pro-consul in Chicago, and Mrs. Bratt entertained a group of Scandinavian and American friends at cocktails recently in their home in Evanston. Mrs. Bratt, a Swedish beauty who wears her dark hair upswept and breaking into curls across the top, greeted guests in a long-sleeved, high-necked dinner gown of silvery green taffeta, its long torso line accentuated by a wide cuff of the same material about the hip line. Long green jade earrings carried out the lovely color of her gown.

Now a career girl is Miss Sally McPherson, and a smart looking one, too, she was the other day in a gray flannel suit buttoned up the front in twisted silver buttons. A wide bracelet of beaten silver was worn at either wrist. A chartreuse blouse added a note of color. A black velvet band was her simple headdress, and over one shoulder she wore a black leather bag. Another well dressed career girl is Miss Priscilla Thompson. One of her party frocks combines gold and brown, both becoming tones to her tawny hair. The blouse was of the gold, and the draped skirt of brown satin. A vest of brown and white plaid taffeta adds a note of dash to a brown crepe gown which is an attractive foil for Mrs. Joseph W. Hibben's blonde coloring. With it she wears a brown hat decked with brown and pale green velvet ribbons. Lunching the other day at the Woman's Athletic club, she was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Daniel Boone, whose soft dressmaker suit of a pale oatmeal tone was matched exactly by a small hat pierced with brown and beige feathers. Mrs. Edward Hall Taylor, in the same party, was wearing an attractive gray suit contrasted with a blouse and saucy little hat of citron yellow. At a nearby table Mrs. Pope Hovey sat with a party of friends, wearing a brown wool suit and almond green hat with curly ostrich plumes above the brim and a slightly peaked crown, a faint hint of the Chinese coolie style. Mrs. Burton Hales' urban black costume was offset by handsome gold jewelry—a heavy chain from which was suspended a large gold medallion and a richly worked brooch, clipped to the wide mink band that circled her hat.

AMERICAN DESIGN OF BEAUTY

Lady of the House

Looking Backward

At the turn of the century the December issue of a then prominent magazine for women carried some advertisments that would give pause to the housewife of today.

There was a practically indestructible misses' stocking, dyed "Snowblack" and guaranteed not to crock, fade, shrink, or rip. Labeled with appealing piccaninny cherubs. Children's cloth toys, mostly dolls, printed in oil colors that would not crock or fade. The sections were simply stitched together and stuffed. Priced from 15 cents to 50 cents.

"Mama can make 'em,
Baby can't break 'em,
And they will last for many a day."

For the parlor there was a piano encrusted with ornamentation, with instrumental attachment that imitated perfectly the tones of the mandolin, guitar, harp, zither, and banjo. Sent on trial, trate prepaid. For the kitchen, a cabinet called a "kitchen piano—everything at her fingers' ends."

"Drip roasting" was recommended for the holiday fowl, which could be had for a fraction of the present price; and women already had learned 60 ways to cook macaroni.

You could have a free Fortune Telling calendar in 14 colors; learn millinery by mail; and own a "fine human hair switch, 22 inches long, for $1.50."

The fashionable figure must have "emphatic curves," and it did. "Grace, style, and comfort in a Chicago waist—all shapes, $1." Yes, curves were cheap. Braided wire bustles were offered at 25 cents; a pair of hip bustles, 50 cents; wire hair rolls, 10 cents to 20 cents.

If you were photogenic you could have "your face on a button for 10 cents."

Clothes wore more trimming than a Christmas tree. "Garniture" it was called by fashion authorities. If you liked skating you must have the proper costume: Instep length flared skirt of heavy cloth, lined, interlined, and edged with brush braid. Bodice-like top of similar armor, with high collar and tight sleeves [for a dainty touch you might have a fine lace-trimmed, hand-tucked undersleeve]; the whole garnished with velvet, fur, and braid, and worn with a small brimmed velvet hat trimmed with fur, feathers, ribbon, and buckle. One hand was in a small round muff and the other rested lightly on your partner's arm as you glided gracefully over the ice. What fun!

But the visiting gowns, modish evening and opera tollettes, suits for the promenade, and glorified shirt waist costumes were something fearfully and wonderfully put together. Shown in color.

"Do you thing we'll ever get back to that?" asked Aunt Ella, rather anxiously.

Something like it, perhaps. Already there are signs and portents.

Purple Heart for Broken Heart

Hearts in profusion,
And to my confusion,
You've scattered along my way—
Some were romantic,
Poetic, gigantic,
And lacy for Valentine's day;
Some fashioned like pillows,
Or carved in the willows
That sheltered our trysting nook;
Some shaped like a locket,
A 'kerchief for pocket,
One traced on the page of a book.
I have saved all these treasures
To recapture youth's pleasures,
Each year have I garnered a host;
But the one I have carried
Since the day we were married
Is the heart that I cherish the most!
I shall part with it never,
Its bonds none shall sever . . .
This medal with small purple band
Is only a token
That my heart has been broken
And buried with yours in a faraway land!

First Flurries

I love the warm comradery
Of the first snowflakes that dream
Their way to earth. There's flattery
In their subtle, little scheme.

They make their way straight to my cheek,
Into my heart to disappear.
Some cling to my lashes, a wink to seek,
Others whisper in my ear.

Why, they follow me like a soft white song,
Etching in down my every track.
I suppose they've been away so long
They're just happy to be back!

If

"What a big long swing we'd have
If we could swing from the stars!
We'd let our feet just touch the earth,
Then swing right back to Mars!
What a great, long slide we could take
If we slid down a ray
Of silver slanting moonbeam
At the end—of day.
Perhaps we'd jump upon a cloud
And take a nap, or wait
Until the sun came up!"
Mused this little boy of eight.
For childhood needs to pack no bag—
No extra fare receive,
When it dreams itself so far away
In the land of make believe.

Designs for Needlework

A crocheted creeper, matching bolero jacket, and shoes, No. E-479, make an ideal set for this 18 inch doll with movable arms and legs. The pattern contains detailed instructions for making the body and crocheting the clothes.

A crocheted carriage cover, No. E-813, is made in two sizes, one for a baby carriage and another for little sister's doll buggy. The stitches are attractive and simple. The covers are edged with an attractive shell stitch.

Marine Mothers to Give Program at Naval Hospital

An especially festive entertainment program for marines confined to the Great Lakes Naval hospital has been planned for next Thursday by the Marine Mothers Club of America, Chicago chapter. The women's group has arranged to present members of the Grandmother's club in performances of their musical show at 2:30 o'clock that afternoon and again at 8 o'clock and Gold Star mothers of the marine organization will distribute gifts and refreshments to the service men. A special bus has been chartered to take the 25 members of the show cast to the hospital.

Mrs. Emma Schultz, president, will conduct the club's regular meeting at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the Skyline Athletic club building, 188 W. Randolph st. All mothers of marines, either in service or honorably discharged, are invited.

What is believed to be the first chapter of Gold Star Mothers in Illinois was organized in Elgin last week. Thirty women—Gold Star mothers both of World Wars I. and II. — attended the organizational meeting held under auspices of the Navy club auxiliary of Elgin, of which Mrs. Harry Wilcox is president. The auxiliary gave a party for the Gold Star group in the Masonic temple, under chairmanship of Mrs. Clarence Wendt.

Fashions

Dancing feet will twinkle more gaily this season than in recent years. What's more, there will be new and exciting evening slippers available. Most sensational is the appearance of white satin sandals which may be worn as they are or tinted any desired shade.

Low heeled sandals are becoming increasingly popular for formal dress, and the white satin evening slipper, top, will be one of the favorites. The cross bands are decorated with embroidered eyelets, and the back strap is plain.

Another white satin sandal, center, has a graceful skyscraper heel; otherwise it is nothing more than two extremely narrow bands criss-crossed over the toe, and up the front and across the back. A single band fastens over the ankle. This slipper also is available in patent and black suede.

An ideal shoe for any color dress is the clear plastic ankle sandal. The two bands across the foot, and the back and ankle strap have narrow bands of rayon faille to match the high, black heel.

To an invalid, lonely and cut off from the world he knew, who finds time long and dull in passing, a radio comes to mean a great deal more than whiling away a few moments with a flip of the dial. It becomes a friend, teacher, and entertainer. Now that reconversion from war to peace time production is at hand and consumer goods are beginning to trickle into shops and counters, those who have guarded such hard-to-get items as radios, perhaps may relax their vigiliance as signs point to new models, and consider placing that small extra one with one of the following applicants.

The supervisor of a south side child welfare agency is anxious to locate a small radio for the pleasure and diversion of a 15 year old boy who is in the hospital. One arm is paralyzed and the other must remain in a cast for five months. Its position is such that he will be unable to do anything to amuse himself.

Pvt. C., a Chicago boy, writes that he is one of a group of 11 infantry men taking part in the army of occupation, guarding warehouses in a southern Korea town of about 600 population, where they are "as lonesome and secluded as a lighthouse at sea." Their only entertainment is a not too abundant supply of reading material. A small radio, which when packed would not exceed the new weight limit of 11 pounds, would provide great pleasure to these boys.

Another Chicago boy in a camp located several miles from the nearest town in one of the southern states asks our aid in obtaining a radio for his group, who are off duty in the evening and have little to do for amusement. Music and popular programs via a small radio would help them forget their lonesomeness. The name and address will be supplied upon request.

Santa Legend Only a Part of Holiday Spirit

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

If you are a regular reader of this column you probably have followed the discussion [pro and con] of the wisdom of letting your children believe in Santa Claus; of even trying to foster the belief beyond the questioning age; of what to do when the point-blank question comes along, "Is there really and truly a Santa Claus?" Also you may have read the statement by the Canadian psychiatrist who said the belief in the myth was seriously hampering to the mental and character development of the child, once grown to manhood or womanhood. You may have taken it too seriously, or laughed at it!

After reading all this and perhaps doing some "heavy thinking" on the subject, you may feel a bit let down, and, if you've decided to go light on the Santa myth instead of insisting upon it for the children [which some parents do], you may feel as tho some of the joy and spontaneity had gone out of Christmas; or even feel as intensely as the mother did who exclaimed:

"Christmas wouldn't be anything without Santa Claus!"

I couldn't help thinking, when I heard that, about the Christmases we've had always in our family, when we were children ourselves and now when we have children of our own. Santa wasn't and isn't all of Christmas to us or our children. Christmas is so much more than Santa; it is such a rich, full, beautiful time.

What is Christmas without Santa Claus? Listen:

Christmas is a commemoration of a Baby's birth, because He made love for others so important in the world.

Christmas is saving and making things for those we love.

Christmas is fun and jolly busyness and bustle.

Christmas is a very living definition of the word: Anticipation.

Christmas is holly, bells, evergreens, and spicy fragrances.

Christmas is a gathering of the clans.

Christmas is cooking, feasting, and good smells.

Christmas is hoping frankly for things you'd love to have and guessing frantically what some one you love is hoping to receive!

Christmas is listening again to The Night Before Christmas.

Christmas is planning, shopping, wrapping, whispering, and secrets.

Christmas is decorating the house and burning Christmas candles.

Christmas is giving to those who have less than we.

Christmas is the singing of carols.

Christmas is writing friends we've lost touch with all the year and getting messages of affection ourselves.

Christmas is games, parties, other celebrations, and special little family ceremonies.

Christmas is hanging up stockings.

Christmas is trimming the tree.

Christmas is a rich blend of many feelings and experiences, and it will mean most of those I've mentioned to your children, if you create the spirit of Christmas in your family, long after the truth about Santa Claus is known.

Eastern Star Red Cross Units to Fete Hospitalized Gls

Three hundred wounded service men confined to Dwight hospital will be remembered with a Christmas party next Sunday, at which Red Cross units of the Order of the Eastern Star in Illinois will be hostesses. Mrs. Bertha M. Eagle, state chairman of the units, and Mrs. Johanna A. Thompson, worthy grand matron of the state society, are in charge of the entertainment, which will begin with a dinner at 4:30 o'clock.

Magic and music are on the program, and there will be a distribution of gifts, not only for the patients but for children of the veterans as well. Each nurse and doctor also will be remembered. The hospital is directed by Lt. Col. William E. Kendall, past worthy grand patron of the Eastern Star in Illinois.

Tomorrow will find members of Zenobia temple No. 8, Daughters of the Nile, gathering at 1:30 o'clock in headquarters, 32 W. Randolph st., to greet Myra L. Atkins of Davenport, Ia., who heads the organization. A ceremonial session is scheduled, and a class of candidates will be initiated.

Junior Ort Members Will Hear Talk This Afternoon

David Itkin, head of the drama department at De Paul university, will speak at an open meeting of the Chicago Junior American Ort, set for 3 o'clock today in the south ballroom of the Stevens hotel. His topic will be "Drama of Today." Mr. Itkin also is associated with the Goodman theater.

Public Schools to Participate in Relief Drive

Chicago public schools will participate in the victory collection of canned foods now under way for overseas relief. The children's drive starts tomorrow and continues thru Friday. James B. McCahey, president of the school board, fixed the time for the children's drive last week after consultation with the Principal's club and employes. Wednesday is the day designated for the boys and girls to bring their donations to the schools.

Mrs. F. Russell Lyon, civilian service chairman of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, has called upon the 282 PTA units in Chicago to stand ready for volunteer service if help should be needed at the schools in handling the children's contributions.

The parent-teacher units have been active in the food collection since the first of the month, and will continue their efforts thru Saturday. Their donations, as those of all other participating organizations and individuals, are being taken to the 142 Chicago fire stations, which are the receiving centers in this city for the drive.

General chairman of the canned food collection in this state is Mrs. Walter M. Hermsdorf. Mrs. Hermsdorf is chairman of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs committee on rehabilitation, and in that capacity directed the work of thousands of club women in a summer and fall program of canning surplus foods from war gardens and farms to help in the feeding of starving populations in Europe and Asia.

The present drive for commercially canned foods is concentrated in the cities to enable urban communities to participate. The collection is in behalf of the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration. Foods contributed will supplement the basic diet being supplied by UNRRA in war devastated countries.

Preliminary reports last week showed over 25,000 cans of food pledged, with a substantial number already in the fire stations and the official UNRRA warehouse at 1000 S. Clark st. This figure did not include the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs estimate, which will not be forthcoming until the end of the week, when Mrs. Theodore S. Chapman, federation president and reports chairman of the drive, is expected to meet with Mrs. Hermsdorf and the 11 district rehabilitation chairmen of this area.

Gala Lounge Wear Ready for Shoppers

By Rea Seeger

Displays of gift negligees, hostess, and tea gowns, and any other creations that pass as festive lounging apparel, surpass the war time collections in glitter, swish of materials, decorative touches, and beauty of fabric.

The current collections are at their best with glamorous emphasis on colors, color combinations, luxury fabrics, and the most feminine of silhouettes. And, while there are all kinds of stunning lounging pajamas, there are plenty of super-siren stuff in the skirted creations.

The padded and quilted house coats and robes never have been so varied or so luxurious in appearance. Brilliant colored satin competes with the many delicate pastels and with the still daintier sprigged floral prints. Chiffon-thin woolens make other toast-warm, but just as feminine and as clinging, robes and housecoats. Gossamar knitted fabrics, as airy and light as a feather, assure protective warmth for the coldest day. Velvets in jewel tone colors are featured in snugly padded and quilted creations, as well as the house or tea gown creations with lace frills around the sleeves and the neck line.

Snow white woolens are fabulously beautiful when fashioned into robes of slim silhoutte or the more dashing, wide skirted models with dramatic large sleeves and the wide skirts accenting the small waist line. Gleaming white satin is tailored in silhouette, quilted, and padded into lush housecoats. Some boast crimson linings, others flattering pastels. Some of the sensational white beauties have exquisite patterns of trapunto handwork for contrast.

Sequins, beads, and hand painted motifs make the Tina Lesser originals exceptionally beautiful, since the materials are lovely pastels, such as Dresden blue, cloud pink, and palest yellow and mauve. Other hostess gowns of thin fine wool or crepe are embroidered effectively with thousands of sequins along the sleeves, around the yoke, and then repeated around the hip line. Other shimmering creations have huge deep pockets completely covered with sequins, or deep cavalier cuffs ashine with the combination of beads and sequins. Gold and silver thread embroidery make effective all-over patterns against filmy sheers and chiffon velvets.

Black lace tea gowns and negligees are annual Christmas gift models. This year black lace is used over flesh pink, for fat, double ruched ruffles around the lower edge, the cuffs of the long fitted sleeves, and down the front. These are the slim, simple models of great charm because of the fragile beauty of the lace.

Flannel robes are available, but in definitely limited assortments, and the all-wool numbers are anything but inexpensive. But such a sleekly tailored robe in scarlet, dubonnet, white, green, or blue, piped in dazzling white, is a treasure and gleefully welcomed by any lucky person. Despite the ample assortments, shoppers are hereby warned that such gift merchandise disappears like magic under the enthusiastic onrush of the Christmas shoppers.

Sketched are five of the most beautiful and popular 1945 creations available when we sketched them. Others of equal beauty in the same collection will be found in a Chicago shop. For further information call Superior 0200.

A . . . Pale pink crepe negligee boasts hand painted yoke outlined with multi-colored bead embroidery. • B . . . Crepe tea gown, available in angel blue and other colors, with shimmering sequin trim. • C . . . Two-piece lounging pajama set is worn under plaid taffeta coat. • D . . . Decorative hostess gown features contrasting side drapery. • E . . . Light-as-air, white wool robe has tucked panels at sides and fine trapunto work on sleeves and hem line.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
4 spades	Pass	4 no trump	Pass
6 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

There are two factors which appear to affect the clear vision of a vast majority of bridge players. One is possession of 100 honors, the other is the holding of a six card suit. Each of these conditions is apt to induce a declarer complex and when they are both present, partner's chance of playing the hand is negligible, indeed.

Today's hand provides a splendid illustration of that point. The bidding indicated in the diagram above is the recommended procedure and led to the fulfilment of the slam contract with the greatest of ease. Actually that is not the way the bidding went. The North and South players were Blackwood followers. South opened modestly enough with a call of one spade and when North responded with two clubs he had good reason to get excited. Excitement usually produces a uniform reaction among Blackwood players, merely the utterance of those magic words "four no trump." North dutifully responded showing one ace.

South repeated the no trump asking bid and learned that his partner had two kings, whereupon he contracted for a small slam in spades. The unfortunate heart opening set the contract before declarer obtained the lead. True enough, had hearts not been opened or had the ace of hearts been favorably located the slam contract would have been fulfilled. But no complaint of hard luck can be sympathetically heard, when it could so easily have been prevented by the exercise of a little thoughtfulness.

South's method of handling the Blackwood convention was highly improper. He should have done one of two things. Either bid the hand in such a way as to permit his partner to employ the convention; or so maneuver the auction that his partner would bid no trump first and then he could properly employ Blackwood. The important consideration is that his partner might have the king of hearts which would make it obligatory for North to become declarer in order to avoid a lead thru that king on the opening. If North is to be declarer, it must almost certainly be at no trump. He should, therefore, be given the opportunity to bid no trump first.

After the two club response, South could have attained that end by making a rebid of three diamonds. This is a jump in a new suit and forces partner to bid at least till game is reached. If North should respond with three no trump, South is still at liberty to employ the Blackwood convention, which will still provide for North being declarer

In the bidding given in the diagram, the players are presumed to be "direct method" bidders. The four spade rebid shows great strength and indicates a hand that can take at least eight tricks. North can see that the partnership is safe for at least 11 tricks and makes the natural bid of four no trump which means just what it says. South therefore permits his partner to play the hand, because he is convinced that the king of hearts is there. If North held the ace of hearts he would have shown it directly.

These Holiday Sweets Spare Sugar Supply

By Mary Meade

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

A stingy sugar canister is going to hamper many a woman in her Christmas preparations again this year, especially in the field of candy making. Nut and dried fruit confections usually require less sugar than fudges, divinities, and other rich candies, and many of them seem more appropriate for holiday serving, too.

Glazed nuts and nuts tipped with fondant are always good at holiday open houses and teas, and in Christmas boxes. Here are a few other sweets which belong there, too.

Brandied Almonds

¾ cup butter
2¾ cups sifted confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons sherry
2 tablespoons brandy
2 cups blanched almonds

Cream butter and work in sugar, sherry, and brandy. Toast almonds in 350 degree oven until golden, stirring frequently (use a shallow pan), and stir into sugar mixture while hot. When nuts are well coated, spread them out on paper to cool. Pecans are good with a brandy coating, too.

Almond or Peanut Brittle

2 cups sugar
1 cup light corn sirup
½ cup water
2 cups blanched almonds or unroasted peanuts
2 teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon butter

Place sugar, corn sirup, and water in a large saucepan, mix well, and cook without stirring to the medium crack stage, 280 degrees. When a sample dropped into cold water forms a ball which clinks against the side of the cup, this stage has been reached. Add nuts and let them cook in the sirup until they have turned a light golden brown. Add soda and remove at once from heat. Add butter and vanilla and pour into buttered pans as soon as foaming has subsided. When cold break candy into pieces.

Minted Nuts

1 cup sugar
¼ cup water
1 tablespoon corn sirup
⅛ teaspoon salt
6 marshmallows
1 drop green coloring
3 drops oil of peppermint
3 cups walnut or pecan halves

Combine sugar, water, sirup, and salt in 2 quart saucepan and cook to soft ball stage, 230 degrees. Remove from heat and add marshmallows which have been cut into pieces with kitchen scissors. Stir until melted. Add color and flavoring. Add nuts. Stir slowly until every nutmeat is coated and mixture hardens. Cool on waxed paper, separating nuts. Keep in tightly covered jar.

Apricot Marbles

1 cup slightly softened dried apricots
1 cup shredded coconut
¼ cup nuts
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Confectioners' sugar

Grind apricots, coconut, and nuts together and combine with other ingredients. Knead mixture, adding confectioners' sugar if it is soft, or orange juice if it becomes too stiff. Form into small balls by rolling between the palms, roll in confectioners' sugar and spread out on waxed paper to dry surface. Mixture may be shaped in a long roll and sliced off.

Marzipan [Almond Paste Candy]

¾ pound blanched almonds
2 egg whites
1¾ cups confectioners' sugar
¼ teaspoon salt

Grind almonds thru fine blade of food chopper several times. Beat egg whites until foamy; stir in sugar gradually. Add nuts and knead mixture until smooth and creamy. If paste seems too stiff, add lemon juice, a drop at a time. If thin, add more sugar. Pack mixture in a covered container and allow to ripen for two days or longer, preferably for a week. Shape some of the mixture into small balls and roll in mixed sugar and cocoa. Make remainder into tiny fruit and vegetable shapes, such as strawberries, oranges, bananas, pumpkins, carrots. Paint candy with vegetable coloring and use strips of angelica, or whole cloves for stems. Dry on a cake rack. Candies may be dipped in coloring if solid color is wanted instead of a rosy blush, as for little peaches or apples. Impale the almond paste on toothpicks for dipping.

"Simple Homemade Candies" is the name of a booklet containing many other recipes for holiday time sweets. To obtain a copy send five cents in stamps to Mary Meade, CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Rum caramels, taffy apples, spiced nuts, Turkish delight (jelly cubes), and toffee are among the recipes in the book.

Thru the Looking Glass

For the teen-agers on your list you might bear in mind that today's miss is beauty minded. This doesn't mean that the little girl should be shovered with lipstick or nail lacquer, but that grooming gifts in good taste will be enormously welcome.

Complexion and hair care begin now in the cradle. And when the girl reaches her teens, all but the most fuddy-duddy parents want her to realize that cleanliness is the foundation of good looks, and that a sound style sense and meticulous habits of grooming are something to be developed assiduously.

You'll find some holiday packages built around teen-age grooming products that will earn you a terrific reputation as a good gift-idea person. They're not too expensive, they're daintily done up, and beyound doubt they're what the 17 year old will love.

We have, among many new lines for the young girls, one in particular that has common sense and special age-group appeal. It was planned for the young girls, and a consumers' jury of prep school, college, and young business girls helped to shape it. The result is a fine line styled for girls by other girls who know their wants. The products are excellent.

First of all, look at a quilted make-up box. It's made of quilted cerise taffeta, with a washable lining in shell pink. This is the kind of thing the young girl loves for her dressing table, and after its delectable contents are exhausted it will serve as a handkerchief or jewelry box. In it are the following items for beautification, all of them created especially for the youthful, healthy skin: Cleansing cream, skin freshener, a light make-up base, lipstick, face powder, mascara, eyebrow pencil, and perfume. It's quite an assemblage of good cosmetics in which she will wallow delightedly. The price: $8.75 plus tax.

Another is what's known as a "glamor kit," ideal for the college girl. If she has dry skin, she will want the No. 1 kit, which contains cleansing cream, a cream lotion for softening, the make-up, face powder, and lipstick. If she's one of the oily skinned, your choice should be the No. 2 kit, which leaves out the lubricating lotion and substitutes buttermilk soap and a complexion mitt. This one also contains a deodorant. The kits are boxes in soft blue trimmed in white and a touch of cerise. The price is $3.50 plus tax.

Still a third gift, priced at $3, is a basic beauty kit, ideal for the adolescent girl. This contains a friction cleanser, with terry cloth mitt for the stimulating scrubbing operation, buttermilk soap, cleansing cream, light, mild freshening lotion, and a nondrying lipstick.

All of these are charming. What's more, they're sensible gifts for the young girl.

Perfume Leaves Ring

Be careful not to pack perfume in the same valise with clothes as it may spill. It will leave an unsightly ring.

FLASH! Complexions Can Now Be Bleached Into Younger Looking, More Radiant Beauty by Mercolized Wax Cream

THE thin outer layer of skin called the scarf skin has less blood nourishment and circulation. It is the oldest of skin layers, and becomes dull, drab, harshened, freckled and browned by wind, soot-laden air and sun. It thus covers up the natural baby-pink skin beauty underneath. But the lovely bleaching action of MERCOLIZED WAX CREAM on this skin surface is a delightful surprise. New skin beauty results with a soft glowing freshness and radiance that can be the envy of everyone. Thousands of women have used MERCOLIZED WAX CREAM for years. Thousands of others will THRILL at discovering what it may do for them. Use only as directed.

PHELACTINE DEPILATORY—REMOVES FACIAL HAIR. Here is a clean, easy way to take ugly superfluous hair off the face in a few minutes. It extracts a portion of hair embedded under the skin along with the surface hair. Not a cream or powder. Has no unpleasant odor. Clear your face of superfluous hair with Phelactine Depilatory.

OILY SKIN—Helped by SAXOLITE ASTRINGENT—It is easy to help oily skin look fresher and better with the invaluable aid of Saxolite Astringent. Just dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and pat it on the skin several times a day. It subdues excess surface oil, tightens skin surface by temporary contraction, and leaves the skin feeling delightfully refreshed.

Troops Still Have 1st Call on Railroads

By Philip Hampson

If you plan to use a train to get to the scene of a winter vacation this year choose a locality which does not lie in a zone of heavy military travel. Hundreds of thousands of American soldiers and sailors will be coming back from the Japanese and European areas during the next few months and they will have first call on railroad facilities.

California and other winter resort areas in the west will be especially affected by the military situation. Troop movement from across the Pacific will continue heavy, it is expected, until June. After the soldiers and sailors land at the Pacific ports they must be transported inland to military centers for discharge.

All this means that altho it will be possible to get to California, it will be difficult at the best. And the same goes for the Arizona, New Mexico, and other western resort regions.

The outlook for Florida and other southern areas appears to be somewhat brighter. Altho military travel will continue heavy, the peak has passed and many civilians will find it not too difficult to bask in the sun along Florida's shores.

Service to Florida will be expanded by the inclusion of coördinated service by the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, Illinois Central, and Pennsylvania of the coördinated operation which they started before the war to give Pullman patrons a ride almost as fast as that of the all-coach streamliners. These trains are the Dixieland, Sun Chaser, and theh Jacksonian. One will depart daily by one of the individual roads in the coördinated operation. The popular streamliners continue to run with heavy loads, but the railroads expect a few winter vacationists can be crowded on when the time comes.

The gulf coast along Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida is attracting increasing numbers of winter vacationists. Via the direct north-south routes it may not be so difficult to get to a pleasant spot far distant from northern wintery blasts. An enormous amount of building has taken place in the area of Panama City, northern Florida, along the gulf. Many of the cottages and small residences have been occupied by military personnel who are now being discharged from service and so will be available for winter vacationists.

There will be many persons who will enjoy a visit with friends in the east. The eastern railroads report that they expect a decline in military travel after the first of the year, so there will be more room on the trains for civilians. Hotel accommodations in New York continue scarce.

It probably will not be too difficult for winter sports enthusiasts to get to destinations in Michigan and Wisconsin, tho the railroads do not have an excess of equipment on their hands. The railroads serving these areas are not carrying on any special promotion to attract customers this year, but persons hardy enough to brave ski jumps and toboggan runs will not find it hard to get on the trains.

By next summer railroad travel once again should be opening up for every one who wants to travel. The end of gasoline rationing already has relieved the railroads of a considerable burden and the effects will be felt more by next spring.

Meantime, almost all the railroads are planning new trains with new luxuries to make every one want to travel by train. As an example the Burlington and associated railroads have ordered new streamliners to link Chicago with San Francisco. The famed Empire Builder to the Pacific northwest will be streamlined.

The Pennsylvania, the Santa Fe, the Illinois Central, and other lines are planning new equipment.

A treat for vacationists of future months are the dome cars of the type developed by the Burlington and General Motors corporations. They will offer a new ride thrill and will make it a lot easier to see the country.

IN MIAMI SUNSHINE

Lee Poulin and Eula Packer, students at the Miami School of Modeling, sun themselves beside a palm tree on one of Miami's famed beaches.

"Sun Lady" Buried at Hendersonville, N. C.

At Hendersonville, N. C., is buried the "sun lady" who requested that the sun be allowed to shine forever on her face thru a glass aperture in her mausoleum. The grave attracted so many curiosity seekers that it was sealed over a few years ago.

Biloxi's Lore, Climate Lure Vacationists

By Mildred Peterson

BILOXI, Miss.—[Special]—"Well, what do you know!" exclaimed an amazed Chicagoan, "Here's a large resort area on the Gulf of Mexico, just overnight from home, where there are plenty of hotel rooms." Since Labor day, conditions have calmed down quite a bit and the hotels here have plenty of rooms available for vacationists, especially during the middle of the week. It is still necessary to make advance reservations for week-ends, however.

Quite a few conventions have been meeting in Biloxi since space is available and recently the popular Buena Vista hotel, greatly frequented by Chicagoans, was headquarters for the Alabama Farm Bureau's convention, with 1,000 in attendance. Hotel managers of this area report that many reservations are coming in for rooms for the Sugar bowl game on New Year's day and during the Mardi Gras season in New Orleans, where hotel accommodations are at a premium, since visitors can drive to New Orleans from Biloxi for the day. Mardi Gras day is March 5, the first celebration since the war.

While Keesler field, located on the outskirts of Biloxi, has been declared a permanent base, it has dwindled somewhat from its huge war proportions and so the various hotels here—among them the Buena Vista, White House, Gulf Hills, Tivoli, Edgewater Gulf, and Broadwater Beach—are not so crowded with service personnel and their families, as was the case last year at this time.

Founded in 1699 as the capital of the French province in the new world, this interesting city, which is washed by the tide waters of the Gulf of Mexico at its front door and the tranquil waters of the Bay of Biloxi at its back door, is replete with attractions and rich in legend and romance.

Whether it be the challenge of the deep sea or the lure of the inshore quest of the finny tribe, the lover of either salt or fresh water fishing finds his efforts rewarded here and at the numerous neighboring resort areas of Ocean Springs, Pascagoula, Moss Point, Gulfport, Long Beach, Pass Christian, and Bay St. Louis. Boating is another year 'round sport, as is golf.

Biloxi, with its delicious seafoods, beautiful beach drives, scenic seawall, winding shoreline, moss-bearded oaks, towering pines, spreading magnolias, semi-tropical plants, shrubbery, and flowers and an ever-changing panorama of sky and sea, provides rest, relaxation, recreation, and romance to the person in need of a vacation.

A 40 mile seawall parallels the coast-to-coast highway, which unites the seven Mississippi gulf coast cities, nestled by a seashore protected by seven outlying islands in a land where seven flags have flown.

Legends and shrines in this vicinity are the reminders of those who contributed to its colorful background. Flags of France, England, Spain, the United States, Confederate States, Magnolia State, and Mississippi State have flown over it. Ghosts of Indians, pirates, soldiers, explorers, courageous women and statesmen stalk thru its pages of fascinating, colorful history.

When d'Ibenville and his French colonists arrived in 1699 they found a forested wilderness ruled by Biloxi Indians with whom they made friends. Gold laden ships from Mexico and supplies bound for the gulf ports attracted many pirates to the region. Cat Island, near-by, was a noted rendezvous for the cutthroats and a worry to successive governors till after the war of 1812. At Waveland Beach is a house that once had an underground passage for unloading booty. In fact, every locality hereabout has its whispered buried treasure yarns.

Historic sites about Biloxi include beautiful Beauvoir, where Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, spent his last years; the still in use Church of the Redeemer, where Davis worshipped and where his pew is draped; the Spanish house built in 1790 and sole remaining relic of the Spanish rule of the city; the handbuilt Gautier house, erected in 1856; the old Lighthouse, still used, which was tended for many years by women; and the former home of the lighthouse keeper, which is now headquarters for the chamber of commerce.

Within easy reach of Biloxi are fascinating New Orleans, with its famous French quarter; the 100 acre Bellingrath Gardens called the "charm spot of the deep South"; old Mobile with its historic sites; monumental Vicksburg; and ante bellum Natchez, known for its old homes.

Industries of the coastal area include fishing and canning of seafoods [especially shrimps and oysters], ship building, lumbering and the production of naval stores. Biloxi claims to be the "seafoods canning capital of the nation," canning half the nation's pack.

BERMUDA — BERMUDA — BERMUDA — BERMUDA

Bermuda welcomes you once more!

BERMUDA—released from war tasks—once again turns a welcoming face to the tourist. The breath-taking beauty of that little cluster of coral islands is still as sharp and shining as ever—its magic as strong and compelling.

With the lifting of wartime restrictions, passports and immigration permits are no longer required. Transportation is available. A total of seven weekly planes leaves from New York and Baltimore, and surface ships sail from Manhattan on regular schedules.

But even a pocket-size paradise has a reconversion problem to face. Although there are facilities for accommodating a few visitors now—immediately—we cannot yet receive as many as we wish at this time. Our hotels and guest houses must again be made ready to offer you that familiar—and superb—Bermuda hospitality.

So if you do come to Bermuda soon—take these few simple precautions to assure a fully enjoyable visit. Have your travel agent make hotel reservations for you in advance, and have confirmation of those reservations at hand. Be certain to have him engage a round-trip passage with definite return reservation before you leave for the Islands.

You will find the same Bermuda—even lovelier than you recall it—even more perfect than you have dreamed.

Here's Picture of 1946 Trend in Auto Travel

By Bert Vanderwarf
Manager Travel Bureau, Chicago Motor Club

America today is travel conscious. The coming year will see the start of a resurgence of travel in this country such as we have never before experienced. And, as was true before the return of peace, the vast majority of vacationists will travel in the family automobile.

This is the picture that has been unfolding practically every minute since V-J day and its accompanying relaxation of gasoline restrictions. Only a pre-war rate of flow of new automobiles from assembly lines and an end to tire rationing remains to see the fulfillment of these expectations.

Never before in the history of the travel bureau of the Chicago Motor club has there been such a demand for travel information. The motoring public, who for more than three years were unable to take to highways because of the war, are merely waiting for the "green light" to get them out on the highways.

Where are they planning to drive? The answer is literally everywhere, far and near. There will be the usual so-called short trips, stays of a week or two in nearby Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Minnesota, but, unlike pre-war days, long trips will be the rule rather than the exception.

Chicago area motorists are going to drive to recreation spots they have been dreaming about for years, even before the coming of the war. They're going to visit national parks far and near, they're going west, north, and south. When next summer rolls around many of them will have been unable to wait for new cars and tires; well, if it is at all possible, they're going to travel on what they've got. They are that anxious to get started.

Before the war more than 85 per cent of the recreational travel of this country moved by automobile. Today there is every indication that this figure may be increased, despite greatly improved railroad service and accommodations and growing popularity of travel by air.

As always, flexibility of movement of the automobile and the personalized transportation which it affords will keep this means of travel in the foreground. Added to these attractions of the motor car will be the improvements in automobiles as to speed, safety, economic operation, and beauty of design. Cars will be air conditioned for summer as they are now heated for winter. Cars will be lighter and roomier, making it possible to carry more luggage without removing any of the comfort.

Another reason favoring the automobile will be a national system of ultra-modern, multilane highways that will link all major cities and resort areas. Plans are already in progress under which the federal government, together with the states, will embark upon a highway construction program that will surpass anything yet built.

From 1920 to 1941 nearly 150 million miles of highways were surfaced and nearly 40 billion dollars were expended for this construction, but unfortunately in spite of that we still have 80 mile an hour cars and 40 mile an hour roads. Proposed new multilane highways will permit speed of 100 miles an hour.

Available figures picture the tremendous size of anticipated automobile travel. Despite war time restrictions on the use of motor cars, Americans in 1943 traveled 280 billion miles in pleasure cars. This compares with an all-time high of 301 billion passenger miles traveled in private automobiles in 1941.

The number of visitors to national parks and their areas administered by the national park system in 1940 reached the record breaking total of 16,734,151. This means that one out of every eight men, women, and children in the country found opportunity to visit Uncle Sam's great playgrounds and national shrines.

It is more than probable that these figures will be exceeded during 1946 and surely by 1947.

The most significant trend, prior to Pearl Harbor, was the increasing tendency of the average motorist to get off the beaten path and to seek new lanes of travel and adventure. For many years the stream of travel had followed the good roads, but more recently, while there was the same interest in road conditions, motorists in many cases would go out of the way in order to avoid undue congestion and heavy traffic.

While indications are that this same situation will prevail in the coming year, it probably will be to a lesser extent because of highway improvements.

Patronage Sets All-Time Record at Hot Springs

Hot Springs, Ark. [Special]—This internationally famous spa with its 47 natural hot springs, government owned since 1832, attracted 14 per cent more persons last year than the previous year for an all time high patronage, despite the fact that four of the resort's largest hotels were occupied by the army.

This big parade of almost a half million civilian health seekers came from every state in the union and 12 foreign countries. Over 25,736 came from Illinois. The four hotels released by the army are undergoing extensive reconditioning and redecoration and plan to be open to civilian patronage soon. Hotel managers report exceedingly heavy advance reservations for the winter season.

Miami Ready for Influx of Winter Guests

Miami, Fla. [Special]—The transition of Miami, one of the world's most fabulous playgrounds, from its war time pursuits back to normalcy has progressed rapidly and indications are that this winter will be the most spectacular in its history, both from the standpoint of numbers of visitors and scheduled events for their pleasure.

During the war years Miami was transformed, almost overnight, into an important naval training center, which meant turning over most of its larger hotels to the navy for housing of its thousands of personnel. Travel restrictions prevented the usual influx of pleasure-seeking visitors.

Now the navy has promised to release all the hotels it had occupied "not later than Christmas." Some of them already are back in operation after a period of reconversion from barracks to the lush comfort they offered in the past.

Even now Miami is more crowded than ever before at this early date in the so-called "winter season," and the availability of the hotels and few apartments, previously occupied by the navy, has provided only a small percentage of the room which would be necessary to accommodate the thousands who are planning their vacations.

Miami wants every one who possibly can to come down this winter, and invitations are going forward to Latin American countries. But the fact remains that there is a limited amount of available living quarters and prospective visitors should, by all means, make their reservations in advance, obtain them in writing and bring them with them when they come.

In former years the season never really got under way until some time in December, but this year it actually started back in September. One dog racing track in the area opened on Sept. 22. This is indicative of the trend toward Miami becoming even more popular as a year-round resort.

The first of the so-called seasonal events was the Miami $10,000 Open golf tournament, just completed, which drew the largest field of players and the most spectators in history. Gulfstream Park's horse racing season began Dec. 1 with indications of a bumper season. The Orange bowl football classic was a sellout months in advance of New Year's day. The Miami All-American Air Maneuvers, resumed this season for the first time since the war, will be a great success, judging from advance inquiries and reservations. This will be marked by a large scale commercial exhibit by manufacturers of airplanes and accessories, and will afford an opportunity for visitors from Latin America to see some of the innovations in the flying business.

Orlando, Fla., in Center of Citrus Empire

Orlando, Fla. [Special]—This southern resort city is maintaining its nation-wide reputation as the city beautiful.

Located in the geographical center of the state, on a plateau midway between the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic ocean, the city also is in the middle of the citrus empire. Within a perimeter of 75 miles are the thousands of acres of groves which annually produce approximately 86 million boxes of oranges, grapefruit and tangerines.

Within that same trading area are the picturesque ranches of the Florida cattle industry whose magnitude vies with the production of any single state of the west. Then there are the miles of vegetable gardens that each year furnish the winter vegetables for the tables of the north—an 80 million dollar a year industry in itself.

As the trade center of this ever-widening agricultural and horticultural empire, it isn't surprising that Orlando has enjoyed a growth in population from 36,736 in the federal census of 1940 to over 50,000 in the state census of 1945, just completed.

This year finds Orlando enjoying the fruits of victory in its five-year campaign to secure a gulf-to-ocean superhighway that runs thru the heart of the city. The highway begins at Brooksville, Fla., close to the gulf and terminates at Titusville and Cocoa on the Atlantic coast.

Orlando's wide streets, towering trees, profusion of colorful flowering shrubs, its 32 picturesque lakes and huge, comfortable rambling winter resort hotels all retain the attractiveness that has made Orlando the mecca of from 30,000 to 40,000 winter visitors annually.

Orange av., the city's main street from north to south, carries the visitor to most of the city's business interests. Both Main st. and Orange av. extend south to Lake Lucerne, one of the city's beauty spots, surrounded by magnolia and palm trees.

Just east of Main st. on South st. near Lake Lucerne is the spot where Orlando Reeves lost his life in a skirmish with the Indians. It was Orlando Reeves who gave the city its name. There was a running fight between the Indians and the whites, and a small company of white men took refuge in an oak thicket near what is now the heart of the city. Orlando Reeves was in charge of the squad, and as he stepped out from behind the trees which had concealed him he was struck by a poisoned arrow. He was buried beneath the tree under which he fell.

Thousands of winter visitors join the All-States club or clubs from individual states and take part in community programs supervised by the Greater Orlando Chamber of Commerce. There are weekly concerts at the City Auditorium in Sunshine park, card parties, community sings and such sports as lawn bowling, horseshoe pitching, shuffleboard, roque, bowling and tennis.

The Orlando Country club and the Dubsdread Golf club provide ample accommodations for golf. Fishing, hunting, boating and bathing, as well as the winter season of greyhound racing, contribute to the additional recreational diversions that await the winter visitor.

The beautiful grounds of Rollins college at nearby Winter Park, and the Mead Botanical Gardens, as well as San Lando Springs, are places of interest that annually attract thousands of visitors who admire horticultural beauty.

MEXICAN SCENE

The glazed tiles in the bell tower of the little church at Santa Maria Tonanzintla, in the state of Puebla, blaze in the Mexican sun.

World's Biggest Sponge Mart in Tarpon Springs

Tarpon Springs, Fla. [Special]—Preparing for the greatest tourist season in its history, this resort city, located 34 miles north of St. Petersburg, has prepared a well rounded recreation program for winter visitors.

Possessing 23 miles of water front within its city limits, Tarpon Springs will be a mecca for anglers. Both fresh and salt water fishing can be enjoyed within a few minute's drive or walk.

Known as the "Venice of the South," Tarpon Springs is one of the scenically beautiful towns on Florida's west coast. The world's largest market is located here where thousands of annual visitors view the picturesque fleet of fishing boats. Of interest to connoisseurs of art are the religious paintings by the late George Inness Jr., which are on exhibition at the Church of the Good Shepherd.

In Five Years— 24,372 New Residents

Since 1940, in spite of war conditions, St. Petersburg has added 24,372 new citizens...people from all ports of America who have come here to make their home. This is an increase of 42% in five years...a growth characteristic of this dynamic community.

During these war years, practically no new building has been permitted. Hence, at the present time we have a shortage of certain types of accommodations, particularly in furnished homes and apartments. Builders are now busy all over the city and we are sure that by another season many of the present housing shortages will be filled.

In the meanwhile St. Petersburg has hotel rooms and rooms in private and guest homes available. We will do our best to take care of all our friends who come here this winter. We have planned many things for your recreation and entertainment, and you will find here the same hospitality as in former years.
